CSEA and state negotiators have reached tentative agreement on a four-year contract covering more than 100,000 state employees after 17 months of hard-nosed bargaining.

The tentative contract was reached at the conclusion of intense, around-the-clock bargaining that included a final 28-hour marathon session in mid-April. Formal bargaining resumed in mid-April after months of impasse, during which formal mediation efforts failed. The negotiated agreement was reached just as both sides were scheduled to participate in hearings before a three-person fact-finding panel in a last ditch attempt to resolve the contract before the dispute would have gone to the state Legislature for an imposition.

CSEA state employee members will vote soon on ratification of the tentative four-year contract. The tentative agreement, retroactive to April 1, 1991, includes three salary increases and two bonus payments over the next two years and provides increments and longevity payments for the length of the contract.

The agreement also continues health insurance benefits at their current levels for the duration of the contract, retains leave accruals unchanged and increases state contributions to the CSEA Employee Benefit Fund to help offset increasing costs for prescription drug, dental and vision care benefits.

Local 418 has women's meeting

BRENTWOOD—Pilgrim PC CSEA Local 418 held its second annual Women's Committee Luncheon recently. CSEA Long Island Region President Gloria Moran, CSEA Statewide Secretary Irene Carr and Local 418 President Pat Hahn spoke at the meeting.

Moran, who began her union career as president of the Nassau County Crossing Guards Unit, discussed the increased options for women.

Carr, who has been an advocate for women's issues, including day care and ergonomically correct VDT equipment, talked about women's rights and the need for women to be involved in their union.

Metro region marks Black history, culture

NEW YORK - Tambourines, drum rhythms, jazz musicians, African and African-American art filled CSEA's Metropolitan Region offices in a celebration of the rich cultural heritage of black history.

The "Rhythms of Celebration" program coordinated by CSEA member Joyce Idowu delighted union members who filled the hall.

A former professional performer, now a state tax compliance agent, Idowu is a fireball of energy and creativity, motivated by a strong desire to heal the wounds of racial divisions. As a cultural diversity trainer for the Tax and Finance Department, she sees the arts as an "international language bridging cultural differences."

"The polarization of races is due to a breakdown in communications between the various ethnic groups. That so many different ethnic and racial groups can live and work together in one city is the greatest strength of New York and if we lose this, it's a loss not only to our city, but to the whole country," Idowu said.

Using slides, music, poetry and art, Idowu's troop of performers presented CSEA members with a banquet of cultural diversity, topped off with soul food desserts.

"The Black History Month celebration points up our staunch commitment to racial harmony and understanding that is at the heart of real unionism," CSEA Metropolitan Region President George Boncoraglio said.

covers more than 100,000 state employees in the Administrative Services, Institutional Services, Operational Services and Division of Military and Naval Affairs bargaining units.

“A fair and equitable agreement”

“Our goal was to negotiate a fair and equitable agreement in light of the state’s financial situation, and we have done just that,” CSEA President Joe McDermott said. “I have the highest praise and respect for our union negotiators for hammering out this contract under the most difficult of conditions. I highly recommend that CSEA members accept this contract and I anticipate overwhelming approval.”

Bargaining was conducted during a period when the state was in its deepest fiscal deficit in history. During negotiations the state resorted to massive layoffs and lagged salaries of employees and initially offered no salary raises while demanding reductions in leave accruals and health insurance programs.

“We were able to negotiate these substantial increases and continue increments and longevity payments despite tremendous uncertainty over the state’s fiscal plight during the contract period,” McDermott said. “And the two bonus payments we negotiated actually provide state workers eight days of pay for the five days lagged since employees will still get the five day lag at the rate of pay upon separation from state service.”

BalLOTS to be mailed in late May

Ratification ballots and contract fact sheets will be mailed to eligible CSEA members the week of May 17. The deadline date for returning ballots is June 5. A series of informational meetings to provide details of the tentative contract were scheduled to be held in each CSEA region in late April and early May.

Here are some contract highlights:

ARTICLE 7 - COMPENSATION

Across the board increases

4% April 1, 1993
4% April 1, 1994
1.25% October 1, 1994

Longevities: No change

Increments:

Effective 4/1/92, the salary schedule shall be stretched from 5 steps to 7. Employees entitled to an increment in Fiscal Year 91-92 shall receive full retroactive cash payment based on the 5 step schedule. However, the increment shall be added to base salary on 4/1/92 based on the 7 step schedule. Increments will no longer be tied to anniversary dates, but will be paid on April 1 of each succeeding year. Stretching the salary schedule to 7 steps will not affect eligibility for longevities of employees who are at or above the job rate.

Downstate Adjustment:

The dollar amount ($701) will not be affected by the change in increments and will be increased by the across the board increases during the term of the contract.

Bonuses:

Two bonuses have been negotiated, payable in December 1993 and September 1994 as payment for CSEA dropping all lag payroll litigation. The bonuses are the equivalent of slightly more than three days salary for each employee (approximately one and one-half days per bonus). Employees will continue to receive the five day lag at their rate of pay upon separation from State service. Thus, employees will receive payment totaling eight days for the original five day lag that was taken in December, 1990.

ARTICLE 11 - WORKERS’ COMPENSATION

The supplemental pay program under Article 11 is eliminated. Employees will receive the statutory benefit. Employees certified 100% disabled will receive 2/3 of their average weekly wage up to $400 (effective 7/1/92). The statutory benefit is not taxable. In addition, the State shall continue to pay its share for Health Insurance, Employee Benefit Fund and service credit in the Retirement System. Leave credits and seniority will continue to be accrued as though the employee were still on payroll.

