Seabrook retires after holding every local office

NEW YORK - Serving New York City Division of Military and Naval Affairs (DMNA) Local 254 for over 25 years in every elected local union office, President Roy Seabrook built a reputation to be proud of. Recently, he was honored for his service at a retirement celebration.

During his service, Seabrook watched state armories become shelters for the homeless. He fought to protect the health and safety of DMNA members exposed to tuberculosis and other diseases rampant among the homeless.

Seabrook served on three DMNA/CSEA statewide negotiating teams.

"When I came to work here in 1964, I was told whether you like it or not, you're going to join CSEA," Seabrook said. "I thought to myself, hey, I'd better look into this union business."

CSEA gets check-cashing van at Queens worksite

QUEENS — Members of CSEA Bernard Fineson Developmental Center Local 406, Corona Unit, have always had trouble getting their checks cashed on payday because there was no where to do it.

Then CSEA went to work, and to their great appreciation, a check-cashing van pulled into the facility parking area on payday for the first time on this October.

According to CSEA Local 406 President Mickey Cruz, the lack of check-cashing establishments near Queens mental health facilities has always caused problems and inconvenience for many union members.

"Our CSEA local was determined to provide on-site check-cashing services to all our Queens facilities, including Queens Children’s Psychiatric Center and Creedmoor Psychiatric Center," he said.

"Having this service will save time and aggravation for everyone on pay days from here on out."
Tuberculosis is back
An old disease once again threatening public employees in the workplace

After years of control, tuberculosis (TB) is making a comeback, and often public employees risk getting the disease just by doing their jobs.

Health care workers, corrections employees and other workers who have prolonged exposure to potentially infected individuals are at the greatest risk.

Tuberculosis is a bacterial disease that usually affects the lungs. The germs are spread through the air when a person who has the disease coughs, speaks or sneezes and can infect anyone who comes in contact with them for a prolonged period.

The symptoms can include a low-grade fever, night sweats, fatigue, weight loss and a persistent cough, but are not always obvious.

Killer TB epidemic is drug-resistant

Officials of the state Department of Corrections expect to complete by year's end testing of the agency's nearly 90,000 employees and inmates for a deadly strain of tuberculosis that has killed 13 inmates and a corrections officer at two state prisons.

Employees and inmates at Auburn and Queensboro state prisons, where the deaths occurred, were the first to be tested.

CSEA is working with the state Departments of Health and Corrections and other agencies to minimize the risk to public employees and the general public. A public health emergency was declared at Auburn Correctional Facility in central New York where several inmates and a corrections officer died after contracting a drug-resistant strain of tuberculosis. Additional inmate deaths have been confirmed at Queensboro state prison in New York City.

Inmates were also responsible for a TB epidemic at Upstate Medical Center that infected at least 35 employees.

Public employees are particularly at risk of exposure to TB because the disease can be spread through the air when an infected person coughs, sneezes or speaks.

What makes the situation worse is that the strain of TB is drug-resistant. People with AIDS or those who are HIV-positive or people whose immune system is compromised in any way are especially susceptible to this TB. Most AIDS patients, for instance, die within 72 days of contracting this strain of TB.

"This situation requires immediate action and continued follow through," said CSEA President Joe McDermott. "So far Corrections and the other agencies have acted responsibly but the situation demands action now.

CSEA is calling for the following vital actions to handle the crisis:

- expedited construction of isolation rooms for those inmates who have active TB. Currently, only six isolation rooms are properly equipped in the entire state;
- semi-annual TB screening, particularly in facilities with a high incidence of TB; and
- a task force to answer questions and respond immediately to the situation.

At Upstate Medical Center, hospital officials performed skin testing this summer on all employees who worked in Unit 6B of the facility and identified 35 employees who tested positive. That means they were infected and, if untreated, have a 5 to 10 percent chance of developing active tuberculosis, according to CSEA Local 615 President Bob Vincent.

Facts you should know

- A positive reaction to a TB skin test does not indicate that you have TB; it only means you have been exposed to the disease.
- 90 percent of people who are infected never actually develop the disease.
- An individual who has tested positive on a skin test in the past should not have another skin test.
- Someone who has been exposed to active TB may not react to a skin test for two to 10 weeks.
- Hospital workers are required to undergo skin tests prior to employment and then every two years.
- Workers should have a basic understanding of what TB is all about so they can make informed judgements when problems arise such as when workers are contacted with screening programs.

TB a serious, but treatable, disease

People can be infected by TB without contracting the disease. TB can be treated with a combination of isolation, drugs and treatment, but if left untreated, it can be fatal.

"CSEA members, particularly those working with high risk populations, need to know what TB is and that it can be a serious problem," said Janet Foley, administrative assistant to CSEA's safety and health director.

High-risk populations include intravenous drug users, individuals with AIDS or infected with Human Immunodeficiency Virus (HIV), elderly people who have had previous tuberculosis exposure and the homeless.

"It's not always possible to take precautions to guard against TB because you can't always know who has active TB; even in health care settings," Foley said. "But when you do know that an individual has tuberculosis, don't take any chances. Insist that isolation procedures be followed and wear personal protective equipment such as a face mask when coming in contact with that individual."

"Workers should have a basic understanding of what TB is all about so they can make informed judgements when problems arise such as when workers are confronted with screening programs," Foley said.

The revival of TB as a serious public health threat can be attributed to many factors, including neglect and cutbacks in prevention programs because the disease was thought to be under control for so long.

December 1991
A three-member fact-finding panel has been appointed by the state Public Employment Relations Board (PERB) as the next step in an effort to resolve the contract impasse between CSEA and the State involving more than 100,000 state employees.

Contract negotiations at impasse involve CSEA state employee members in the Operational Services, Institutional Services, Administrative Services and Division of Military and Naval Affairs bargaining units. The contracts expired March 31 and impasse was declared after months of unsuccessful negotiations. A subsequent mediation process broke down, leading to appointment of the fact-finding panel.

