Comptroller sues over pension raid

ALBANY — State Comptroller H. Carl McCall has gone to court to protect the fund designed to supplement public employee pensions.

CSEA Retiree Executive Committee Chair Charles Peritore is one of several public employee retirees who joined McCall in the lawsuit.

“The state has been trying to get their hands on this money for months,” McCall said. “But it’s not their money. It belongs to the retirees, and I’m going to get it back for them.”

The money in question is a special fund created specifically for pension supplementation.

In budget negotiations, Gov. Pataki and the Legislature decided to supplement the pensions of public employee retirees who retired before 1989; however, the pension supplementation fund would be used to pay $230 million in pension costs that the state and local governments owed from previous years.

Another $110 million is to be loaned to the general fund to balance the budget.

McCall condemned the move and went to court to stop it.

“The pension fund is not a slush fund to be used for budget balance,” he said.

“And I won’t let the fund be used for any purpose other than to provide benefits for the retirees and the members of the retirement system.”

The legislation allowing the use of the fund also includes a provision that delays supplementation for up to a year if a lawsuit challenging the law is successful.

“In other words, the state is raiding the pensions of retirees again, and then punishing them if anyone successfully fights off that raid,” CSEA President Danny Donohue said.

“Carl McCall is doing his job as the sole trustee of the pension fund, and he’s doing a great job!”

McCall’s lawsuit also asks that the delay in the pension supplementation be eliminated by the courts so that retirees get their supplementation in the fall, no matter what the status of the lawsuit is.

“Our retiree members deserve their pension supplements, and they deserve to have their pension fund protected,” Donohue said. “Carl Mc Call is doing the right thing.”

State Comptroller Carl McCall announces his lawsuit against the Governor for raiding the pension supplementation fund.

CSEA counts victories in laws passed

ALBANY — As the state Legislature wound up its work this summer, it left CSEA with some important victories.

One victory that helps CSEA members across the state was passage of a law that allowed many jobs, CSEA Legislative Counsel Fran Turner said.

The early retirement option was also extended to local governments and school districts which are also facing financial difficulties. The localities and school districts who choose the option are likely to reduce layoffs and cutbacks as well.

“We had concerns about the early retirement incentive, we’re confident that members who chose the option carefully are benefitting,” CSEA President Danny Donohue said.

“And we know the remaining work force is more secure as a result.”

Donohue noted that the legislative leaders were the force behind the early retirement incentive legislation.

“Senate Majority Leader Joe Bruno and Assembly Speaker Sheldon Silver pulled through for CSEA on this one,” Donohue said. “We have to thank them for their work on the early retirement incentive.”

Other important legislation that CSEA pushed through the state Legislature includes:

- a one-year extension of the law which prohibits school districts from reducing retiree health insurance premiums unless active employees have a corresponding change;
- a law which doubles the fines for speeding violations in construction work zones;
- a law increasing the amount a public retiree may earn without loss, suspension or diminution of the retirement allowance to $11.280; and
- legislation that provides for an independent hearing officer in disciplinary proceedings involving the dismissal, suspension without pay or demotion in grade or title of an employee.

Before any of the legislation passed by the Legislature becomes law, it must be signed by the Governor. The Public Sector will update this list in the September issue.

“We’ve faced some very difficult fights this year, but we’ve done a heck of a job,” CSEA President Donohue said.

“CSEA has once again proven its strength in the legislative arena.”

In union there is strength; experience Solidarity!

I'm getting a jump on my Labor Day message this year by sharing with you in August a thought on the holiday we celebrate in September.

In union there is strength.
We often describe what we do as "collective" bargaining. A simple definition of "collective" is "a number of persons working together as a unit." As individuals we are alone but as people working together we are powerful.
If you've ever been involved in informational picketing or participated in one of our political rallies, you know firsthand what I am talking about. Whether we're outside demonstrating or inside packing a political meeting, we get a tremendous rush ... a feeling of power ... a sense of destiny ... We experience solidarity.
Together, we can do it.

In union there is strength;
experience Solidarity!
The Proposed Federal Budget Will Leave Us In a Worse State.

The Congressional budget has the potential to devastate the taxpayers of New York State. If it passes, our state will lose $50 billion in Federal monies over the next seven years. That’s the biggest loss of all fifty states.

New York State loses the most in health care—more than $20 billion. Medicare cuts will force our elderly to pay $1,000 more a year in out of pocket costs.

It’s not healthy.

Student loans will cost college-bound New Yorkers $3,000 more over four years. We’ll train fewer people for real jobs, because of a $400 million loss in Vocational Education Grants. Our Special Education programs will lose $160 million and fewer of our children will get school lunches.

It’s not smart.

To cover the state’s $50 billion shortfall, local and state tax increases will hurt middle- and lower-income families. In fact, the less a family makes, the more it will cost them.

It will cost money.

