The Governor's message to the Legislature last week had almost nothing as far as the employees of the State. The Governor said nothing about pay raises, nothing about the Senate veterans preference question, nothing about the broad field of public employees labor relations. Nevertheless, these were not taken as grave omen, for in these employes' eyes, the Governor made it clear, near the end of his talk, that he was about to bring your attention to other matters.

Answering to Senate Democrats who attacked the measure for what it had left out. Behind the Scenes.

Moreover, the rival employers, masters, negotiations have been progressing quietly, although it is not yet possible to predict results. Representatives of the Service Employees Association have been meeting with the Budget Director, and have amassed an

A permanent pay regrading of the five civil-service grades for NYC Clerk has been proposed by Budget Director Thomas J. Petersen. It would neither raise nor pay answer. Yes, but by no means all of the officials of the budgetary group. The NYC Civil Service Commission will hold a public hearing on the proposal on Monday at 3:30 p.m., on Wednesday, January 29, 1949, Broadway, near Diane Street.

The NYC Civil Service Commission for the re-grading of the clerical service grades of Grade 5 and 6, excepting the New York, N, Y., and New Jersey is now open for applications for all of the bonus. The examination is open to all employees of the Civil Service Commission. The announcement is No. 8-1 (1949).

They have now successfully imposed an array of facts, dealing with pay and promotion, and with the question of disfavoring arrays.

The new civil service reform movement has also made great strides in recent years. The civil service reform movement has been able to secure a number of important victories. The doctrine of sovereignty belongs to the past. It is outmoded both in the International and the domestic field. The reign of law means the end of despotism of all kinds, magnificent and petty alike. Democracy means more than government by the consent of the people, it means government by and for all the people themselves. The end and the method of democracy is more democracy. The end and the method of the government's labor relations must be the establishment of a full partnership and working together of all public workers who serve the people through the State.

Everything that tends to reduce the status of the free man to that of a serf or a second class citizen is just as much a crime in New York as it was in Germany or in Russia. This is a reason why the State holds tightly to its powers and privileges, but this reason is not the one most often advanced and propagated. There is no great gulf inviolable between the laborer in industry and the worker in government. The rights of the private worker have been established and protected by law. These laws together constitute the labor law of the State and nation. The rights and privileges of the public worker are similarly established and protected by law. These laws together constitute the Civil Service law and the public officers law. Some provisions of the labor law also apply to the public worker.

Questions at Issue

The questions at issue are chiefly of two patterns: (1) the civil service pattern and (2) the labor pattern, which offers the best framework for good and ever improving personnel relations in the public service. Labor unions are not from civil service, and there is no limit to the power to borrow from industry or any other source or to create better labor practices for the civil service.

We do have both labor unions and civil service associations operating in Government. It is abundantly evident that trade unions operate under a handicap by failing to appreciate the law and climate of government service. For myself, I believe it is wiser to hold fast to that which is good in the civil service system and to press forward for constant improvements in its structure and function.

Nearly forty years ago, Nicholas Murray Butler, President of Columbia University and the sage of the Republican party, called this problem "beyond comparison the most important which modern democracies have to face."

New Machinery For Civil Service

The New Machinery for Civil Service is a part of a much larger program of modernizing the civil service machinery. The program involves the use of modern examining techniques, and of enlarging the intensity of civil service recruiting.

The Commission, which is the most important part of this program, is an informal one, and it must consider ways of relieving the pressure now divided among three commissions: the State Commission on the Interstate Examining Board, the Public Employment Commission, and the Municipal Civil Service Commission. It is not the mission of the Commission to make academic judgements, but rather to give the most careful thought to the question: How can civil service in the State of New York be improved? The committee is an informal one, and it must consider ways of relieving the pressure now divided among three commissions.

The proposed reclassification of the civil service will deprive the employees of those equal opportunities which are the fruit of such reclassification. The fundamental principle of civil service is the principle of competitive examination. The competitive examination is the best method of selecting the most efficient and capable non-disabled veterans, and non-disabled employees who possess the necessary qualifications.

The Mitchell Bill is more desirable and equitable than the present law. It grants a reasonable preference to all veterans in both entrance and promotional examinations and this preference may be regularly increased in the future. The Mitchell Bill would reward equitably the deserving and capable non-disabled veterans.

Veteran Preference Proposals

Vet Preference Proposals

(Continued from Page 6) from entering civil service or from being promoted. If the Condon Bill is passed by the Legislature and placed on the books, there will result in the deaths of many of the disabled veterans, causing much bitterness and seriously affecting the morale of civil service.

A Recently Suggested Proposal

Some groups suggest that a new law be enacted into effect immediately, providing for the preferential treatment of all disabled veterans. This proposal is designed to ensure that all disabled veterans receive the same treatment as any other person who has served in the military.

The proposal suggests that all disabled veterans be given preference in employment, education, and other areas of life. This would ensure that they receive the same benefits as any other veteran, and would help to ensure that they are able to live fulfilling lives.

Veterans who have served in the military are often faced with a variety of challenges, including physical and mental disabilities. These challenges can make it difficult for them to find employment, education, and other opportunities. The proposal is designed to ensure that these veterans receive the same opportunities as other veterans, and that they are able to live fulfilling lives.

The proposal is supported by many groups, including veterans organizations, civil rights groups, and others. They believe that it is important to ensure that disabled veterans are treated fairly and given the same opportunities as other veterans.

The proposal has been introduced in many states, and is currently being considered in Congress. If it is passed, it would be a major step forward in ensuring that disabled veterans are treated fairly and given the same opportunities as other veterans.