The neutral panel of veteran mediators and arbitrators consists of Eva Robins of New York City, chair, Susan T. Mackenzie of New York City and Martin F. Scheinman of Manhasset.

The panel will conduct a series of hearings to determine the causes and circumstances of the contract dispute and then write non-binding recommendations for settling the impasse. The recommendations can be rejected in whole or in part by either party.

If all or part of the fact-finding panel's report is rejected by either side, the dispute will go to the state Legislature. Under the state's Taylor Law, which governs public sector labor relations, the legislature may impose terms and conditions of employment for one year. PERB officials said it is impossible to estimate how long the fact-finding process may take.

Cuomo also calls for deep cuts in aid to schools, local governments

ALBANY — Public employees again are the target of Gov. Cuomo's newest "solution" to the recurring state budget crisis.

Announcing just before Thanksgiving that the state is short $875 million this year, the Governor said he wants to layoff 500 state employees by April 1 and another 1,200 employees in the next fiscal year.

He also wants to make deep cuts in aid already promised to school districts and local governments.

As this issue of The Public Sector went to press, the Governor was calling for the Legislature to return to Albany to act on his proposal for handling the budget deficit.

Adding insult to these newest assaults, the Governor laid blame for layoffs on state employee unions for refusing to accept furloughs for employees.

"This is outrageously false," CSEA President Joe McDermott said. "The Governor cannot manage his budget, and so he blames employee unions for refusing to accept insulting and unfair concessions with no guarantee of job security."

McDermott blasted the Governor for once again attacking public employees rather than the real cause of the state's recurring budget crisis — tax loopholes for big corporations and tax breaks for the wealthy (see page 7).

"After all the cuts they've already made, the Governor and the Legislature ought to realize the problem is revenues, not public employees," McDermott said. "Public employees are important assets and deserve respect, not shabby treatment and false blame."

Albany's Building 8: Still 'sick', getting better

ALBANY - An "extremely sick" building at the huge State Office Campus complex was showing signs of recovering as this edition of The Public Sector went to press. But Building Eight, which was evacuated several times due to mysterious noxious fumes that sent scores of employees to area hospitals, was still a long ways from receiving a clean bill of health.

While employees continue to report to nursing stations with unexplained illnesses these days, the numbers are significantly lower than at the height of the problem this Fall when hundreds of workers complained daily of headaches, dizziness, nausea and sore throats. More than 2,000 state Department of Taxation and Finance employees were evacuated a half-dozen times this year.

Scores of workers were treated at area hospitals for problems related to noxious fumes.

A large-scale cleaning of the building, repair of faulty heating pipes and replacement of steam heating coils appears to have helped ease the situation somewhat. CSEA successfully pushed to have laidoff cleaners and engineers restored to help maintain the building, and union officials said the state has also accepted the union's proposals for a comprehensive air quality monitoring program for the entire building. CSEA continues to press for creation of alternate work sites where employees could be reassigned temporarily in the event of future problems.

"The bottom line is the employees deserve a safe workplace. A lot has been done but a lot remains to be done," CSEA President Joe McDermott said.
MPC workers trying to save Ward's Island trees

WARD'S ISLAND - Horrified by the prospect of losing Manhattan Psychiatric Center's beautifully wooded riverside picnic area to bulldozers, CSEA Local 413 members are imploring management to reconsider.

They recently picketed at the facility's main entrance with signs saying, "Please Save Our Trees.

Management plans to construct a new alcoholism treatment facility on the picnic area site angered both staff and patients.

"When seven other alternative building sites on the grounds are available for this building, destroying these woods would be the equivalent of raping the environment on Ward's Island," CSEA Local 413 President Mohamed Hussain said.

The wooded picnic area provides a "humane and restful environment" for patients and staff, CSEA Labor Relations Specialist Barton M. Brier said.

Irreplaceable greenery is in obvious short supply among MPC's highrise hospital buildings that are sandwiched onto a small island surrounded by towering Triboro Bridge access roads.

"People here are enveloped by concrete and steel at every point. That's why it's imperative that the trees be saved," Brier added.

All other alternative construction sites have electrical hookups, making it less costly to build there than at the picnic site which lacks electrical wiring, Hussain said.

The director of alcoholism treatment services demanded the picnic area location, Hussain charged, because it would provide an unencumbered waterfront office view once all the trees are cleared.

Alarmed union activists continue to contact the Governor's office and state legislators in hopes of saving the trees. At the union's request, Albany Office of Mental Health officials toured the wooded area to assess the problem.

Stop scapegoating!

STONY BROOK - Members of CSEA SUNY at Stony Brook Local 614 demonstrated recently to protest proposed parking fee increases and the planned closing of a gravel parking lot.

Kathy LaScalea and her two goats joined approximately 75 union members to make the point that CSEA members don't want to be "scapegoated" in the university's attempt to raise money.

LaScalea wore a sign "Stop ScapeGOATing employees" to drive her point home.

The gravel lot, which is free, is used by about 350 CSEA members. University officials are threatening to close this lot, forcing employees to pay $30 to park in a new garage nearby.

According to CSEA Local 614 President Phil Santella, the employees most affected earn about $18,000 a year.

"Closing the gravel lot and asking for $30 to park will create a hardship for many of my members," Santella said.

"If the administration makes good on its threat to close the gravel lot, CSEA will file an IP (Improper Practice charge) for failure to negotiate the impact on our members," CSEA Labor Relations Specialist Gus Nielsen said.

"The administration has acted like a see-saw on the parking fee issue. First it was $30, then the students demonstrated and they said it would be $15," Santella said. "Then the SUNY Counsel met and it's back to $30." All other garages at the campus, which includes the university and the hospital, charge $15 a month for parking.