The cuts mean New York State would have a higher unemployment rate for the next ten years. The jobs lost statewide could total as many as 850,000 a year, and result in a drop of $116 billion in personal income in ten years. The result: the state’s fiscal situation will deteriorate even further.

It will cost jobs.

It’s time for our elected state representatives and business leaders to help protect New York State from fiscal disaster. Join the CSEA statewide campaign against the proposed federal budget — do everything you can to stop it before it leaves us all in the worst possible state.

See pages 10-11 for stories on CSEA members working in medical facilities which will suffer under federal budget cuts.

CSEA organizes new unit in Central Region

OGDENSBURG — The employees at St. Joseph's Nursing Home were looking for a change.

They wanted a better work environment.

They wanted someone in management to listen to them.

They wanted a more secure future.

They chose CSEA.

The 75 workers voted by a more than three to one margin to have CSEA represent them as their union.

According to Richard Chevrier, acting president for the new union local, the workers were tired of being ignored and wanted a change.

"No one was listening to our voice, and we wanted our voice to be heard, so we went to CSEA," he said. "We felt it was definitely time for a change."

CSEA Organizer Geordie Pierce said the employees were being poorly treated by management and came to CSEA seeking representation.

"They had no rights — no layoff rights, no seniority rights and no grievance procedure to speak of. They were very poorly treated," Pierce said.

Chevrier agreed, and said that the workers chose CSEA because of the union's reputation.

"We were ignored. Basically what we wanted is a better workplace, a better working environment and better care for our residents," he said. "CSEA has been in the area and we've heard nothing but good things about the union. That's why we chose CSEA."

Pierce said that the new local will soon conduct elections for officers, and would then begin the negotiating process.

Union wins seniority grievance

CLARKSTOWN — The Town of Clarkstown violated its contract with CSEA when the highway superintendent disregarded overtime assignment provisions during a snow and ice storm in December 1993.

When town officials decided that overtime was necessary to keep roads safe and passable, they relied on an "availability of truck" criteria. That meant that overtime assignments were made according to which trucks were prepared to operate at that time under those conditions, instead of the standard overtime list.

Town officials argued that because many of the town vehicles were equipped for leaf pick-up and not snow removal, they had no choice but to assign drivers of trucks that were operational at that time.

Arbitrator Joel Douglas upheld CSEA's contention that the town violated the contract.

"The use of truck availability appears to be a contractual violation that must be remedied," Douglas said. "The town is instructed not to use truck availability/specific operator as an overtime criteria."

"While we realize the tremendous responsibility of keeping roads passable," Labor Relations Specialist Annette Raetz said, "we must recognize the union's responsibility to see that the contract is not violated at a highway superintendent's whim."

"Our rights stem from long hard struggles to achieve a degree of fairness in the workplace," she said, "and we can't allow management decisions to undermine our progress."

Rockland County member injured by speeding car

HAVERSTRAW — A Village of Haverstraw sanitation worker is in critical condition after being hit by a speeding driver.

Angel Rosas, a five-year employee and member of CSEA Rockland County Local 844, was on his garbage collection route when a driver failed to stop and hit him at high speed. A witness said Rosas flipped over, hit the windshield and tumbled into the street.

According to a local newspaper, the driver claimed he tried to apply his brakes, but could not stop in time.

Rosas was airlifted to Westchester County Medical Center where, as of this writing, he is being treated for broken bones and internal injuries.

"There's no such thing as a safe job," CSEA Labor Relations Specialist Annette Raetz said. "Angel is in our prayers."

CSEA members help one of their own in Ulster County

The photo above shows just some of the Ulster County Highway Department employees who donated to help burn victim Casey Curtis, son of their co-worker Herb Curtis. Casey was badly burned when a can of turpentine caught fire and ignited him. Co-workers donated nearly $1,500 out of their pockets to help the family with the expenses of travelling to Westchester County Medical Center, a distance of more than 100 miles each way from the Curtis home. Casey is home now and is recuperating from his ordeal but still requires expensive supplies not covered by insurance. Herb Curtis has been overwhelmed by the tremendous response he has received from an earlier article in The Public Sector. CSEA members from across the state have sent cards and letters offering their prayers and support to the family.

A hero laid to rest

CSEA member Anthony Brown died protecting family

UNIONDALE — Hailed as a hero and mourned by his family and co-workers, Anthony Brown was laid to rest with great respect and ceremony.

Brown, 30, was a corrections officer, a member of CSEA Nassau County Sheriffs Department Unit, a husband and the father of three.

He died while defending family and friends at a weekend celebration in June.

The tragedy began when a friend of a guest came to the party and started a fight. Brown and his brother broke up the fight and sent the man on his way.

Unfortunately, the man came back with a gun and began shooting. He shot Brown and his brother, but before he could shoot anyone else, the dying Brown got off a shot and killed his assailant.