For employees who are 50% disabled or less, as defined under the Workers’ Compensation Law, a mandatory alternative duty policy will be developed. Employees shall return to duty at full pay for up to 45 days. Medical clearance must be obtained to participate in the alternative duty program. It is anticipated that procedures for obtaining medical clearance will be consistent with those contained in Article 10.19 of the ISU Contract. Employees who meet the eligibility requirements, but are not given an alternative duty assignment, will receive the statutory benefit as if they were 100% disabled for the 45 days. Alternative duty may be extended for up to an additional 45 days at the discretion of management. Employees will be expected to return to full duty at the conclusion of alternative duty.

ARTICLE 9 - HEALTH INSURANCE

Employee Benefit Fund (Article 20) DMNA

The employer contribution to the Benefit Fund has been significantly increased over the term of the agreement. During the last year of the previous agreement the State paid $610 per employee per year. That will be gradually increased to a total of $816.50 per employee per year for the 1994-95 Fiscal Year. Approximately $35 million additional will be added to the Fund over the four year period.

As you know, certain changes were made to the Empire Plan in the Spring of 1991 in order to keep the Benefit Fund functioning. Those changes will continue. They include the waiver of the $5/$15 chronic care service co-pay, a $15 hospital outpatient co-pay (that is waived if admission occurs at that time), discontinuance of the dual eligibility benefit, changes in the deductible and maximum out-of-pocket expenses, deferral of health insurance coverage and unused sick leave credits for up to five years upon retirement and a managed mental health and substance abuse program.

New state budget has fewer layoffs

The state Legislature passed a $56.5 billion budget a day after the April 1 deadline.

While the new budget includes cuts, taxes and layoffs, it is not as bad as it could have been with the state's ongoing fiscal crisis.

Perhaps the best news is that layoffs, earlier projected to be as high as 3,900, have been reduced to 2,100 for all bargaining units.

"The budget will reduce the need for layoffs, and that is good," CSEA President Joe McDermott said. "But we're not happy about any layoffs. CSEA will continue to work to mitigate them as much as possible."

The 1992-93 budget passed by the Legislature restored $107,000 for the Northeast Forensic Unit of the Office of Mental Health and $500,000 for the Excelsior Capital Corp., which affects CSEA's home mortgage program.

The Office of Mental Retardation and Developmental Disabilities (OMRDD) will have $200,000 to develop community residence beds as it begins closing Syracuse Developmental Center.

An important victory for CSEA was that the Legislature did not consolidate the Division for Probation and Correctional Alternatives with the state Parole Department.

CSEA lobbied hard against the consolidation, which could have cost jobs while cutting back on a cost-effective alternative to incarceration.

The budget also raises more than $1 billion in new revenues through taxes and fees. While making some improvements, the Legislature has not answered the issue of fairness in the income tax system.

CSEA will continue its fight for fairness, including higher taxes for the wealthy and the closing of corporate tax loopholes.

SUNY Cortland members rally over cuts to higher education

CORTLAND — CSEA SUNY College at Cortland Local 605 has been holding rallies to promote union solidarity and protest cuts in the SUNY system.

A "Save Cortland Rally" highlighted the effects of budget cuts on SUNY in recent years, including larger classes, reduced library hours, loss of programs, less custodial staff, cancelled courses and increased workloads for staff.

Several campus groups sponsored the rally, including CSEA, and it was well attended by students, CSEA members and other union members.

Sponsored by a coalition, the rally's goal was to shed light on the state budget and how cuts affect public employees, the poor and the private sector.

Keynote speaker for the rally was Julie Davis, secretary-treasurer of the Ontario Federation of Labor and vice president of the New Democratic Party in Canada.

CSEA protests contracting out at new lab

ALBANY — "Our jobs are NOT for sale" echoed and re-echoed in the narrow confines of a hallway of Empire State Plaza convention center as more than 100 protesters blocked the passageway.

More than a dozen private contractors couldn't get through the protest to a meeting where they were to get information from the state Health Department on jobs available for contract workers at the new Wadsworth Labs and Research Center.

"This is just another example of the foolishness of the state of New York," said CSEA Capital Region President C. Allen Mead. "We have highly qualified state employees who have been laid off and here the state wants to contract out jobs that these workers used to do. On top of that, the state has already said this idea will not save the taxpayers anything."

"State employees are currently running a variety of labs throughout the state so the state can't say the workers don't have the skills needed," CSEA Division of Laboratories and Research Local 665 President John O'Keefe said. "We have the ability and expertise."

In order to combat the contracting out of the more than 75 jobs at the Wadsworth lab, CSEA has launched a lobbying effort with state legislators. Many have indicated support for CSEA's position that these jobs should be filled by public employees, not private sector contract employees.
At Mohawk Valley PC, Members take lead in fight for survival

EDITORS NOTE — CSEA’s ongoing fight for the future of the state mental health system is gathering momentum. Stating that state mental health policy is The Shame of All New York, the union’s message has been loud and clear: Don’t abandon the mentally ill; don’t waste the workforce; and use psychiatric center campuses better.

While CSEA has coordinated the campaign through activities and materials on a statewide and regional basis, the effectiveness depends on the effort of individual CSEA members and locals in their own communities.