"The only other choice for my members is to park far away and take the bus for a dollar a day," said Santella. "But that's not the answer either because many of my members work before and after the time the buses are running."

In a letter to CSEA, state Senator Kenneth LaValle applauded the union's efforts.

"Your aim is the same as what I have tried to accomplish in the Senate the past two sessions: first by co-sponsoring legislation in 1990 to prohibit imposition of such fees, and this year by sponsoring a bill to exempt employees covered by collective bargaining agreements from SUNY parking fee regulations."

"This is simply a local example of the state pulling a few more bucks out of our members pockets," CSEA Region I President Gloria Moran said.

I
The news just isn’t getting any better for the state’s deteriorating mental health system as a direct consequence of the state Office of Mental Health’s inhumane and irresponsible policies.

But CSEA is continuing to pound OMH for short and long term improvements. CSEA’s recent actions included hammering the latest OMH Five Year Plan at a series of hearings across the state and developing a plan to address the immediate crisis on the wards.

Plan means more misery

In testimony delivered on Long Island, in Buffalo, Syracuse and Albany, CSEA leaders charged that the only certainty from the new OMH Five Year Plan is that it will produce more misery for people with mental illness, more misery for mental hygiene workers, and more misery for local government officials and taxpayers.

With some of the testimonies targeted at specific concerns for each of the regions, the union’s message emphasized that the tragedy of OMH policy affects all New Yorkers, wherever they live.

Remarkably, patient advocates, private providers and numerous other mental hygiene interest groups echoed CSEA’s criticism of OMH in their testimony.

Each of CSEA’s speakers pointed out that the closing of Gowanda Psychiatric Center near Buffalo earlier this year sets a dangerous precedent and is a disgraceful example of OMH direction. The union warned that the Gowanda situation signals that similar devastating scenes could be played out elsewhere.

“OMH is abandoning the mentally ill and dumping the problem on localities whether or not they have the resources to provide the necessary care and services,” CSEA Executive Vice President Danny Donohue said. “CSEA will continue to fight against OMH irresponsibility.”

A grim reminder of another murder

The recent brutal murder of a Rockland Psychiatric Center patient by another patient demonstrates the OMH irresponsibility in graphic detail. Aside from the chilling effect it has had on direct care workers across the state, it was also a grim reminder of the murder of CSEA member Clara Taylor at the same facility four years ago.

Taylor was murdered by an agitated patient while she was working alone overnight on a transitional ward. The patient who murdered her was being prepared for release back into the community.

Sadly, conditions have worsened since Taylor’s death. Therapy aides are still working alone on wards and OMH’s “census rundown” has ensured that only the sickest of the sick gain admission to the psychiatric centers.

There is not enough staff on the wards of psychiatric centers to provide the security, let alone the care that’s needed.

OMH POLICY WILL PRODUCE MORE MISERY - That was the critical message CSEA delivered at a series of hearings across the state on the OMH Five Year Plan. CSEA Region VI President Robert Lattimer, above, speaks with a television reporter following his testimony on Long Island.

CSEA Executive Vice President Danny Donohue delivered CSEA testimony in Buffalo, Mohawk Valley Psychiatric Center Local 434 President Bud Mulchy spoke for CSEA in Syracuse and CSEA Region IV President C. Allen Mead testified in Albany.

A message to OMH Direct Care Workers from CSEA President Joe McDermott

OMH, elected officials responsible for the nightmare

CSEA knows the nightmare you face on the wards every day and night and we hold the Office of Mental Health and every state elected official accountable.

Unconscionable cutbacks and inhumane policy have left fewer staff handling the sickest of the sick. That’s not only a formula for social disaster, as evidenced by the legions of homeless mentally ill haunting our streets, it’s also a time bomb on the wards.

Two recent murders brutally committed by state psychiatric center patients are the first, by a patient who “left” Bronx Psychiatric Center, went home and killed his father and the second, an unspeakable crime committed by one Rockland Psychiatric patient on another — are stark reminders that people are at risk at any given time.

CSEA said “never again” when MITA Clara Taylor, working alone, was murdered at Rockland Psychiatric Center in 1987 by a patient. People are still working alone and OMH doesn’t care. There is no easy solution but the procedure that CSEA has developed using the form, below, is a start toward protecting you. Follow the procedure and together we can deliver a message that OMH cannot hide behind their bureaucratic gobbledegook.

CSEA is putting OMH and other state officials on notice that direct care workers and patients are at risk and CSEA members cannot be held responsible for OMH irresponsibility.

Work alone? Take these steps to protect yourself

In an effort to protect CSEA members professionally and physically, CSEA is recommending that direct care staff who find themselves working without back up take the following steps:

1. Complete the form (available from your CSEA local office) reproduced at right. Have your supervisor sign the form acknowledging that you are working alone and cannot be held accountable for the lack of security. Make sure to note the number of patients under your charge on the form. If your supervisor refused to sign, note this fact and sign it yourself.

2. Call your facility security office and have them log that you are working alone, identifying who you are, where you are working and how many patients are in your charge.

3. Return the completed form to your CSEA office at your convenience, when off duty.

A message from CSEA President Joe McDermott

Governor, we're not your scapegoats

There he goes again!
Once again Gov. Cuomo has chosen to use public employees as scapegoats to hide his own mismanagement of the state budget.

As the state faces more red ink the Governor is again calling for cuts in the state workforce and aid to local governments and school districts.
The Governor claims that additional layoffs of state employees are necessary because the public employee unions would not agree to furloughs. This is not true!
The Cuomo administration has never offered CSEA members any job security in exchange for furloughs or other concessions.

Gov. Cuomo wants state employees to make even more sacrifices but he offers nothing in return. He says, "Make concessions or I'll lay off more workers." He doesn't say, however, that accepting concessions will prevent layoffs.

Just look at the record. After the Governor and the Legislature reduced the workforce by 10 percent and imposed a 2 percent lag payroll, the Governor is still calling for more layoffs.