There are those who live today because Anthony Brown did what the finest in law enforcement do,” Nassau County Executive Tom Gulotta said. “He responded to the tragedy of the moment.”

The CSEA Sheriffs Department Unit is setting up an education trust fund for Brown’s three children: Katia, 10; Aaron, 7; and Andre, 3.

Checks should be made out to Brown’s widow, Denise Brown, and sent to:

CSEA fights for school unit president fired in Depew

DEPEW — After working for the Depew School District for 22 years, many as the district’s only audio-visual technician, Larry David is out of work.

The school board eliminated his job from the budget. David also happens to be CSEA Unit president.

“They’re targeting Larry for his union work on behalf of his fellow members,” CSEA Labor Relations Specialist Mark Jurenovich said. “There has been an unusually high amount of grievances in this district, and we’re going to put together an improper practice case that shows the board’s action is because of his union activity.

Activists in the unit and fellow members from Erie Education Local 68A picketed board meetings and leafletted the district against passage of the district’s school budget. Although the budget passed, Jurenovich said CSEA will do everything in its power to win David his job back.

“We’re very sure that PERB (Public Employment Relations Board) will agree this was a vindictive action against Larry David for his union activism, and restore him to his job.”

CSEA wins flex-time grievance for Orange County Local 836 member

GOSHEN — Thanks to CSEA, Lisa DiNisco won’t lose her flex-time schedule despite Orange County’s efforts.

DiNisco, a five-year Orange County Home and Infirmary employee and member of Local 836, was given the flex time schedule in October 1992.

“All I asked for was a half hour difference,” said DiNisco, whose husband works nights. The change accommodated the needs of her children.

But in October 1994, county officials gave her two weeks to make arrangements to come to work a half hour earlier.

DiNisco filed a grievance.

“The case was settled at the hearing,” CSEA Attorney Bart Bloom said. DiNisco’s schedule was restored until 1997 when her child will go to school.

“I’m glad it worked out in our favor,” DiNisco said. “I didn’t know how much I was going to manage. It was like a great weight being lifted off me.”

Lockport unit wins contract

LOCKPORT — After nearly two years of contract talks, the City of Lockport Unit of Niagara County Local 832 took its case for fairness to the streets.

“After mounting three successful pickets of city council meetings, gathering petition signatures and maintaining our stance at the bargaining table, our unit members have voted to ratify a fair contract,” CSEA Labor Relations Specialist Lou Dal Porto said.

The new contract contains no health insurance concessions, while gaining wage increases of 3 percent, 3.75 percent and 4 percent in a four-year agreement that is retroactive to Jan. 1, 1994.

Unit President Lena Villella thanked fellow members from other units of Local 832 that helped with the unit pickets.

“It was great to see the support we received from local members, including (Local) President Dick McIntyre,” Villella said. “This is what solidarity is all about.”

Orange County is PEOPLE country!

At a recent CSEA information day in Orange County, 40 employees signed up and received a PEOPLE jacket. Shown above are Orange County CSEA Shop Steward Bill Bowen, who helped with the campaign; Erin Reilly, a certified nurses aide at the Orange County Home and Infirmary who is wearing her new jacket, and CSEA PEOPLE Coordinator Cheryl Rosenzweig.

The unit, which includes 22 members, also got an agency shop clause, an increase in sick leave accumulation from 120 to 180 days and the ability to carry over five vacation days until June 30 of the following year.

CSEA Labor Relations Specialist Pat Curtin negotiated the contract with unit members Donna Rigali and Frances Lucchese. Suzanne Welker is president of the Wantagh Library Unit.

Town of East Hampton members ratify three-year contract

EAST HAMPTON — CSEA members in the Town of East Hampton recently ratified a three-year pact containing retroactive to January 1995 increases of 2 percent (with a guarantee the increase will equal $500 or more), 3 percent January, 1996 and 3 percent January, 1997. According to CSEA Labor Relations Specialist Irwin Scharfeld, who led the negotiations, other highlights include: longevity payment increased to $200 and an upgraded dental plan meaning less out-of-pocket costs for employees.

New hires coming in after June 1995 will be required to contribute 15 percent of their health insurance. All current employees’ premiums will continue to be paid in full.

Town of East Hampton Unit President John Collins said there are 193 unit members in various blue and white collar titles.

Ulster Labor-Management Committee testifies before U.S. Commissioner of Labor

KINGSTON — When U.S. Secretary of Labor Robert B. Reich was looking for examples of working labor-management programs, Ulster County’s Labor Management Committee was invited to testify before his task force.

The meeting was one of a series held by the secretary of labor’s Task Force on Excellence in State and Local Government Through Labor-Management Cooperation. The committee will make recommendations to Reich following meetings all over the U.S.