At Mohawk Valley Psychiatric Center, CSEA Local 434’s activities provide a prime example of how to build community support and involvement.

UTICA — Fighting for their future is not a new experience for members of CSEA Mohawk Valley Psychiatric Center Local 434. For nearly 20 years the facility has been subject to consolidations, name changes, conversions and closure attempts. Throughout it all the local members have fought to maintain the quality care they provide.

But like other state psychiatric centers, MVPC now faces a new, major challenge. The Office of Mental Health (OMH) capital plan calls for significantly downsizing the facility from its current population of 650 patients to between 150 to 200 patients within 10 years.

“Our members understand clearly that OMH plans mean losing jobs and the end of quality care for some very sick people,” CSEA MVPC Local 434 President Bud Mulchy said. “But we’re making sure the community understands how this will affect them.”

“The bottom line is that localities will end up paying more and getting less,” he said. “But, there’s more to it. This facility, in fact any psychiatric center, has a huge impact on the local economy, and that’s a big part of the message we have to get across.”

The local is making its point. Local 434 has distributed CSEA’s The Shame of All New York brochure to build community support, has blitzed the local media with information about the situation, and prepared a briefing report for community leaders, including the facility’s economic facts.

“The economic information we compiled from MVPC records was a real eye-opener for a lot of people, particularly the business leaders,” Mulchy said.

For example, the facility’s payroll is about $45 million, much of which employees spend in the community and use to pay local property and school taxes. But there’s a lot more impact through facility spending, such as $680,000 on food purchased from area companies. The facility purchases about $1,000 worth of produce locally every month and another $8,000 worth of bananas annually.

“Last year the Utica area Chamber of Commerce was bashing public employees,” Mulchy said. “This year we met with them and presented our information and they’re working with us enthusiastically because they recognize what’s at stake.”

CSEA is also lining up the support of area elected officials. Local 434 recently briefed all area political leaders and 500 employees at a meeting at the facility.

“We wanted the politicians to understand what a vital resource we are, and we wanted them to see first-hand the care that employees give,” Mulchy said. “A number of the officials told me the reality of the care and the environment that we create for the patients is completely different from what OMH would have the public believe psychiatric centers are all about.”

CSEA also made it clear the “alternative” care OMH promises for the mentally ill means dumping the problem onto communities.

Whether at Mohawk Valley Psychiatric Center or any other OMH facility across the state, it will not be easy to change OMH policy, but the campaign underway at Mohawk Valley demonstrates the kind of effort needed at the grassroots level across the state.

MVPC care an 'island of excellence'

Quality of care has never been an issue at Mohawk Valley Psychiatric Center. The nationally acclaimed mental health advocate Dr. E. Fuller Torrey has referred to it as an “island of excellence in the mental health field. Yet quality of care appears to be of no concern to OMH in its single-minded drive to shut down the system.

“We provide some of the best care in the entire mental health system but we’re on the chopping block,” CSEA MVPC Local 434 Vice President Barbara Reeves says in a presentation she makes to community groups. "What kind of message does that send to dedicated employees? What does that say about the judgment of top state managers?"

The local would like some answers from Gov. Mario Cuomo. In a highly publicized confrontation with CSEA officials in Utica last summer, the Governor promised to address their concerns. The local is still waiting.
Tentative State contract highlights

These changes, made in early 1991, are still paying dividends. The State has agreed to give any further savings from the implementation of the managed mental health care program to CSEA for use by the Benefit Fund. That is in addition to the "per employee" figures mentioned above.

ARTICLE 25-NO DISCRIMINATION

The parties have agreed to continue current programs. However, the Child Care Advisory Committee is required to concentrate more on affordable resource and referral services for members and less on opening new worksite centers, which are generally more expensive.

ARTICLE 33-DISCIPLINE

The State and CSEA have agreed to a side letter, exploring ways to speed up the arbitration process. The State shall be able to reassign employees who have been charged with a crime during the disposition of the criminal charges.

The maximum fine the State can seek in the NOD has been increased from $200 to two weeks pay.

ARTICLE 40-PERFORMANCE EVALUATION

The State has given CSEA a side letter indicating it will be reviewing the performance evaluation system with an eye towards developing a two rating category system.

ARTICLE 42-ACCIDENTAL DEATH BENEFIT

The present benefit allows for free tuition to any college in the SUNY system for dependent children entitled to a death benefit. The benefit has been expanded to include any college in New York State, however, the tuition assistance is limited to the amount charged for the SUNY system.

CONTRACTUAL FUNDING

All current programs that require funding will continue these include LEAP, CSEAP, Joint Apprenticeship, Child Care, EAP, Joint Committee on Health Benefits, Uniforms and Work Related Clothing, etc.). It will now be possible, by mutual agreement, to move funds from one program to another, in order to meet membership usage.

May is Health Month: Time to get into shape

It's time to get into shape! May is National Fitness and Sports Month. Across the country, the month will be celebrated with fitness and health fairs, fun runs and walks, seminars and lectures. Sure, we all know we should exercise regularly, but it can be tough to overcome inertia and get started. Sometimes we aren't aware of the consequences of inactivity and the benefits of fitness and exercise.

Fitness can add quality years to our lives and promote health, well being, endurance and productivity. A balanced fitness program that stresses aerobic exercise and over-all muscle conditioning improves heart and lung function, reduces stress and increases resistance to illness.