Based on that track record, I believe it is safe to say that if any union agreed to a harebrained scheme like furloughs, its members would still face layoffs.
The Governor cannot lay the blame at the unions' feet. We didn't ask to lose our jobs.

He cannot continue to blame the layoffs on the Legislature or the federal government.
Mario Cuomo is the governor; he decided to lay off hard-working public employees. He ought to take responsibility for his decisions and stop blaming everyone else.

He deserves the same blame for calling for more cuts in aid to local governments and school districts. The state made a commitment to these localities when it passed this year's budget. Most localities were damaged by the delay in the passage of that budget and by cuts it contained.

Now the Governor is coming back to localities and saying, "Sorry, we goofed. We can't live up to our commitment."
This is a terrible way to run a government.

If they really want to solve the recurring state deficit, the Governor and Legislature must address the real structural problems in the state budget, rather than devastate services by cutting the workforce and aid to localities.
They must look at the state's problems with revenues. They must close unfair tax loopholes for large corporations which make money but avoid paying their fair share of taxes. They must restore progressivity to the income tax structure so that rich New Yorkers pay their fair share. Since the tax cuts in 1987 the richest people in New York have gotten huge tax breaks while the state budget is awash in red ink. This has got to stop!

It's time to stop the bitter, futile attacks on public employees. All the layoffs of the past 12 months obviously haven't solved the problems. Are more really the answer?
I say no. I say it's time to attack the real culprits: tax breaks for the rich and tax loopholes for big corporations.

EBF requirement on generic drugs may be appealed

The CSEA Employee Benefit Fund (CSEA EBF) has an appeals process in place for members who, for medical reasons, cannot substitute a generic drug for a brand name drug.

A requirement that prescriptions be written generically when a generic substitution is available is one of several cost-containing modifications in the CSEA EBF Prescription Drug Plan that became effective Nov. 1.

Members whose physician insists on prescribing a brand name drug rather than a generic may file an appeal to the CSEA EBF generic requirement.

Members wishing to file an appeal should call 1-800-445-9707.

An appeals form will be provided to be completed by the patient and the physician and submitted to:
Generic Appeals/CSEA EBF, NRx Services, Inc., 337 New Karner Road, Albany, NY 12205-402

The member/patient will be notified of the appeal decision.
A national health care program could have saved New York state and local governments $6.6 billion this — the size of the state deficit that stalled budget negotiations for months, an AFSCME report shows.

"This report makes it clear — we need national health care, and we need it now," said CSEA President Joe McDerмот. "A single-payer plan could save state and local governments valuable resources needed to provide vital services."

Health care costs for state and local governments are rising faster than their revenue sources. And since those governments must balance their budgets, they must shift more and more money from other programs and services to pay for health care.

If a single-payer plan had been in effect in 1991, state and local governments would have saved $30 billion — more than half the deficits for the 1991-92 budget year.

In 1986, state and local governments spent $71.4 billion on health care, or 15.1 percent of their revenues. In 1991, they will spend $120 billion on health care, 18.8 percent of their revenues. That's an 11 percent annual increase, while their revenues have increased at only 6.2 percent a year in those five years.

At that rate, by the year 2000, state and local governments will spend $307 billion on health care, or 28 percent of their revenues.

State and local government are paying millions for health care for the increasing number of Americans who have no health insurance.

Meanwhile, insurance premiums for their own employees doubled between 1986 and 1991, and state and local governments pay three times the Medicaid costs they paid in 1980.

"State and local governments have been carrying the burden of health care costs for too long, and it is breaking them," McDermot said. "It's time for a single-payer national health care program now."

The report: "Simultaneous Solutions: Single Payer National Health Insurance is the Best Cure for the State and Local Government Fiscal Crisis," was written by AFSCME, the Public Citizen Health Research Group and Physicians for a National Health Plan.

CSEA Committee on Minority Issues helping members overcome discrimination

BINGHAMTON — When CSEA member John Williams found that his roommate had stolen his checks, writing more than $4,000 in forged checks, he was furious. Then his credit union told him that he would be liable for more than half that amount, and he was enraged.

"I was angry. I couldn't believe that someone could steal money out of my bank account and make me pay," he said. Desperate for help and near broke after the credit union subtracted the money from his account, he turned to CSEA/AFSCME for help.

Williams, a school vehicle operator for the Binghamton City School District, remembered something he read in The Public Sector about the CSEA/AFSCME Union Privilege Legal Services plan. A benefit available to CSEA members only, the Union Privilege Legal Services plan provides a free half-hour consultation and discount legal services regarding personal legal matters. After getting the name of a participating attorney from his union representative, Williams quickly contacted the lawyer to arrange for his free half-hour consultation.

"The credit union said I was out the money. That's why I took advantage of the legal services plan," he said. "I just wanted my money back."

After meeting with the participating attorney, Williams said he was relieved to find that legally he was not responsible for the money. After the lawyer wrote a series of letters to his credit union officials, they agreed to return the full amount.

Williams said he was glad that he had the CSEA/AFSCME plan to turn to, and that it was very cost-effective. The Union Privilege Legal Services plan covered the initial consultation fee, which would have cost him $875, and he only paid a discount fee of $125 for the follow-up legal service, which he said was a bargain, considering what he stood to lose.

It was very reassuring to have the legal services plan," he said. "I got back all my money, and I couldn't have done it without them."

Discrimination can be found in many forms, in many places. But it's probably most often and most easily applied to minorities. CSEA members who feel they are the victims of discrimination or any other problem associated with minority status are encouraged to turn to CSEA's Committee on Minority Issues for help.

Identifying issues that tend to divide minorities and majorities and finding ways to overcome them is a priority, according to committee chair Rebecca A. Lawson. Educating the entire union membership by heightening the awareness of those issues is another major objective.