Ulster County Local Vice President Debbie DeCicco said Reich was anxious to meet with the group because “we are the only committee with any longevity, since 1978.” Accompanying DeCicco was Ulster Labor Management Coordinator Karen MacInnis-Frering who discussed the demographics of county employees and the committee’s ground rules and accomplishments; Management Analyst Karen Lucas, who spoke on cost containment measures; and Director of Personnel Tom Costello who spoke on the impact of the committee.

“We felt very honored to be invited to testify,” DeCicco said, “being in the company of other cooperative programs added prestige to Ulster county’s and labor’s long time commitment.”

A shift in the seasons in the Great Northeast dictates a change in the type of work public employees are called upon to perform. Many outside employees who battle winter weather conditions and problems shift gears to a less hostile climate during late spring, summer and early fall. Others change from mostly indoor winter chores to spending their working hours outside.

Because each season poses its own situations, the face of the work force can change with the addition of temporary seasonal workers to augment the full-time employees. Permanent or temporary, the CSEA work force proves its worth season in and season out.

Here are a few examples of that work force performing seasonal work on Long Island that benefits the public.
Federal budget cuts threaten public hospitals

East Meadow — Like the characters on the hit TV series ER, CSEA members working in the emergency room of Nassau County Medical Center never know what crises will come in the door from moment to moment.

"You don't think about it, you just do it," said Nurse Colleen Cook, a veteran of 14 years at the hospital. "It's always changing, and you have to respond and do your thinking on your feet." Cook works in the ER trauma center and the region's designated trauma center, as well as the busy facility as emergency situations such as the Avlanca plane crash and the tornado that hit Long Island.

"But between the noted public emergencies, the professional staff of the NCIC handle hundreds of individual cases each and every day," said NCIC's Robert Dole.

While some emergencies, such as heart attacks and auto accidents, occur consistently year round, each season brings its own set of problems and conditions.

"With the heat and weather conditions we've been having this year we're seeing a lot of asthma and respiratory problems," said pediatric nurse Marilyn Goodrich. "But we also see our share of viral infections, allergic reactions and every other conceivable ailment."

"It's particularly busy in the ER's surgical unit according to nurses Gene Weininger and Ann Stelling. Accident victims from beach and boating incidents are often satisfied to the hospital's helicopter pad. Burn victims, especially from fireworks accidents around the Fourth of July, sports mishaps are among the more frequent types of cases the ER surgical unit handles each day."

"It's stressful, but there's also an instant sense of being needed when you are able to stop the bleeding or stabilize a trauma," said Weininger for Nassau County.

"You have to keep moving in this work making evaluations and always taking care of the sickest first," said Attending Physician and CSEA member Joseph Scalisi, who has worked in the ER for more than three years.

"We really have to work together because we're dealing with a lot of different people and their different cases."

In an effort to provide better service to patients and maintain the priorities of the emergency room, CSEA initiated the Doctors After Hours Program last fall. It ensures that medical care for necessary, but non-life-threatening situations is available overnight and on weekends when your personal doctor may not have visiting hours.

The program has a number of benefits: It keeps the ER free of non-emergency cases, provides convenient, needed care quickly and costs a fraction of emergency room charges.

"Nassau County Medical Center is an essential community resource for the entire Nassau County community," said CSEA NCIC President Tony Giustino. "The staff of the Emergency Room demonstrate just how essential every day."

Erie County Medical Center handles high volume of trauma and crisis cases in western New York

BUFFALO — A reduction in federal funding would jeopardize one of the busiest hospital emergency rooms in western New York.

As a member of the emergency room staff at the Erie County Medical Center, Barbara Goss of Erie County Local 816 sees a great deal of trauma and crisis all year round. "But the summer season automatically brings with it an increase in a number of crimes," said Goss, a senior clerk-trained and a six-year ECMC employee. "Because school is out, there is an increase in the number of school-age mishaps, minor and major. Naturally, there are any more bicycle, motorcycle and pedestrian mishaps," she continued. "Because most people visit and vacation in summer, there are more patients from out of town. The heat seems to cause more arguments and fights, as we see a lot more gunshot wounds and stabbings."

Farming accidents increase, as well as allergy and asthma related attacks, Goss said. "And because everyone wants to have some fun in the summer, all of our staffing levels are usually lower, while we deal with the increases in the summer always brings," Goss said.

NCIC marks milestone without chance to rest on its laurels

On July 15, 1935, a small 200 bed general hospital opened its doors to patients and staff. The result was the Nassau County Medical Center (NCMC), a world class health care facility that serves as the lead facility in public health care delivery system in general and NCMC and its employees in particular.

"NASSAU COUNTY CSEA MEMBERS GIVE BLOOD — Under a new cooperative labor-management initiative, Nassau County Medical Center now coordinates regular blood drives with county departments. Previously, the blood drives were run by an outside agency, and the county blood bank had to buy back the supply. Now the donations are given at the medical center for specialized use and a savings of tax dollars. The response has been impressive and has helped ensure an adequate supply of blood at all times."

