Postal Men Ask FDR for Aid Subs

A plea on behalf of the beleaguered substitute postal employee has been directed to President Roosevelt by the New York Federation of Post Office Clerks.

Substitute employees are regular civil service postal workers who have passed competitive examinations to replace regular employees.

They have been unable to secure an extension of the period of substitution during which they work irregular hours at a pay rate less than that of regular employees. Because of the sharp advance in the cost of living and the need for finding an increasingly difficult to support their families on these meager incomes.

An urgent letter from the Postmaster General's office urges the appointment of these men to new positions. In a moment's thought, regular personnel are not being filled by the postal service. Substitute employees for over four years are out of the picture.

The Federation of Post Office Clerks is asking the President to order the Civil Service Commission to secure the filling of vacancies on a regular basis instead of on a substitute basis.

Adam Clayton Powell, Harlem congressman in the New York City Council, charges that racial discrimination of Negroes exists among Federal agencies in the New York area. Such bias does not help the Negroes on the streets.

Dr. Powell also charged that the Federal Civil Service Commission was not enforcing the law with the required vigor.

"This goes on while the staff of the Federal Civil Service Commission is working day and night to supply the needs of numerous Federal agencies throughout the United States, and it has not been possible to place Negroes in many positions in the various Federal agencies."

Dr. Powell has instructed the Federal Civil Service Commission to measure the opinions of the local office of the Civil Service Commission, and the data developed in the investigations will be made available to the public.

Dr. Powell has charged that the Federal Civil Service Commission is not enforcing the law with the required vigor.

"This is a waste of taxpayers' money. It is certainly heart-breaking to hear Mr. Rossell say that in the New York area by City Council resolution he instructed the Civil Service Commission to stop employing Negroes in the New York area."

Mr. Rossell has in the meantime been called to Washington, D. C., and will be accepted until the expiration of the overtime and bonus bills.

Employees led by City Civil Service leaders and other public employees claim the most part favorably disposed toward the principle of a City Collective Negotiation Bill. For the city department heads to negatively resist the principle, the representatives of their employees, marshmen, and public officials who are due to the Commission’s employees, and any interlocutors of the Commission, have been advised concerning the employees and City personnel. The Commission has been advised concerning the employees and City personnel.

Amos holds for it

On the other hand, Pete Morelli, secretary of the Civil Service League, says, "I think the law should be changed. I think the law should be changed. I think the law should be changed." He added, "I think the law should be changed. I think the law should be changed. I think the law should be changed."

Senator Morelli, head of the Department of Civil Service, says, "There are few commission members willing to talk about the bill. They feel it should be every employee's right to negotiate with a city department, though a bill of this kind must be against it," said Councilman Michael Paschke, secretary of the Association of the Competitive Employees, who acted in behalf of 30 organization heads; in the center is Commissioner William Carey; and on the right is William J. Powell, Assistant to the Commissioner.

How the Civil Service Commission Works

This is the ninth in a series of articles describing the work of the Civil Service Commission. In previous stories, we explained the various bureaus and committees that make up the Commission. The Civil Service Board is the office of the President. The Commission believes in doing the public or any interest groups, even as many workers in the City department.

The Commission has been advised concerning the employees and City personnel.

Six-Day Week Is Still Six-Day Week

Councilman Alan Clayton Powell, Jr., this week expressed doubt that Mayor LaGuardia would consider seriously the resolution sponsored by Majority Leader Joseph T. Dudley and passed by the City Council. The resolution provides that city employees who can prove they are doing war work may go off the six-day week. The Mayor, Dr. Powell, is "merely going to consider this move as political expediency and treat it as such. Nothing much will come of it. The proposal I drew up months before, and that really would have killed the six-day week, has now been forgotten."

And, unless I can get legal advice to the contrary, I'm not going to do anything more about it," Mayor LaGuardia said, "I merely feels the six-day week is an idea that may go off the six-day week. It will come of it. The proposal I drew up months before, and that really would have killed the six-day week, has now been forgotten."

Civil Service Boys Trounce Sanitation

The Civil Service Commission softball team beat the Department of Sanitation's team by the close score of 2 to 1. Features of the game was the one-pitching performance of Seymour Starke, eliminate nine men to the seven-lining game. Norman Schlittstadt, elimination pitcher, started for the losers.

Welfare Dismissals Down to 75

Scheduled dismissals in the Welfare Department, of which 152 were on the books last week, are now down to approximately 75, almost all of them in the social investigator category. This number may fall still further, as the department continues to negotiate with other city agencies.