Exercise options are almost limitless. Running, walking, aerobics, swimming, biking, jumping rope and dancing are just a few activities that can help you develop and maintain fitness. Making exercise part of our everyday life can be as simple as taking the stairs, leaving the car at the far end of the parking lot and walking at lunch.

SUNY gets legislators' support

ALBANY — CSEA members from SUNY lobbied state legislators in February to voice concerns on a number of important issues. They also got some good news from key legislators who support CSEA efforts.

Assembly Representative Edward C. Sullivan, chair of the Assembly Higher Education Committee talked about the proposal to turn SUNY hospitals over to public benefit corporations. "I'm not sure it's a good idea," he said. "The hospitals have worked well, thanks to you and your co-workers. If something works well, why should it be transferred to the private sector?"

Assembly Representative Richard Anderson, ranking minority member on the Assembly Higher Education Committee, said CSEA members have taken enough of the SUNY cuts. "There's no question the cuts in the past couple of years have been devastating," he said. "I think CSEA members have suffered enough."

State Sen. Leonard Stavisky of the Senate Higher Education Committee also spoke to the CSEA members. CSEA Lobbyist Tom Hartnett said he was encouraged by the legislators' messages. He also said the CSEA SUNY lobbyists had been well received in their visits to other legislators.

"We've been working hard, and I think our efforts are beginning to pay off," Hartnett said. "CSEA members are powerful spokespeople for public employees and for all working people."

A message from CSEA President Joe McDermott

It's time for tax fairness

Once again we have watched the Governor and state Legislature try to cope with a budget awash in red ink. The final budget creates more pain for public employees and the people who need the services we provide.

We are told the reason for all of this pain is that the state is broke and the federal government is broke.

This simply is not true. The reason the state and federal treasuries are painfully in the red is the result of a deliberate tax policy that gave away the store to the wealthiest among us at the expense of everybody else.

It began with the so-called federal tax reform in 1987. President Reagan had promised to “get government off our backs.” He did just that for the rich.

The tax breaks the rich have received from the federal government are detailed in a new book entitled America: What Went Wrong? by Donald L. Barlett and James B. Steele.

An excerpt from this book recently ran in the Albany Times-Union, a conservative, pro-business newspaper. The headline read, “Rich profit from unfair tax laws.”

The introduction to the excerpt read:

“The new book America: What Went Wrong? is an indictment of how the rulemakers in Washington and the dealmakers on Wall Street have changed the rules of the game to favor the privileged, the powerful and the influential - at the expense of everyone else.”

This book confirms what we have been saying for years. I encourage you to read it. It documents, for example, the fact that six billion dollars in income tax collections from people earning over $100,000 have been lost because of loopholes in the federal alternative minimum tax.

The result of this giveaway is spiraling federal deficits and cuts in federal aid to states, cities, towns, counties and schools.

The problem was made worse when our state political leaders decided to model the state tax code on this unfair federal plan.

CSEA said clearly in 1987 when the state changed its tax laws that the result would be constant budget deficits and an increasing tax burden on middle class New Yorkers. Sadly, we have been proven right.

That is why we have joined with other unions and community groups to form the Fiscal Policy Institute (FPI) to push for fair tax laws.

FPI’s most recent report, “The Right Choice for New York: A Fair Tax System for Fiscal Stability and Growth,” details the problem. The report states: “The current tax system in New York is grossly unfair. The poor and middle class are required to shoulder an ever increasing share of the tax burden, while the rich have seen their taxes cut since 1985.”

According to the report, a middle income family pays between 12 percent to 15 percent of its income in state and local taxes while the richest 1 percent of New York’s families pay only 8.8 percent.

This must change. FPI is organizing grassroots efforts across the state. I urge CSEA activists to take part in these efforts.

There will never be adequate funds for public services nor will we have a vibrant economy based on fairness until these tax policies at both the state and federal level change. CSEA must help to bring about that change.

GENERAL NEWS

CSEA mourns retired activist Mike Morella
Michael C. Morella of Mount Vernon, an active CSEA retiree and former leader of CSEA Westchester County Unit, died earlier this year.

“He was very effective and certainly very knowledgeable,” said CSEA Southern Region President Pat Masioli.

Mr. Morella began his career as a social worker for the county Department of Social Services, was county CETA job-training program director and program administrator in the county public works department.

He also served as unit vice president from 1978-80 and was legal committee chair.

Mr. Morella retired in 1981, and was an active CSEA retiree, serving as treasurer of CSEA Westchester Retiree Local 921.

He served in the U.S. Navy and has a bachelor degree from Kent State University.

He served on the Westchester County Traffic Safety Board and was a volunteer with Mount Vernon’s Meals on Wheels program. A member of the Mount Vernon Heart Club, he frequently gave blood because he had a rare blood type, said his wife, Barbara Linda Morella.

Along with his wife, Mr. Morella is survived by four daughters, two sisters and two granddaughters.

When Gov. Bill Clinton won the New York state Democratic Primary, CSEA was right behind him. The union had five candidates elected as Clinton delegates to the Democratic National Convention (see story below). Union members also worked on phone banks, carried signs and got out the vote on Primary Day.

As a result, Clinton won 41 percent of the vote, giving him the impetus he needed to sweep several more states.

“We have believed in Bill Clinton from the beginning, and we will keep working for him until he is elected President,” CSEA President Joe McDermott said. “We have a candidate who understands the issues and concerns of working people. Now we have to be sure he wins the White House.”