LEAP tuition vouchers and reimbursement authorizations for the fall 1995 semester were mailed during the first week of August. Applications were approved using a priority system based on each applicant's anniversary date and recent history with LEAP. Due to skyrocketing tuition and increased participation in the program, some eligible applicants have been denied a tuition voucher or reimbursement approval for the fall term due to budget constraints; however, those applicants will have a higher priority for both the spring 1996 and fall 1996 terms.

The CSEA Tuition Reimbursement Program was replaced by the LEAP Reimbursement Program (LEAP) under the 1995-1999 contract. Eligible State employees were able to apply for either a tuition voucher for a school participating in LEAP or for reimbursement for a course at a school not participating in LEAP. The application period for the fall '95 semester for both LEAP Tuition Vouchers and the LEAP Reimbursement Program ended on July 14. Any application for a voucher or reimbursement received after July 14 cannot be considered.

LEAP catalogs and application forms for the winter/spring 1996 semester will be available at state agency personnel and training offices during the first week of September. The deadline for the winter/spring 1996 semester is Oct. 16. If you have any questions about LEAP Tuition Vouchers or the LEAP Reimbursement Program, please call the LEAPLINE at 1-800-253-4332. An advisor is available weekdays from 9 a.m. until 4 p.m. to assist you. After hours and on weekends, callers may leave a message and request a return call from an advisor at a time and telephone number convenient to them during LEAP's regular office hours.

Buffalo State honors deceased members

BUFFALO — The memory of three CSEA members who died in the last year has been enshrined in the peaceful greenery of a campus quadrant at Buffalo State College.

Three Canadian redbud trees were dedicated to the memory of Rich Parker, former Local 640 president, and former members Mike Fehmer and Bobby Elmes. Each tree bears a plaque with the name of Rich, Mike and Bobby.

In a moving ceremony, family members received a photo of the trees in blossom, along with upbeat remembrances from fellow workers.

Spearheading the eight-month project in behalf of the Local 640 executive board was Pam Cercone, first vice president. She was aided by Gary Kent, physical plant director, Steve Shaffer, utilities manager and Joe Ball, assistant utilities manager.

The weather’s better, but livin’ still ain’t easy for workers

Across New York state, summer time means hard work of a different kind for state employees. Many employees who battled harsh winter and cool, damp spring conditions are now taking care of the parks, roads, campsites, beaches and other attractions residents and visitors count on for travel, vacations and relaxation.

While summer may give many employees a chance to take their work outside in more hospitable circumstances than they were working in a few months earlier, the work itself is never any easier, only different.

No matter what the season, you can be certain CSEA-represented employees are making sure everything is safe, clean and in good repair.

Parole Division member earns award for being indispensable

NEW YORK — Solutions are CSEA member Ivan Cummings’ specialty.

With a unique blend of enthusiasm and motivation, he has been a keyboard specialist at Manhattan State Parole Division Headquarters since 1990.

“In this agency when you have a problem and all else fails, most likely you can bring it to me and I will find a solution,” said Cummings, who assists the parole violations unit chief, “I enjoy getting things done.”

His efforts have earned Cummings special recognition. He was singled out for a 1995 Recognition Award by the Parole Board’s new chairman.

Cummings was honored along with parole officers, bureau chiefs, and administrative law judges, for making himself “indispensable to the operation of his office.”

Cummings helps Parole Board prosecutors and acts as liaison with the commissioner’s office, arranging hearings for parole violators and preparing background work for court cases.

Cummings is studying public administration at John Jay College of Criminal Justice and expects to make the dean’s list. He aspires to higher governmental positions.

While he started out as a garment district messenger, Cummings worked his way into private industry managerial work before joining state service. He devotes time to improving his Bedford-Stuyvesant Brooklyn community and has served as vice president of his block association.

“Ivan does us all proud because he exemplifies the best of the CSEA Work Force,” said CSEA Metropolitan Region President George Boncoraglio.

State officials meet members at Upstate Supply and Support

State Comptroller H.Carl McCall, second from right, and state Assemblymember Paul Tonko, right, are welcomed to Upstate Supply & Support Distribution Center by CSEA Local 444 President Jane Capozzi. McCall and Tonko recently toured the huge state Office of General Services facility which the state wants to privatize. CSEA continues to fight privatization plans for the facility, where 213 CSEA members work.

Cause of sickness still a mystery at Stony Brook laboratory

STONY BROOK — Since early June a mystery has baffled officials, staff and CSEA representatives at Stony Brook University Hospital.

Following the unexpected shutdown of an air conditioning unit, workers in the hospital's Specimen Receiving area began getting sick with symptoms ranging from light-headedness to blurred vision to burning eyes and throat to collapsing from low blood pressure.

Hospital officials, in consultation with CSEA, moved the employees from the area, conducted extensive tests and have undertaken exhaustive cleaning measures. As The Public Sector went to press, employees were being moved back into the affected areas.