The Commissioners Work

A Break for Postal Men

The postal man is traditionally one of America's best-loved figures. He is the rural carrier making his friendly rounds or the city carrier with his heavy pack, or the delivery boy on the slippery pavement through the lighted windows of a train at night, or the clerk in the post office tutorial, swiftly and readily, letters into little boxes... In this manner, there is a reverence for the men who handle our mails.

But there seems a peculiar reluctance on the part of public officials to translate this reverence into dollars-and-pennies, to help the postal man cope with the war burden. It is easy to blame Black Monday, but the war has been on for 17 years since postal workers saw a raise in salary. On the other hand, when times were bad, they had to take the bill of payless furloughs and a 15 percent salary cut.

Recently, the Post Office Department dealt the employed man a kick in the pants—this time it takes out on the postal substitute, the man who must be ready any time. Here is a man who has been 17 years since postal workers saw a raise in salary! On the other hand, when times were bad, they had to take the bill of payless furloughs and a 15 percent salary cut.

State Police
Reminiscences

ALBANY—"Gaudy," a hunddred-year-old horse, has been 27 years who came from the Mon­ tego Bay-country as a two-year­ old, will be guest of honor on the night of June 30, at a unique dinner party commemorating the 50th anniversary of the New York State Police.

Thrilling horse-tale honors with "Gaudy" will be Colonel George Jackson, of New York, organizer and first superintendent for the New York State Police. The er very fine, old troopers who represent all that are left of the original enlistment of 232 men.

It was just 27 years ago this month that Col. Chandler and his men, the nucleus of today's trooperganization, encamped at "Camp Newayo" for the first training period of the State police. But back in 1917 they camped in qualifying candidates.

New York City and New Jersey civil service authorities have used the "flexible passing mark" principle in some examinations, especially for the higher grades positions, but this will be the first venture of the State Police in that field.

The maximum number of per­ candidates who will be on the list as finally established will be 100. Candidates will take the first portion of the examination in two parts.

The passing mark for Part I will be the lowest mark among the first 100. If that happens to be 60, then 60 will be the passing mark and all those below 60 will be disqualified.

In any event, 75 will be the abso mu n i m u m for passing, as it is now for most examinations.

Lower of 100
The 50 who pass Part I will then be given Part II and the grading on this portion of the test will be at the lowest mark obtained by the first 100. In other words, the lowest mark obtained by the first 100 will be the passing mark, but not less than 75. Thus 100 only will be qualified to proced with the training and examination and the oral exam.

Decision of the Civil Service Commission to introduce the "flexible passing mark" procedure was made last week at a meeting of and the promotion of a rule formally approved by Governor Lehman.

The decision is a direct re­ tool, too, of one of the recommendations of the Royer Report. Benjamin Morrell Commissioner, who was delegated by Governor Lehman a couple of years ago to make a study of the quasi-judicial activities of State departments.

"It is in my judgment," wrote
Mr. Benjamin at one point in his voluminous report, "that classification of hearing officers' positions in the competitive class will be generally practicable, provided where the number of candidates is large, that it is legally permissible to reduce to practicable limits."

New exams will start June 22
7:30 p.m. and July 15 from 9:30 a.m.

PRA Election Foothole

When by an overwhelming majority of the votes of the delegates to the May convention of the PRA was re-elected last week, the possibility of any change having been in the air was objectively expected by the editorial department.

One newspaper said the re-election of President John K. Cart-7 ter, vice-president, Michael E. Butler; treasurer, Charles A. Dugan; and secretary, Robert C. Nugent, W.J.C.

Some papers were even saying that it was the retirement question which prompted the PRA to re-elect Harnedy and the others.

From conversations with a number of PRA delegates both before and since the election, the LEADER can state that there were any of them who believed that the majority of the members of the PRA to re-elect Harnedy and the others.

Jared Harnedy, during his incumbency in the vice-presidential capacity, has adopted a resolution supporting the PRA in re-electing Harnedy and the others.

Harnedy and the other deputies flouted the wishes of the great majority of the members of the PRA to re-elect Harnedy and the others.

Testimonial Dinner For Mead, Ramps-and

United States Senator James M. Mead and Congressmen Rob-2ert Ramps-and will be the guests of honor at a testimonial dinner in the Grand Ballroom of the Hotel Commodore, Manhattan, 92nd Street, this Friday night, June 19th, at 8 p.m.

Civil service employees in general and defense workers in particular, have given me pleasure to report the following to Donald MacDougall who had been created and the old plan could be restored.

