Welcome to the University Libraries
The University at Albany has three libraries.

The University Library and the Science Library are located on the uptown campus.

The Dewey Graduate Library is located on the downtown campus.

Each library has unique spaces, materials and services.
The University Library is located on the West side of the academic podium on the uptown campus.
The University Library

• Located on the uptown campus.
• The largest library on the UAlbany campus.
• Known as the “main library.”
• Has a collection that includes resources on social sciences, humanities and business.
The Science Library is located behind the campus center on the uptown campus.
The Science Library

• Located on the uptown campus.
• The newest library on the UAlbany campus.
• Not just for Science majors – anyone can use it!
• Has 20 group study rooms.
• Has a collection that includes resources on the natural sciences (biology, chemistry, physics).
The Dewey Graduate Library is located in Hawley Hall on the downtown campus.
The Dewey Graduate Library

- Located on the downtown campus.
- The oldest library on campus (The original stained glass windows are over 100 years old).
- Has a collection that includes resources on social work, information studies, public administration and criminal justice.
As a UAlbany student, you can use the spaces, materials and services at all three libraries.
Library Spaces

Each library has three noise zones. Look for the color-coded signs to find your preferred zone in the library.

#UAlbanyLibsZone
Collaborative zones are green.

In these areas you can:

- Work on group projects.
- Talk in normal tones.
- Use headphones with devices.
Collaborative zones in the libraries include:

• The entire lower level of the Science Library.

• The President’s Reading Room on the 2nd floor of the University Library.

• The Information Commons on the 1st floor of the University Library.
Quiet zones are yellow.

In these areas you can:

- Talk quietly.
- Set your mobile devices to vibrate.
Quiet zones in the libraries include:

- The Current Periodicals Reading Room in the University Library.
- Most of the 2nd floor of the University Library.
- The Information Commons on the 1st floor of the Science Library.
Silent zones are red.

In these areas you can:

- Study in silence.
- Conversation is not permitted.
- Make sure to mute your mobile devices.
Silent zones in the libraries include:

- The entire 3rd floor of the University Library.
- The Current Periodicals Reading Room in the Science Library.
Materials

The Libraries have many different materials that you may use, including:

- Books,
- CDs and DVDs,
- Magazines,
- Newspapers,
- Journal Articles.
You can find library materials in print and electronically.

Finding Books for Your Research
Other Things You Can Borrow

- From the IMC: headphones, cameras, video/audio recording equipment.
- From the Circulation Desk: laptops, Kindles, USB drives.
Special Collections & Archives

These are materials that are unique to the University at Albany Libraries.

The Special Collections and Archives include:

• University history dating back to 1844
  • State and local history collections
  • Rare books dating back to the early 1500s
    • Historical children’s literature
    • New York State Political archive
  • Photos, audio and video

The Special Collections and Archives are located on the 3rd floor of the Science Library.

To use these materials, visit the Research Room, open 9:00 A.M. – 5:00 P.M. Monday – Friday. You do not need an appointment. You may also explore the digital collections on the Special Collections and Archives website.
Services

The Libraries offer many different services to help you with your academic studies. You may visit these service points in the libraries, or connect with us remotely. Click on the services below for information.

- Reference: Get research help.
- Circulation: Borrow materials.
- Information Technology Services: Get computer help.
- Innovate, Make, Create Center (IMC): Get help while working on digital projects.
- Writing Center at the University Library: Get writing help on Sunday afternoons (3-6pm) and Wednesday evenings (6-9:30pm).
Additional Services

The Libraries also offer other services that you might not expect. For example, therapy dogs visit the libraries during Finals Week to provide stress relief.
Service Points

Let’s take a closer look at some of the service points you can visit in the library.
Reference Desk

• Each of the three libraries has a reference desk.

• Visit the reference desk to get help with your research. You do not need an appointment.

• Click on the Ask Us! Button to connect with a librarian virtually.
Reference Desk (Cont.)

• Librarians at the reference desk can help you:
  • Search the library catalog and the research databases.
  • Find a book on the shelf.
  • Identify the best resources on a topic.
  • Cite your resources.
Reference Desk: More Help

For additional help, make a one-on-one PAWS appointment with a subject librarian.
Circulation Desk

• Each of the three libraries has a circulation desk.

• If you would like to borrow a book, bring it to the circulation desk. Show your student ID to check out an item.

• You may also stop at this desk to ask about items on reserve, laptops, and group study rooms.
Information Technology Services (ITS)

IT assistants sit at the Circulation Desks and the Reference Desks. Ask IT assistants about computer issues, wireless Internet connections, and software.
The IMC is located in the basement of the University Library. In the IMC you can:

- Use audio/video and web design applications.
- Get help with media projects.
- Use the scanners.
- Use the video chat and audio recording rooms.
You may also:

- Borrow equipment such as camcorders, audio recorders, microphones and projectors.
- Take an iLearn workshop to learn about Adobe applications, web design and research strategies.