Clinton was in Albany shortly before Primary Day and took the time to meet with a number of CSEA officials at the College of St. Rose.

CSEA sends Clinton delegates to convention

As part of CSEA’s efforts to get Gov. Clinton nominated as the Democratic candidate for President, a number of CSEA and AFSCME members and employees ran as Clinton delegates to the Democratic National Convention. According to unofficial results, five delegates from CSEA have been elected: Leslie Eason, alternate, 5th Congressional District (CD); Mary Sullivan, delegate, 23rd CD; Francine Turner, alternate, 27th CD; Ann Gorman, delegate, 28th CD; and Candy Saxon, delegate, 32nd CD. AFSCME delegates elected are: Roland Thomas, alternate, 26th CD; Ann Bunker, delegate, 27th CD; Aloma Cason, alternate, 29th CD; Al Sutera, alternate, 32nd CD; and Dorothy Johnson, delegate, 33rd CD.

Ballots will be in the mail May 18 to CSEA members eligible to vote in the election of members of CSEA's statewide Board of Directors. Eligible union members who have not received an original ballot may request a replacement ballot on and after May 26 by contacting the Independent Election Corporation of America (IECA) at 1-800-999-CSEA (1-800-999-2732) during normal business hours.

The deadline for return of ballots is Monday, June 8 at 8 a.m. Ballots will be counted by IECA on June 8 and results will be announced after the ballots are tabulated. Election results will be published in the July edition of The Public Sector. Candidates and the Board of Directors seek seats they are seeking are listed below and on following pages. Where there is more than one candidate, candidates are listed in the order they will appear on the ballot. It seems likely only yesterday I asked for your support in an election for the first time! It's been 25 years and I've served you at each level of CSEA by election or committee appointment. I'm asking for your support again and thanking you for the past, present and future. As a union activist for 11 years, I understand the need for responsible administration, financial accountability and policy making. My work experience in managing a State budget and serving as a Board member of the Children's Corner Day Care Center qualifies me to best serve you in strengthening our Union.

As President of the largest Corrections Local (minimum-maximum) for 8 years and a member (8 years) of the Statewide Labor-Management Committee (presently Chair), I have the qualifications, knowledge and experience to handle the ever increasing challenges facing the Correction Department and CSEA. Vote Plumadore for Correction Rep.

Completing fourth term as your representative. Instrumental in changing Constitution and By-laws so salaries for Statewide Officers must be approved by Delegates, not Board of Directors. I'm not considered a team player. I vote for what's best for the membership. If given the opportunity, I will continue to do so.

MENTAL HYGIENE REGION I
(Elect 2)

Barry M. Malone

Our OMH System is being devastated by Governor Cuomo and his henchman, Commissioner Surtees. They are abandoning the mentally ill and wasting the State workforce. Direct patient care staffing is so bad that security, let alone care, can barely be provided on most wards. The issue is not lack of money; it's spending available funds better.

Tony Bentivegna

The incumbents in this position have failed miserably. Voters here should make a change. Members are being moved without proper layoff notices. Contract information with our Albany office is inadequate. President of Local 411 three times, Treasurer of Region I and Chairman of the OMH Labor Management Committee statewide. I will make changes.

CSEA remembers workers killed on the job

ALBANY — CSEA members across New York mourned three members killed in the line of duty over the past year during Workers Memorial Day activities and ceremonies.

Workers Memorial Day is observed by the AFL-CIO every April 28. It is a day to focus attention on workplace safety and health and to honor those who have lost their lives on the job.

"Many public employees put their lives on the line every time they go to work and once again that point was dramatically underscored in the past year," CSEA President Joe McDermott said. "Three CSEA members were killed on the job or because of their job in the past year."

The three CSEA members who lost their lives were:

* John Wayne — a tree pruner supervisor for the New York State Department of Transportation in Buffalo; he died following injuries from a tree branch falling on him while supervising a work crew in May 1991;
* Sabina Kulakowski — a Cayuga County Social Services worker who was murdered at home by a man who vowed revenge against the department for removing his child from his custody.
* Kenneth Ruiz — a general mechanic with the state Department of Transportation on Long Island who died when a tree limb fell through the windshield of his truck.

Forty CSEA members have died in work-related incidents since 1983. Many CSEA locals across the state conducted moments of silence, memorial activities or the wearing of black armbands to commemorate the day.

WE WILL REMEMBER — Another plaque listing workers killed on the job is hung, this to remember three CSEA members who died in 1991. Hanging the plaque are, from left, CSEA Executive Vice President Danny Donohue, CSEA activists Ginger Sheffey, Joan Tobin and Hank Jenny.

MARGARETVILLE - For many CSEA members working for the Town of Middletown Highway Department in Delaware County, their work as public servants doesn't stop when they punch out at 3:30.

They are also volunteer public servants and continue to serve their community in the all-volunteer Margaretville Fire Department. CSEA Unit President George Hendricks is also fire chief.

Of 16 town highway workers, nine are volunteer firefighters. Of those nine, five recently helped save the life of a five-year-old boy. For laborer Fred Gartelman, heavy equipment operator Bob Eignor, motorized equipment operator Scott Gavette, laborer Dave Knapp and Hendricks, a heavy equipment operator, it was an experience they were proud of.

Late last year the boy and his family were skiing at Belleayre Mountain when he was seriously injured after another skier collided with him. He was taken to the local hospital with severe head injuries. Because the small hospital didn't have the facilities to care for him, he needed to go to a major trauma center. That's when the CSEA workers were called.