The Committee on Minority Issues was appointed a year ago to better identify issues affecting minority members and make recommendations to CSEA President Joe McDermott concerning those issues.

"We want to educate everyone about the problems out there that divide people, and to make them aware of what to do when they encounter them," Lawson said. "People need to realize that minority concerns are not a matter of race alone, that minorities are discriminated against on factors such as gender, religion and creed as well as race. Minority issues are not just minority problems; they affect everyone because they are divisive."

The committee has arranged for additional minority speakers and presenters at CSEA meetings, the publication of some information in Spanish in The Public Sector (see adjacent page), expanded coverage of Black History Month and more information on minority events such as the Black and Puerto Rican Caucus, the Latino Conference and the Coalition of Black Trade Unionists convention.

At the recommendation of the committee, CSEA was actively involved in attempting to override President Bush's veto of the Civil Rights Bill of 1991 and is actively involved in other minority issues at the state and federal level. And CSEA President McDermott has made a recommendation that a CSEA member be considered for appointment on the AFSCME Minority Affairs Committee.

CSEA members who have concerns about minority issues can contact Lawson in care of CSEA headquarters in Albany.

"I encourage anyone who believes they have a minority-issue concern to contact the committee," Lawson said. "We want to identify the types of problems members encounter and determine how to deal with them."

Lawson, a data entry machine operator in the state Department of Education in Albany, has been active since 1976 in many areas of CSEA and has been president of the Education Department CSEA Local 657 since 1989.

Lawson is also chair of the CSEA Region IV Anti-Apartheid Committee and serves on the region's Education Committee. In addition to her union involvement she serves on the state Education Department's Cultural Diversity Committee and is chair of the department's Employee Assistance Committee. Lawson is also active in several community programs and projects.

Joining Lawson on the Committee on Minority Issues are Helen Dupree, Region I; Bill Vassili, Region II; John Catoe, Region III; Walter Smith, Region V and Robert Mootry, Region VI.

Interest rate drops, again, on AFSCME MasterCard

The AFSCME Advantage MasterCard, available to CSEA members, is one of the very best credit card programs in America. And it just got even better.

The AFSCME MasterCard has no annual fee and one of the lowest interest rates anywhere - just 5 percent above the prime lending rate.

The interest rate on the AFSCME MasterCard has dropped five times this year, most recently in early November. The interest rate is currently 1.99 percent, about 6 percent below the average rate of 19 percent charged by the nation's largest banks for their credit cards.

To obtain an application form for the AFSCME MasterCard, call your CSEA regional office.

The card is issued by the Bank of New York. If you apply for a card and there is no response within four weeks, call the bank toll-free at 1-800-942-1977.

Foster parents need love, patience and commitment

By Anita Manley
CSEA Communications Associate

WEST HAVERSTRAW - How do you love a child and then give him or her up? Ask any foster parent and they'll tell you it isn't easy, but they do it over and over again.

Ray Canale, a hospital clinical assistant and member of CSEA Helen Hayes Hospital Local 302 and his wife, Priscilla, know. They have done it a few times.

Raised by parents who took in 45 foster children in 25 years, Priscilla is the backbone of the Canale foster home, according to Ray.

"If it wasn't for my wife, I couldn't do it," Canale said. "She's with them all the time and puts a lot of work into it."

It takes more than love to care for a foster child, he said.

"Love is giving, caring and sharing, but it goes beyond that," he said. "You have to be able to give total acceptance."

Canale is dissatisfied with the foster care system.

"The authorities need to decide what to do with these kids," he said. "They're bounced around. We're breeding kids to be problems. They're crying out for attention and they get into trouble. The legal system has to change."

The first child the Canales cared for was a 10-day-old baby who they eventually adopted.

Canale talks about another child, a boy, whose mother was a drug addict. She attended a drug rehabilitation center and the boy was returned to her.

Canale keeps in touch with the family and sends care packages.

"We call him on a regular basis," Canale said. "I won't give three years of my life to a child and then forget him up? But you love them anyway."

Canale said more foster parents are needed — "if you have the time and the love to give."

Some of the children come for just a few days. Others stay for years. Some are handicapped. Many come at a moment's notice. Those interested should contact their county children's services department for more information.

Canale advises parents who are thinking of becoming foster parents to be prepared to make sacrifices.

"It's a full time commitment with a lot of responsibility."

CSEA MEMBERS Ray Canale, a foster parent, and Joyce Mills, once a foster child.

She knows how much caring counts

WEST HAVERSTRAW - Joyce Mills has a special feeling for foster parents and children.

She knows what it's like. Mills, a secretary at Helen Hayes Hospital, spent many years living in foster homes after her parents divorced and her mother became unable to care for her.

Her happiest memories are of the foster family she went to live with in Cornwall (Orange County) when she was just two and a half. It was her ninth foster home. Later she lived with relatives and eventually returned to her mother.

Her foster family provided her with love, affection and hugs, commodities she desperately needed at that time in her life, she recalled.

"To be without your mother is devastating," she said. "You're like an eggshell, but empty inside."

"The most important thing my foster parents gave me were hugs. It's so important."

CSEA supports fight to free Joe Doherty

NEW YORK: "Time is running out for Joe Doherty," CSEA Region II President George Boncoraglio said at rally for the jailed Irish nationalist.

In his ninth year in federal prison, Joe Doherty has never been convicted of or even charged with any crime in the United States, said CSEA Executive Vice President Danny Donohue, who introduced a resolution in support of Doherty at CSEA's Annual Delegates Meeting in October.

"America has always been a place of asylum for the oppressed and a haven for the politically persecuted," Donohue said, "and a House of Representatives resolution passed in 1989 calls upon the Attorney General to grant Doherty political asylum."

"The federal government's attempt to deport Doherty on the ground that he entered the country illegally flies in the face of human rights," Boncoraglio said. "It's time we joined our voices with so many other unions and groups concerned with human rights violations, and let Joe Doherty know we are all behind him."