“The hospital officials have taken all of the appropriate actions and have shared all the results with us at every step along the way,” CSEA Occupational Safety and Health Specialist Dan Morra said. “It is disturbing that we don’t have a definitive answer about the cause of the problem, but we are confident that the situation will be carefully monitored.”

It’s been very difficult working under these circumstances,” said Senior Lab Worker Lorraine Gresalfi. Besides the sickness and uncertainty, the situation created numerous practical problems for the workers, who have been working out of cramped, makeshift quarters.

The added stress complicated an already difficult work responsibility. The Specimen Receiving workers handle thousands of specimens every month, processing them to the appropriate labs for testing, often under emergency requirements.

CSEA SUNY Stony Brook Local 614 President Grace Roy said the union will keep trying to get answers to the mystery.

Ambulatory surgical centers (ASC) are free-standing outpatient surgery facilities similar to hospital outpatient departments. Surgical centers are only for elective (scheduled, non-emergency) surgery that is too complex for a doctor’s office but does not require an overnight stay. You and your doctor might choose a surgical center for cataract surgery or ear drums for a child, for example.

MetLife began contracting with ASCs in October 1994, and the list of participating surgicenters has expanded from the original six to 13 centers, with four of them located in Florida.

The current list of contracted centers includes:

- In New York State:
  - Brook Plaza Ambulatory Surgical Center Inc., Brooklyn;
  - Century Same Day Surgery, Latham;
  - Harrison Center Outpatient Surgery Inc., Syracuse;
  - Kings Highway Surgicenter Inc., Melville;
  - Nassau Center for Ambulatory Surgery Inc., Garden City;
  - North Shore Surgi-Center Inc., Smithtown;
  - OLV Primary Care & Surgery Center, Orchard Park; and
  - Quinn Surgical Community Center, Long Island City.

- In Florida:
  - Medivation of Lake Worth, Lake Worth;
  - South Beach Ambulatoric, Orange County, Orlando;
  - Suncoast Surgery Institute, Hudson; and
  - Aker Kasten Cataract & Laser Institute, Boca Raton.

Before your doctor schedules surgery in a surgical center, always verify that the center participates in The Empire Plan or call MetLife at 1-800-942-4640.

Using a participating ambulatory surgical center for covered services saves out-of-pocket expense for you — $15 co-payment for the facility and the anesthesiology — and provides discounts to The Empire Plan. When the plan saves, you save, too, in the cost of your premium.

A reminder on other benefit changes under the new CSEA-state contracts

Due to the recent ratification of the 1995-99 contracts, the following benefit changes have occurred for Empire Plan enrollees:

Effective Aug. 1, 1995:

Managed Physical Medicine Program (MPM): The Empire Plan’s Managed Physical Medicine Program began Aug. 1, 1995. This program replaces your current Metropolitan coverage for chiropractic treatment and physical therapy. The MPM is insured by Metropolitan and administered by Managed Physical Network (MPN).

You will receive network benefits, the highest level of benefits, when you use MPN providers for medically necessary chiropractic treatment and physical therapy. You will still be covered, but at a significantly lower level of benefits when you choose a non-network provider.

- MPMP network provider: $5 co-payment per visit for medically necessary chiropractic treatment or physical therapy.
- Non-network provider: $250 deductible, 50% co-insurance, $1,500 annual maximum.

You may contact a provider directly and ask if he/she is in the MPN network or you may call 1-800-942-4640 for directory assistance. Your Health Benefits Administrator has a small supply of MPN provider directories as well.

- HealthCall’s Prospective Procedure Review (PPR): Magnetic Resonance Imaging (MRI) is the only procedure requiring PPR through HealthCall at 1-800-992-1213.
- Specialist Consultation Evaluations are no longer required by HealthCall under PPR. However, you may still call HealthCall at 1-800-992-1213 to request a Voluntary Specialist Consultation Evaluation for any recommended procedure.

Outpatient Hospital and Emergency Room:

- A $250 co-payment applies to hospital outpatient and emergency room services. This payment will be waived if it becomes necessary for you to be admitted to the hospital as an inpatient at that time. You continue to have no co-payment for hospital outpatient physical therapy following related surgery or hospitalization; chemotherapy; radiation therapy; or hemodialysis.

Participating Provider Office Visit/Office Surgery:

- When an office visit and office surgery occur on the same day, you will only be responsible for one $5 co-payment.

Participating Radiology/Laboratory Services:

- When diagnostic radiology and laboratory tests are performed during a single visit, you will only be required to pay one $5 co-payment.

Allergy Desensitization:

- No co-payment for professional services for allergy desensitization (allergy shots) in an institution or participating provider’s office.

Routine Health Exams:

- Employees, covered spouses or domestic partners 50 years of age or older will be reimbursed up to $250 once every two years for a routine health exam. This benefit is not subject to deductible or co-insurance.
- Routine health exams are still available through an Empire Plan participating provider subject only to your $5 co-payment.