The only way to transport the boy quickly enough to save his life was by Medivac helicopter. The remote hospital needed the firefighters to clear a landing site for the Medivac and to help transfer the patient.

The five men helped clear a 100-square-foot area near the hospital and set up flares to guide the copter, Hendricks said. They also maintained radio contact with the Medivac crew to advise them of ground conditions and helped the ambulance crew transfer the boy from the ambulance to the copter.

Amazingly, the boy was released from the hospital three days later. He and his parents came to the Highway Department to thank the volunteers for their help, presenting Hendricks with a donation for the fire department. Gavette, a fire captain, said their thanks were appreciated.

"One person thanking you makes it all worthwhile," he said. His co-workers agreed, and said that it was moving to see the boy's amazing recovery.

"When we saw the kid in the car, it was really uplifting," said Eignor, an engineer for the fire company. "It almost brought tears to your eyes."

The other workers said they were glad they could help this boy. They've all been trained for the procedure and have had to use it several times; last spring another five-year-old boy was kicked in the head by a horse and had to be transported by state police helicopter. According to Hendricks, the boy has recovered.

When asked why the men work for the public as public employees and as volunteers, their answer was clear: They love what they do, and they get from helping their community. The fire department, to which Hendricks has belonged for 18 years, is "lucky to have enough people interested," he said.

"I really enjoy this just for the satisfaction of helping someone," Eignor said. "Anybody that isn't involved in a volunteer force should think about joining."

The men spend one night a week training and come in off and on on weekends and week nights. Hendricks said. The men are so devoted, he joked, "sometimes our wives think we live here." For the workers, the next big battle they face may not be a big fire, it may be at the town hall, in their fight to get a contract - currently they remain at impasse.
CSEA members at Holtsville work with people, animals, ecology

By Sheryl C. Jenks
Communications Associate

HOLTsville - Where can you see American bison, peacocks, red fox, mountain lions, deer, turtles, bald eagles; learn about composting and horticulture; play on a playground; swim; see a windmill; and exercise on a track—all at the same place, any day of the week—for free? At the Holtsville Ecology Site and Animal Preserve, in the Town of Brookhaven. It is an educational, enjoyable and inspirational experience.

Once a garbage dump, its magical transformation began in 1979 when the Brookhaven Highway Department superintendent moved the town's Ecology Division to the 140-acre site. Since then, it has flourished into an animal preserve, environmental, horticultural and recreational park.

The Ecology Site is open all year, seven days a week, and caters to individuals, families and organized groups such as classes and scout troops.

About 18 Highway Department Blue and White Collar Unit CSEA members work at the site. Whether it's feeding and caring for the animals, giving tours, working with the compost and recycling, cleaning or clerical work, CSEA members deliver the services.

When you arrive, you should head directly for the Information Center where displays may include: native Long Island reptiles and amphibians; an active beehive; bird's nests; and a "touch table" where those who like the hands-on approach can feel freshly sheared sheep's wool.

Senior Clerk Typist Lynne Levering will be happy to give you a self-guided tour book which will keep you from missing any of the many things there are to see and do.

If you prefer a guided tour, CSEA members Meg Shutka and Timmi Nalepa are available to take visitors around three to four times each week day. They help unravel some of the mysteries of nature and the environment.

Finished compost is provided to residents free and there are drop-off areas for metal, newspaper and glass to be recycled.

Near the composting area is a half-mile asphalt track which circles the former landfill. Visitors are welcome to run, walk or bike on the track.

At the greenhouses, you may see Diane Schwindt, April Gobrick and Pat Alese potting and caring for the many plants which the town uses to beautify and supply fresh air to town offices and parks.

Weekly classes on plant care are offered, free, to area residents.

The variety of animals, housed in areas closely resembling their natural habitat, is awe-inspiring. Rarely does one have the opportunity to be mere inches away from a mountain lion or American bison.

Hector Cruz and Patricia Schaeffer may be feeding the deer or other animals as you pass by.

According to CSEA Suffolk Local 852 President Liz Puttre, Ecology Project Supervisor Kenneth A. Schwindt's interest in animals and plants and Town Highway Department Superintendent Howard Malkmus' blessing were impetus for the creation of the Ecology Site.

It began modestly with compost, a few chicks, ducks and a raccoon that had been trapped at a nearby college. It's grown into a place people travel from miles around to enjoy.
He paints school with history

Jerry Pasquantino has earned a new, although informal, title in addition to his role as a senior general repairman for the Niagara Falls Schools system.

Thanks to a series of murals of Niagara Falls and surroundings he painted on the walls and main stairwell at the 66th Street School - in honor of the city's centennial celebration - he's now also known as an "artist in residence."

Pasquantino's paintings of the Falls, the Cave of the Winds and the Maid of the Mist tour boat have become the centerpiece of the elementary school's centennial project.

"I had to paint the walls anyway," Pasquantino said. "But the mural idea let me exercise a little creativity. Principal Tom Franklin had a lot of courage to let me do it. I'm also very proud that the teachers have fashioned studies around it for the students."

Principal Franklin said classes will paint murals of their own on points of interest along with the upper and lower Niagara River on 2-by-8-foot sections of plywood and hang them above the lockers in the hallways.

Classes will also integrate the theme of Niagara Falls' Centennial Celebration into their other projects on the city's history.