Washington, where the Supreme Court is scheduled to hear Bush administration arguments in favor of deporting her son to Britain.

Doherty, arrested in Queens after fleeing to the United States before his trial, claims the killing was a "act of combat" resulting from the struggle to free Northern Ireland from British control.

"We call him on a regular basis," Canale said. "I won't give three years of my life to a child and then forget him up? But you love them anyway."

"The most important thing my foster parents gave me were hugs. It's so important."

CSEA sets first Local/Unit election committee teleconference training Jan. 18

For the first time, CSEA will offer local and unit election committee chairs and election committee members training via a satellite teleconference in January.

The CSEA Election Procedures Teleconference is designed to help the committees as they prepare for the elections of local and unit officers.

The teleconference will be broadcast Jan. 18 in conjunction with on-site training across the state.

Election committee chairs and members must pre-register for the teleconference with their CSEA region office. Local Executive Boards should select their Election Committee and chairperson in time to participate in this teleconference. The normal appointment deadline is too late. Local and unit officers who want to attend must also pre-register. Pre-registration forms are available from the region office. The pre-registration deadline is Dec. 15. Those who are pre-registered will receive written confirmation.

No reservations will be accepted at the teleconference site.

For more information on registering for the Local/Unit Elections Procedures Teleconference nearest you, contact your region office.

For information other than registration, call Sean M. Turley, education and training specialist, at 518-434-0191 ext. 458 or 1-800-342-4146 ext. 458.

Following is a list of teleconference sites:

CSEA scored important general election victories in November’s general elections. The union supported a number of candidates across the state who won their elections. Here are three examples of CSEA victories.

Turning things around

In Cattaraugus County, CSEA’s political action efforts helped turn around the majority on the County Legislature.

The Legislature, which has had a 14 to 9 Republican majority, imposed a contract on county employees. The unfair imposition energized the CSEA members, and many helped in campaigns of CSEA-endorsed candidates, said John Ostergard, CSEA Cattaraugus County Local 805 president.

When the newly-elected Legislature takes over in January, it will have a 12 to 11 Democratic majority.

Want to be a National Party Delegate?

If you’re interested in running as a delegate or alternate to the Democratic National Convention or the Republican National Convention, contact CSEA statewide Political Action Committee Chair Sean Egan right away at CSEA’s Legislative and Political Action Department.

Due to a unanimous decision made by the HMO Workgroup, no new enrollments will be allowed into the Capital District Physicians' Health Plan for the 1992 plan year. If you are currently enrolled in the CDPHP option, you can remain a subscriber in 1992 or you may transfer to another HMO option or The Empire Plan.

This action will affect all active as well as retired employees who reside or work in CDPHP's service area.

The HMO Workgroup is comprised of representatives from the Governor's Office of Employee Relations, the NYS Department of Civil Service and the six labor unions representing public employees in New York state.

Empire Plan introducing mental health and substance abuse program Feb. 1

The CSEA/NYS Joint Committee on Health benefits is working toward the implementation of the Empire Plan's new Managed Care, Mental Health and Substance Abuse Program.

Over the last six months, an extensive review of managed care vendors resulted in the final selection of American PsychManagement, a highly qualified and experienced vendor in the field of managed mental health and substance abuse care. This review consisted of written proposals from the various vendors, participation at the bidders interview/presentation and on-site visits to the vendor's intake facility and a current major client.

When in need of mental health and substance abuse treatment, many find it difficult and confusing, asking themselves questions such as: "Who do I call? What help can I get? What kind of care would be best?" and "How do I pay?"

With the cost of mental health and substance abuse treatment rising faster than other health plan costs, Empire Plan enrollees, as well as others across the country, have found it more and more difficult to afford the necessary care. Beginning Feb. 1, 1992, the new program will answer your questions and make quality treatment more available and affordable.

The Empire Plan's Mental Health and Substance Abuse Program will give you and your family:

* Enhanced mental health and substance abuse benefits and reduced out-of-pocket expenses when you call American PsychManagement before your treatment begins and follow the recommended treatment plan:
  * A 24-hour telephone referral service for mental health and substance abuse treatment:
    * An extensive network of credentialed practitioners and facilities;
    * Support for treatment already in progress;
    * Help with mental health and substance abuse emergencies; and
    * Confidential referral and treatment review.
  * Refer to the upcoming January issue of The Public Sector and "Empire Plan Report" for more in-depth details about the new Empire Plan Mental Health and Substance Abuse Program.

Bayport workers protest stalled talks

CONTRACT NOW -- Teachers assistants and custodial staff in the Bayport/Bluepoint School District, with support from other district employees, demonstrated at a recent school board meeting. About 165 people picketed, despite freezing temperatures. They were protesting the lack of a contract agreement. Negotiations are at impasse. The previous pact expired June 30. The CSEA units have have about 90 members. They are part of CSEA Suffolk Educational Local 870.

It's never too late

CSEA member runs first marathon

POUGHKEEPSIE - Bob McIntire is always on the run, but now he has something new to be proud of — his first 26.2 mile marathon.

McIntire, 46, is electrician’s helper at Poughkeepsie School District and member of CSEA Dutchess County Educational Local 867. He now hopes to try the New York City Marathon.

"It's a confidence-building thing," said McIntire, who has run 10-mile races before.

He began running about 10 years ago to keep his weight down. In fact, McIntire averages about 50 miles a week. He also lifts weights, plays tennis and skis.

Of the recent race which was sponsored by the Poughkeepsie Journal and the Mid Hudson Runners Club, McIntire said, "the last three miles were the toughest. I cried when I finished."

He advises anyone who is thinking of running to see a physician first and then follow a good training program, which cuts down on injuries.

He also urged potential marathon runners to eat right and rest before running.

"Don't eat a lot of red meat and don't smoke and use very little alcohol or caffeine," he said.