Hearing Aids:

- Examinations, fittings and purchase of hearing aids will be reimbursed up to $600 once every four years for adults and once every two years for children age 12 and under. These benefits are not subject to deductible or co-insurance.

Ambulance Service:

- Local professional ambulance service covered under Basic Medical subject only to a $35 co-payment.
- Benefits for voluntary ambulance services remain unchanged.

The following changes impact both Empire Plan and HMO enrollees:

Effective Aug. 1, 1995:

Deferred Use of Sick Leave Credits:

- When you retire, you may delay the start of or suspend your health insurance coverage and the use of your sick leave credits indefinitely.

Effective Sept. 1, 1995:

Domestic Partner Eligibility:

- To enroll a domestic partner, you must have been in the relationship one year.
- If the relationship ends, you must notify your health benefits administrator. There will be a two-year waiting period before enrolling a new domestic partner.
- Employees who fraudulently enroll a domestic partner are held financially responsible for any benefits paid and are subject to disciplinary action. Such employees will forfeit future domestic partner coverage.
- Contact your health benefits administrator for enrollment forms and affidavits.

For additional information on the recent benefit changes, please refer to your July 1995 issue of the Empire Plan Report or HMO Report.
NEW YORK — CSEA’s “Don’t Turnkey Me” campaign to challenge the wholesale turnover of state-operated group homes for the mentally retarded to so-called not-for-profit agencies, has been boosted in recent weeks by reports of financial improprieties and other abuses by a number of agencies.

After years of successfully transitioning institutional-based care into state-operated group homes in the community, the state has embarked on a scheme to turn facilities over to private operators.

CSEA has argued that this turnkey initiative threatens the strength and integrity of New York’s system of care for mentally retarded individuals and undermines the positive working relationship that the union has had with OMRDD for many years.

The recent reports of the top management of not-for-profit agencies cashing in at the expense of clients, taxpayers and front-line workers has added fuel to the fire.

“New York’s system of care for mentally retarded people works because it is balanced between the public and private sectors and draws on the strength of each,” CSEA President Danny Donohue said. “But the turnkey issue represents some not-for-profit providers getting greedy and these recent reports about profiteering show that some providers are not only very greedy, they’re also dishonest and immoral.”

In one example, a recent series of reports in several New York City newspapers revealed that OMRDD has found violations and excesses in the Queens-based Professional Services Center for the Handicapped.

The Center, which handles only 450 clients, paid its executive director more than $200,000 a year — more than double the salary of the state OMRDD commissioner.

OMRDD reportedly also found that the center’s director receives excessive fringe benefits, put his mother and brother in key executive posts at the center at salaries of $61,178 and $76,455 respectively, paid health insurance expenses for two people who do not work for PSCH and listed thousands of dollars in undocumented payroll and other expenses.

In a brutally critical report titled “Missing Accountability,” the independent state Commission on Quality Care recently exposed slipshod procedures for holding private agencies responsible for their use of tax dollars to mentally retarded clients.

OMRDD claims to have corrected the deficiencies.

State Sen. Frank Padavan, a nationally recognized authority on mental health and mental retardation issues, has been outspoken recently on the excesses of some private agencies.

“These are not-for-profit corporations established for the purpose of profits,” Padavan said. “The tragedy is, the people this is all about (mentally retarded clients) are getting short changed.”

The notion of dramatically downsizing the state’s mental retardation care capacities is ill-conceived according to CSEA Metropolitan Region President George Boncoraglio. “Our members prove every day that they can do the job cost-effectively, pick up the slack of the private operators and ensure that taxpayers get their money’s worth.”

CSEA Manhattan Developmental Local 443 President Wally Nash knows what that means first-hand.

Earlier this year, OMRDD was forced to take over the operations of Contemporary Guidance Services, a private agency. That meant temporarily absorbing and training more than 60 private sector workers to ensure responsible care for the clients.

Deeply concerned about the quality of patient care, Nash condemns OMRDD turnkey initiatives at the same time private providers are being decertified for fraud and mismanagement.

Worst of all, Nash charges that instead of firing incompetent private managers, OMRDD brings them into state facilities for “retraining.” While they are being retrained, they collect state salaries, he said.

As far as CSEA is concerned, clients, OMRDD employees and taxpayers deserve better.

Alan Ross, director of Labor-Management Institute, presented Schwadron Award

Alan Ross, director of the Labor-Management Institute, was recently honored with the 1995 Maurice Schwadron Memorial Award by the state Training Council.

The Schwadron Award is given each year to human resource development employees in state government who have demonstrated exemplary service in training and human resource development.

Ross developed and has directed the Labor-Management Institute since its founding in 1984. Today it is the hallmark of public sector training programs dedicated to promoting cooperative labor-management relations. Ross and the institute bring to life the belief that well-trained employees make the labor relations process work better, which improves working conditions and leads to better services for the public.