Parents and the community will be invited to tour the project when it is completed, Franklin said.

"It's amazing how someone can take a small idea and come up with something far beyond what you might imagine," Franklin said. "I didn't know Jerry could paint as well as he does. I merely mentioned to him that I wanted to do something significant in the school to celebrate the city's 100th birthday, and two or three days later, he comes in with a diagram, and went right to work on it during his lunch and break time."

Pasquantino, a 25-year school employee and vice president of both his unit and Niagara Educational Local 872, is now recognized by name by all School 66 students, who proudly greet him when passing in the halls.

"It's a great feeling," he said.

Hicksville agreement settles problems over teacher aides

HICKSVILLE — The CSEA Hicksville Teacher Aides/Assistants Unit and the Hicksville School District have reached an agreement that will enable teacher aides to become teacher assistants.

CSEA dropped a lawsuit and improper practice charges. The problem developed after teacher aides approached the district about becoming certified teacher assistants. The aides might have lost their jobs had the agreement not been reached.

As part of the agreement, the district agreed to pay the aides involved in the lawsuit $250,000 this year and apply for temporary certification so the current aides can become teacher assistants.

While temporarily certified, the teacher aides covered by the agreement must earn 32 credits from an accredited college or university by September 1997, completing six college credits a year.

Aides who retired prior to the resolution will be placed on a preferred list for rehiring, CSEA attorney Lou Stober said.

"Thirty-two teacher aides in Hicksville will keep their jobs," CSEA Labor Relations Specialist Pat Curtin said. "Their positions would have been abolished, but we were able to work with the district and come up with a plan everyone is happy with."

Unit President Linda Hild said CSEA support was important.

"If we had lost our jobs, it would have been devastating," she said. "We have been working with our special education children for many years and we really love the kids. We're very pleased this whole thing has been worked out."

New Berlin workers win job security

NEW BERLIN — When the New Berlin School District suddenly cut back hours for non-instructional employees, CSEA fought back. As a result, the workers have a new three-year contract.

The new contract is a compromise, Unit President Shirley Davis said. In return for the shorter work week, the union won the new contract guaranteeing no layoffs or further cutbacks.

"I feel, with the economy the way it is, we made out fairly well," Davis said.

The new contract also includes an increase in sick leave accrual limits, an agency shop clause and no change in health insurance. CSEA labor relation specialists Gerald Phelan and Richard Toth helped negotiate the contract.
Nassau supervisors kill plan to stop layoffs

MINEOLA - CSEA members in Nassau Local 830 are worrying again about layoffs because the County Board of Supervisors voted down a deferred overtime plan which would have halted more layoffs.

The county has already laid off 2,500 employees.

CSEA members ratified the overtime plan 3 to 1. The board didn't offer any options for avoiding more layoffs.

Wallace denounced the board for letting politics get in the way of doing the right thing for the county, the taxpayers and the county employees.

"This inept bunch has given our members little hope that they can do what it takes to pull us out of this fiscal deficit," she said.

She urged CSEA members to call board members, "and remind them you are also voters."

Ulster County has new mediation program

KINGSTON - Resolving a personal dispute between two employees is not always easy. Productivity often suffers until a resolution is found.

Ulster County is training county unit employees in the art of mediation so disputes can be settled to the satisfaction of both parties. The training is funded with a grant from the New York State Labor Management Consortium that is addressing this situation.

"It can be as simple as how the thermostat is set," said Clare Danielsson of Ulster-Sullivan Mediation Inc., who is training the mediators.

Disputes over workplace issues such as air conditioning, smoking, perfume, gossip, cultural differences, personal phone calls and communication skills can affect how smoothly a department will run, she said.

An independent mediator can solve problems creatively rather than allowing morale to deteriorate so that work is seriously affected, Ulster County Labor Management Coordinator Karen MacIntosh-Frering said.

"From a labor perspective, this is a good project," said Debbie DiCicco, third vice president of the Ulster County Unit and member of the county's Labor-Management Committee. A shop steward, she said she recognizes that the grievance procedure can't always address certain situations and mediation could be the answer.

"What the mediator will do is come up with a win-win solution, so that no one goes away feeling that they have been slighted," she said.

The service is strictly voluntary and completely confidential.

Board backs down on sale of Montgomery County Infirmary

By Daniel X. Campbell

AMSTERDAM — CSEA won an important victory for Montgomery County residents when the Board of Supervisors refused to consider putting the sale of the county infirmary to public referendum.

The county infirmary, a long-term care nursing home, has been generating revenue for the county, according to an auditor's report. Yet the board of supervisors has been debating for several years whether to sell the facility.

CSEA has been fighting to keep the infirmary a public facility. CSEA Montgomery County Infirmary Unit President Gary China had pledged a long battle to be sure county residents have access to affordable, long-term care provided by public employees.

Shortly after that, the county board refused to let out of committee a proposal that would have put privatization up for a vote by county residents.

The union had an earlier boost when auditors showed that the facility generated $160,000 last year.

"Montgomery County residents should not lose their access to affordable, long-term nursing home care," China said. "The infirmary is beginning to generate income and the amount of income it generates should increase in the next few years."

CSEA members give so boy can have operation that allows him to walk

KINGSTON - When trouble hits, CSEA members are there. Just ask Travis Luria.

A victim of cerebral palsy, Travis endured a serious operation that has him up and walking with canes.