"Age doesn't matter. I'm 46," McIntire said. "There are others in their 50's and 60's who run marathons."

Local 878 President Patricia Dempsey dies

HEUVELTON — CSEA members are mourning the death of longtime CSEA activist Patricia Dempsey.

Dempsey, who most recently served as local president of CSEA St. Lawrence County Educational Employees Local 873, was a bus driver for the Heuvelton Central School District for 13 years. She was the first president for the local.

Dempsey also drove for the village’s summer youth program for more than 10 years.

She was also a state-certified master instructor for school bus training and the president of the local chapter of the New York Association for Pupil Transportation.

Before becoming a CSEA local president, she was unit president for eight years. Current Local 873 President Shirley Cline said Dempsey was "an outstanding lady."

"She was so active," Cline said. "If anyone ever needed help, she was there."

In her memory, CSEA Local 871, with the New York Association for Pupil Transportation, have established a fund to benefit the school's band. Contributions to the fund may be sent to:

Two Amsterdam units settle contracts

AMSTERDAM - After months of protests, public and private, noisy and silent, the CSEA Greater Amsterdam School District Clerical Unit and Custodial Unit have new three-year contracts.

Hammered out in super conciliation, the contracts include three new salary steps and three salary increases.

"After 18 months of long, tedious negotiations a contract was finally reached," said Custodial Unit President Michale Saj. Elsie Corcuera, Clerical Unit president, agreed with Saj.

The School Aides Unit had settled with the district earlier.

CSEA fighting several furlough, layoff schemes

Editor's Note: Budgetary difficulties at the local government level are impacting heavily upon CSEA members across the state. Attempts by management to force contract concessions are causing huge labor-management problems in Nassau and Westchester counties. Erie County workers feel an imposed contract doesn't go far enough and Onondaga County members rejected an unacceptable offer.

Many local governments are turning to layoffs, including the city of Fulton which recently laid off a third of its workforce without warning. Montgomery County's proposed budget calls for a whopping 163 layoffs.

Nassau County

Nassau County began furloughing CSEA Local 830 members without pay beginning the day after Thanksgiving despite CSEA winning a temporary restraining order on Thanksgiving Eve. The Supreme Court order was automatically lifted when the county immediately appealed. As this issue of The Public Sector went to press, CSEA was seeking a ruling from the state's Appellate Court that would halt furloughs.

Expressing confidence that the furlough plan will eventually be ruled illegal, CSEA Nassau County Local 830 President Rita Wallace said "going through with the furloughs the day after Thanksgiving will cause irreparable harm to the members and the union. CSEA advised Local 830 members to report for work even if they were told they were out on furlough. The county is furloughing CSEA members without pay one day each of 18 pay periods. "We told the membership to show up, sign in and let it be on record that they were prepared to work and the county sent them home," Wallace said.

Nassau County resorted to furloughs after CSEA filed Improper Practice charges when the county threatened to lay off workers after the union refused to give back a scheduled pay raise in the current contract.

Westchester County

Westchester County is threatening to lay off hundreds of county employees unless CSEA agrees to give up raises due in 1992. Something union officials refuse to consider.

"We have no intention of giving up our contractual raises," said Cheryl Melton, president of the CSEA Westchester County Unit of Local 860.

Melton said the union is working with county lawmakers to find an alternative to layoffs and she urged county workers, their families and friends to pack a Westchester County budget hearing scheduled for Dec. 16.

"For us to give up something that has been negotiated in good faith is unthinkable and there's no guarantee that it won't happen again," noted CSEA Region III President Pat Masciioli.

Erie County

CSEA Erie County Unit officials are seeking further improvements in a one-year imposed contract that boosted wages 4.75 percent.

Unit President Stephen Caruana said the imposed contract falls short of a factfinder's recommendations and the union is seeking to have the imposed settlement modified to include items that were agreed to before negotiations reached impasse.

Contract talks failed when county negotiators insisted the 4,400-member white collar unit accept a three-year contract with less benefits than had been granted to other county unions.

City of Fulton

City of Fulton CSEA officials in the city of Fulton are fuming after the city's mayor met secretly with members of the city's common council and other city officials to finalize surprise resolutions that chopped more than one-third of the city's workforce.

"The city ramrode these job cuts through, after concocting them in secret meetings, and lied to CSEA about their plans," said CSEA Region V President Jim Moore. "What they did is absolutely illegal, immoral and deplorable. They should be ashamed of their actions."

Montgomery County

CSEA is working for alternatives to massive layoffs called for as part of Montgomery County's proposed budget. The county administrator's proposed budget calls for laying off 163 county workers.

Schuyler County Local 849 sponsors yard sale to benefit a strapped county budget

WATKINS GLEN - If yard sales are a profitable way to get rid of unwanted objects, CSEA Schuyler County activists decided they could make a yard sale work for the county.

Countering charges that the union was unwilling to "share the pain" to ease the county's budget deficit burden, local activists came up with the yard sale idea to benefit the county budget fund. They called it the "Share the Pain Yard Sale," CSEA Schuyler County Local 849 President Lore Oswald said.

"We raised more than $1,000 in the yard sale to help bust the deficit," she said. "We're very pleased that we received such support."

The county Legislature asked the union to re-open the contract that they ratified less than a year ago, and the union flatly refused, Oswald said. The union was unwilling to let the county take away what they had promised the employees in good faith, and to balance the deficit at the expense of the employee. It was simply "not an option," she said. The county then criticized the union for not "sharing the pain."

"We were more than willing to sit down with the county and discuss ideas to lower the deficit," Oswald said. "But the county didn't want to listen. They just wanted to take away what they gave us in negotiations. We couldn't allow that."

The union then came up with the idea for the yard sale.

Gathering items from the homes of many local members and county residents, they held the sale outside the county courthouse on an early fall Saturday. The union was very pleased with the result, Oswald said.