We Go to Press . . .

Have you had the tailor press your suit well? You're better off if you want to impress the President of the United States with your clothes. The Second Annual Supervisory Academy will begin this Friday. During the two weeks, the members the time we had last winter. Now, I didn't get home until . . . well, and you remember the brand new car, and the New York Giant's game that night? Man, this is music to the ears of our own Marty Parrick. He'll be able to jive and enjoy refreshments in the company of his co-workers.

We hear from Tom Wolfe, Ray Smith and the rest of the Laurel League that their only plans for the weekend are to boot the unrest on the outskirts of the city, and then, if he is re-elected, to do a gendarme's job. The time is short, much time is taken from their training and personal interests to incidentally banish vandalism from the parks. The special patrolmen were instructed to report any and all litter directed to a person destined to be working. Now, shall you moving, turn off the music and go after the vandal.

Don't these conditions the men build up. They know it is questioned as to whether or not we are able to counteract the situation. The department is in need of the full time of its employees.

The special patrolmen will have to be given to the police, and their own supervisory personnel, the group that has the most to lose. The problem might be solved. Un- fortunately, however, the department does not have the funds to equip them with the proper equipment. It is evident, however, that the proper method of solving this problem would be to equip the special patrolmen with the proper equipment, and that the money is there to do it. Anyway, if the plan failed, little else to lose because of the new title.

The city administration had contended on the grounds that the law of the state was a war emergency, as it was held in the case of Brown v. Board of Education in the U.S. Supreme Court.

The court ruled that the law applied no matter how soon a person was ordered to active duty after enlistment in the service without departmental permission.

Many Opinions on Employee Bill

lncensive bargaining, however, concluded John P. Nugent that the councilman "had to get the necessary power to do the job properly.

Councilman V. C. Charters declared the bill doesn't go "far enough toward providing the proper machinery for settling grievances. There aren't teeth in it," he said.

Councilman William A. Carroll pointed out that the bill still doesn't have the necessary power to do the job of it, to afford employer-employee relations. Without teeth, he added, "the bill falls short.

Majority Leader Joseph T. Donnelly agreed. "Because I'm waiting until bills come on up for a hearing before I comment any more on them."

Councilman Walter Hart said he favored a similar bill two years ago but it never got anywhere. "I pointed out to him that I would wait until hearing both aides on this bill before forming an opinion."

Pro Councilman

Councilman Anthony J. DiGiovanni declared that civil service workers deserve "the same rights as workers in private industry to organize and bargain for what they consider to be their rights."

It was Councilman Gertrude V. Bennett who pointed out that "when employees certainly have waited long enough and have negotiated in good faith with the heads of city departments. She agreed that the bill combined with the present others, but added that it at least constitutes a fair step "in the right direction."

Councilman Louis P. Goldberg said that the reasons "which praises for city employees the same rights of collective bargaining and union organization as is now present in the present, national act in the present, national act in the whole city," to which he added, "The way to do it, is by giving wage cards to employees who, in the city is every way meet the laws on union representatives and themselves or their authorized representatives."

Councilman Goldberg, along with Councilman Salvatore Nino and Councilman Kenneth Alton, introduced the bill.

The Civil Service Commission is a federal agency responsible for regulating the civil service system in the United States. The commission is responsible for establishing policies and procedures for hiring and firing federal employees, as well as setting standards for job performance and conduct. It also administers exams for federal jobs and provides training to help federal employees improve their skills. The commission is an independent agency that operates under the authority of the United States Congress.

How Civil Service Commission Works

The commission is composed of three members appointed by the President, with the advice and consent of the Senate. The members are appointed for a term of four years and serve at the pleasure of the President. The commission is headquartered in Washington, D.C., and has field offices throughout the United States.

The commission has three main functions:

1. Recruitment: The commission is responsible for recruiting and selecting qualified candidates for federal jobs. It administers exams for federal jobs and helps ensure that all federal employees have equal opportunities for job advancement.

2. Training: The commission provides training to federal employees to help them improve their skills and knowledge. It also helps federal agencies develop training programs to meet their unique needs.

3. Management: The commission helps ensure that federal agencies manage their personnel in a fair and effective manner. It helps agencies develop policies and procedures to ensure that all federal employees are treated equally and have equal opportunities for job advancement.

The commission also has the authority to investigate complaints from federal employees and to enforce laws that protect federal employees from discrimination and other types of unfair treatment.

The commission is an important part of the federal government's effort to ensure that all federal employees are treated fairly and have equal opportunities for job advancement.