Travis is the son of Ulster County CSEA Local 856 member Michael Luria. By the age of three problems with his nerves contracted his legs and prevented him from walking. Last year, he had surgery to disconnect the damaged nerves. The family faced incredible expenses in order to stay with Travis in New York City during surgery.

Without the surgery, Travis’s illness would have gotten worse, contorting his whole body and affecting even his breathing and his speech, his father said.

The Public Sector published an article about Travis last year, and Michael Luria and his wife, Allison, were overwhelmed by the prayers and the donations the family received.

“Let me start by expressing my deepest, heartfelt gratitude to the hundreds of people in my own county and across the state who responded to our needs with prayers and financial support,” he said. “Allison and I were encouraged and strengthened by the many beautiful letters we received. They kept us going when things seemed bleak.”

Even better, the Lurias have been able to celebrate Travis’ incredible progress. They had endured a major test of faith: a child in severe pain, a five-inch incision and a fear Travis had been further disabled were only some of their problems after the surgery. But time, therapy and patience proved to be the prescription Travis needed.

“Our near obsession with being near Travis and working with him paid off,” Luria said. “He startled the doctors and therapists with the progress he made. He did things that no other child in his original condition had been able to do and he did them consistently.”

Travis “graduated” into a higher functioning therapy much earlier than doctors expected.

They originally thought Travis might eventually be able to walk indoors with a walker and use a wheelchair outdoors. But at his last evaluation the specialists were unwilling to put any limits on what Travis could achieve.

“Not that he will become a track star,” Luria said. “The surgeon who operated on Travis took a break and just sat and watched him playing with the other kids in the hall, going back and forth, spinning around in his walker and doing things that he had thought were not possible for a child with his degree of disability.”

HE’S MOVING NOW! Travis Luria makes waves as he recovers from surgery that allows him to walk with a walker. He’s making more progress than doctors thought possible.

State budget adds some aid to school districts, local governments

The state Legislature passed the final bills of the 1992-93 budget early April 2, just over a day after the start of the fiscal year.

The $56.5 billion budget adds spending for local governments and school districts.

“This was another difficult budget battle,” CSEA President Joe McDermott said. “Considering the state’s dire fiscal situation, however, we feel the budget could have been even more damaging for public employees in local governments and school districts.”

The budget adds money to the Governor’s proposal to aid local governments operating health departments. Another $4 million was added for local government’s to pay Department of Social Services administrative cost for planning and to develop managed care programs. School aid was increased $31 million over last year.

CSEA also succeeded in fighting a proposal to consolidate probation and parole departments, and parole aid is slightly above last year’s level.

The 1992-93 budget also includes more than $1 billion in new taxes and fees. CSEA is still working to convince the Legislature that the current tax structure is not fair. The union is pushing for a fair system that would require the state’s wealthiest residents to pay more in income taxes and would eliminate corporate tax loopholes.

Carpal tunnel topic at NCCC lunch and learn
HEMPSTEAD—CSEA members in the Nassau County Community College (NCCC) Unit learned about carpal tunnel syndrome during a CSEA-sponsored Lunch and Learn program recently.

NCCC nurse and CSEA member Ethel Fritz explained what carpal tunnel is and described possible symptoms.

Attorney Elliot Olin, president of Pine, Olin and Anderman, gave a presentation on what causes carpal tunnel syndrome, the treatments, how to handle worker's compensation claims and possible legal action.

Olin's firm has an internal Carpal Tunnel Syndrome-Repetitive Injury Task force.

Some of the participants said they had been diagnosed with carpal tunnel syndrome and shared some of their experiences.

Jefferson County Local sponsors info fair

WATERTOWN — More than 125 members of CSEA Jefferson County Local 823 recently attended the local's first Mini-Conference and Resource Fair.

The event was organized as an educational opportunity for members and non-members to learn more about the union.

Participants could attend workshops on sexual harassment and first aid. They also could browse information tables and talk with CSEA staff and benefits providers.

The event went well, and Local 823 President Jim Monroe said he hopes to make the conference an annual event.

"We were very pleased with the turnout," Monroe said. "The attendance far exceeded everyone's expectations."

Yates County Local has union info meetings

PENN YAN - A union-information campaign and internal organizing drive kicked off in Yates County with three days of Lunch and Learn programs about CSEA for Yates County Employee Unit members and potential members.

"We updated everyone on all the benefits of membership," Unit President Carol Thornton said. "Some potential members didn't realize that certain items, like the AFSCME Mastercard with its low interest rate, is only available to signed-up members. So, I'm sure we opened a lot of eyes, and the membership applications are starting to come in."

The lunchtime sessions over three days at different worksites allowed highway department workers as well as office staff to hear how the various CSEA departments operate in behalf of members. Collective Bargaining Specialist Debbie Lee, Labor Relations Specialist Ray DuCharme and communications associate Ron Wofford spoke.

The unit also heard the latest on their stalled contract from Lee. CSEA filed an improper practice charge against the county after a contract offer which the unit ratified, was rejected by the legislature. Lee said she is waiting for a formal hearing date from PERB.

Meanwhile, Thornton is urging those county workers who haven't joined CSEA to sign up for membership and present a unified front.

The union got its start in Yates County years ago around a benefit - health care - that some now take for granted, Thornton said.

"They wanted to give a county judge free health insurance, but they didn't want to give it to anyone else," Thornton said. "That's the kind of thing a good union fights against, and CSEA has an excellent record in that regard."