She presented the money to the county legislature at a recent meeting, and said that while it was financially only a "drop in the bucket," symbolically it was of far greater importance.

"This showed the county that we are certainly willing to help 'share the pain' and that we are willing to work with them to constructively solve our budget problem," she said. "We hope that this will be a signal for the county that it is time to try and solve our problems jointly, rather than throwing the burden just on the employees."

Onondaga County

Onondaga County CSEA Local 834 members recently rejected a contract proposal, continuing a contract dispute.

Local 834 President Dale King speculated the county's offer was rejected because it offered no raise for 1991. Raises proposed for 1992 and 1993 would have amounted to nine percent over the three-year period.

CSEA and Onondaga County will now go back to the bargaining table with a factfinder appointed by the state Public Employment Relations Board.
CSEA wins job back for member fired because of union activities

NEW PALTZ - Village officials violated the rights of employee James Noon when they fired him because of his union participation.

CSEA filed an improper practice (IP) charge with the Public Employment Relations Board (PERB) against the village and won his reinstatement with back pay and benefits.

PERB Administrative Law Judge Gordon R. Mayo ruled that Noon's dismissal was a result of discrimination because of Noon's participation in his union. He ordered village officials to re-instate him with full back pay and benefits lost during the months he was unemployed.

Testimony during the hearing indicated that Noon's supervisor clearly demonstrated on a number of occasions that he did not approve of Noon's activities and even threatened that he would have him fired when Noon announced that he was planning to run for CSEA unit president.

The supervisor has since resigned and did not testify during the hearing.

Mayo rejected both village officials' contention that Noon was fired for incompetence and its technical evidence that the charges were not filed on time.

"Having rejected the village's substantive and technical defenses to the charge," Mayo said, "I find that Noon was discharged in retaliation for his union activities."

"CSEA will not tolerate any effort of local government officials to discriminate against activists," Ulster County Local 856 President Elizabeth "Betty" Gordon said.

"The village made every effort to interfere with CSEA's ability to represent its membership. James Noon wanted to take on a leadership role," she said. "In this day and age, you would think that village officials would not attempt to set labor relations back to the days prior to the Taylor Law."

CSEA Attorney William A. Herbert emphasized that employees who engage in union activity are protected against retaliation by management.

"CSEA will fight to protect those rights," Herbert said. "This kind of blatant anti-union discrimination will not be tolerated."

HOME RULE VICTORY -- CSEA Region I President Gloria Moran and CSEA Political Action Coordinator Stephanie Teff prepare to speak in favor of a home rule message that gives peace officers in Nassau County a 25-year retirement plan.

CSEA enforces East Fishkill contract, wins extra raise

EAST FISHKILL - Thanks to a clause in the CSEA contract and a successful grievance, police dispatchers and records clerks in the Dutchess County town of East Fishkill have received substantial salary hikes over and above their negotiated increase.

Unit President Ann Doherty explained that the clause provided for a salary increase if other town employees not in the bargaining unit receive increases over 6 percent.

Following a re-classification, non-union clerks, typists and justice clerks saw increases in their salaries of up to 30 percent.

Because of the apparent discrepancy, Doherty decided to pursue a grievance with her union. While CSEA members agreed not to reveal the exact amount of the settlement, Doherty said she was satisfied with what she and the nine CSEA unit members have received from the town.

"I'm very pleased with the way this turned out," she said. "CSEA responds to violent and aggressive toward the peace officers whose job it is to monitor their behavior.

The 25-year retirement will also offer an incentive to attract career-oriented peace officers from other law enforcement positions in the county, CSEA Unit President Jane D'Amico said.

The retirement plan will entitle peace officers in the Nassau County Probation Department to retire after 25 years of service, regardless of age, CSEA Political Action Coordinator Stephanie Teff said.

The law takes effect in 1994. It also provides an additional retirement allowance for service beyond 25 years and a credit for prior non-peace officer service completed in Nassau County.

Peace officers must serve for five years after the Jan. 1, 1991, effective date before they are eligible for these provisions.

CSEA Probation Unit members Cheryl Garber, Chuck Silver, Mike Vecchiarelli and George Thorsen, who are also members of the Nassau County Probation Officers Association, actively lobbied for the bills.

CSEA members make Beacon recycling project a real winner

"BEACON - CSEA members in the Dutchess County City of Beacon are cleaning up — and not just the city’s recyclable material.
They’re also collecting the credit for a successful recycling project.
The members of CSEA Dutchess County Local 814 are credited with the success of the project that recently won a 1991 Local Government Achievement Award from Empire State Report magazine.
Started two years ago with a state grant, the project was boosted with additional grants to help the city comply with new recycling laws.

The city now recycles about 55 percent of its waste. Separating bottles, cans and paper is just part of the recycling project. At the Beacon transfer station, leaf waste is being composted and sold to local residents, used wooden pallets are chipped and processed for use in gardens, and furniture, appliances and tires are accepted for a small fee. The appliances are compacted and sold for scrap. Even the transfer station and coordinator’s office are recycled; they are in what was once the city’s incinerator.
Project coordinator Shabazz Jackson, a member of Local 814, said fliers and radio ads helped spread the word. An educational program aimed at school children helped to assure the future of the program, he said.
"We focused on the school kids because they’re going to be producing waste for the next 70 years," Jackson said. "Kids are not resistant to these programs."
City of Beacon transfer station workers appreciate the project’s contribution to the city. Unit President Sandy Frost said.
The benefit of the program is, of course, environmental. In addition, according to Empire State Report, the system has brought the waste budget under control after seven years of cost overruns.

CSEA-negotiated program lets Westchester workers study for free at community college

The opportunity to attend Westchester Community College at no charge, negotiated by CSEA and Westchester County, has prompted Belalcazar and 449 other county workers to take advantage of the many programs offered at WCC.