Ross applauded the state and CSEA for their long-standing commitment to labor-management training.

The institute conducts workshops on a variety of topics and provides consultation, training and other support services to labor-management committees.

A program of the NYS/CSEA Labor-Management Committees, the institute’s services are a negotiated benefit provided at no cost to management and CSEA-represented employees.

The award is named in memory of Maurice Schwadron, who devoted his career in New York state government to promoting the field of training and development and who helped form the Training Council in 1969.

CSEA honors late Joan Tobin

CSEA President Danny Donohue honors the memory of late CSEA activist Joan Tobin by placing her name on CSEA’s John M. Harris Memorial at the union’s Albany Headquarters. The memorial is reserved for deceased activists who have made outstanding contributions on behalf of CSEA statewide. Tobin served CSEA for decades as a state Department of Transportation Local president, member of the statewide Board of Directors and as vice chair of the statewide CSEA-DOT Labor-Management Committee. Joining Donohue for the ceremony are, from left; Tobin’s sister Pat Nerbonne; CSEA Board of Directors member Sue Matan, who nominated Tobin for the honor; and Tobin’s niece, Karen Zalewski-Wildzunas.
Failure to raise minimum wage proves costly to state taxpayers

ALBANY — The Fiscal Policy Institute released a report showing that a minimum wage increase in New York state would reduce public assistance costs while allowing families with children to earn more money.

The Fiscal Policy Institute, FPI, a think tank whose members include social, religious and labor organizations including CSEA, issued its report as the state Legislature considered an increase in the $4.25 an hour minimum wage to $5.05.

Unfortunately, the report couldn’t overcome politics, and the minimum wage increase died as politicians wrangled over its size.

While both houses of the Legislature seemed to accept the increase, the Senate wavered over the amount, and no compromise was reached.

According to FPI, that failure will cost New York state money to pay for social programs.

The analysis of a minimum wage increase on welfare benefits, food stamps, payroll taxes, state and federal income taxes and the earned income tax credit shows that workers would be better off with a higher minimum wage.

FPI says raising the minimum wage could save New York money and government would spend less on Aid to Families with Dependent Children.

For example, for a mother of two who is on welfare and begins working half time at a minimum wage job, the higher wage would reduce the state’s Aid to Families with Dependent Children by nearly $1,600. At the same time, the family income would increase by about $2,750, even after taking into consideration increased child care costs.

With the $4.25 minimum wage, the family’s income would be about $2,250 and the government would save only about $400 more than if the woman had not started working.

For a working mother on welfare who increases her work schedule from 20 hours to 35 hours, the $5.05 minimum wage would mean a $4,000 decrease in AFDC benefits and an increase in overall family income of about $2,600.

With the current minimum wage, the government’s savings is reduced by $1,200 and the benefit to the family is reduced by $450.

“Raising the minimum wage would help not only those struggling to make a living improve their lives, it would help all of us. New York should be looking at ways to raise the living standards of its residents and reducing welfare costs,” CSEA President Danny Donohue said.

“What all New Yorkers need is a living wage,” he said. “It pays off for all of us by improving our economy, raising the general standard of living and reducing welfare costs.”

Central Region installation information available

The CSEA Central Region has set its installation picnic for Aug. 20.

Mailings about the picnic have gone out to local and unit presidents, but those who have not received it should call the region office to make reservations; the number is 315-433-0050.

J.J. Kelly Scholarships helped five with college

Five children of CSEA members who died or were permanently injured on the job recently completed the 1994-95 college school year aided by $1,000 J.J. Kelly Scholarships.

The Kelly scholarships are given in memory of an attorney who represented CSEA. Since the fund completed its original mission of helping Mr. Kelly’s children complete their education, the fund is used for scholarships awarded to children of CSEA members who lost their lives or were permanently injured on the job. At times the fund also supplements other CSEA scholarships.

Kelly Scholarship winners during the last college school year were:

- Renee Ann Hadley and David Hadley of Boston, NY, daughter and son of the late David J. Hadley, who was a CSEA member employed at the Eden Junior-Senior High School at the time of his death. Renee attended Utica College of Syracuse University last school year and David completed the past school year at Daemen College.

- Kristen A. Schoen of Derby is the daughter of Joseph E. Schoen, who was disabled through his work with the state Department of Transportation. Kristen attended St. Francis College in Pennsylvania this past year.

- Keith R. Goldfarb and Brian J. Goldfarb of Fort Lauderdale, FL, sons of Glen Goldfarb, who was a member of CSEA Nassau County Local 830 when he was permanently injured and is now a member of CSEA Florida State Retirees Local 950. Keith attended Florida Atlantic University and Brian attended the University of Florida.
Discounted cellular phone service is further proof that it pays to be a CSEA member.
