Truman Considers Approval of Raise

By M. J. BERNARD Special to The LEADER

TROY, March 1. — The new policy of discussing with state employees projects affecting their pay, hours and working conditions, and thus having them participate in the formulation of policies on such subjects, is a permanent one in his administration, Governor Thomas E. Dewey announced in a speech at the 29th annual dinner of the Civil Service Employees Association, at the Hotel Hudson. His announcement was greeted with applause by the 400 diners. He stressed the fact that the permanent policy sets a pattern in the relations of public employees with government, but also stated that government, being sovereign, can not surrender any of its sovereignty, and any public official who attempted it would be violating his oath of office. Mutual trust and confidence was his motto for "a new concept of government."

Mayor's Letter on Raise Worries NYC Employees

Mayor William O'Dwyer's letter to employee leaders in Albany, outlining the feasibility of reducing the current cost-of-living allowances paid to employees by the city, caused grave concern among the employees, who feel that the action was taken without adequate investigation. The mayor's letter was accompanied by a statement that the move was necessary to reduce the city's financial difficulties.

ALBANY, March 1. — Two proposed amendments to the State Constitution, providing for changes in preference to veterans in civil service appointments and promotions, were introduced in the Legislature. One measure, supported by veteran groups and by The Civil Service Employees Association, introduces a point-credit system, both in original appointments and in promotions, for all veterans, limited to one application of the new benefit. The other, submitted by the American Legion, would withdraw all preference for non-disabled veterans in promotion examinations and extend for five years, until 1956, the present bonus, leaving disabled veteran preference unchanged. The point-system amendment, known as the Mitchell bill, would give the following preference in applications:

- Disabled veterans: 10 points in original appointments and in promotions (entrance tests); 5 points added in promotion test.
- Non-disabled veterans: 5 points added in appointment examinations.
- 25 points added in promotion examination.

The points are given as an "extra" to those, and only those, who first pass the examinations, and are added to the final average in promotion exams, where applicable. The legislature will also hear hearings on a pay raise bill, the House Post Office and Civil Service Committee opened hearings on pay raise bills. Hearings were held before the administration ignored such requests, but if it continued such tactics might get a pay raise bill it didn't want, and from a majority that now favors on Democratic aid to override a Presidential veto.

300 to Get Police Jobs

Three hundred appointments to the Police Department will be made the latter part of this week from the new Patrolman (P.D.) eligible list. Request for certification of names has been made by the Police Department to the Municipal Civil Service Commission.

The new appointments will follow closely the graduation of 438 probationary Patrolmen from the Police Academy last Friday in ceremonies at Washington Irving High School. Police Commissioner Arthur W. Wallander presided at the exercises, which included presentation of Victory medals and trophies.

The batch of 300 new recruits is part of a series of staggered appointments, in line with Commissioner Wallander's goal of bringing the department up to a strength of 24,000 men, in which he has the support of Mayor William O'Dwyer.
The Public Employee

By Dr. Frank L. Tolman
President, The Civil Service Employees Association, Inc., and Member of Employees' Merit Award Board.

The Association's Annual Dinner

Once a year during the legislative session, The Civil Service Employees Association has the pleasure of extending a cordial invitation to our employees to join us in a recognition of a community of service, a common dedication to the welfare of the citizens of the State on the part of all public employees and public officials, high and low.

There are some labor and employee organizations that operate on the principle that management and the employees are necessarily enemies, that the war of the classes, the struggle for power admits of no truce or any amenities.

Dedicated to Peace

Our Association is dedicated not to war but to peace through fair conferences and conciliations. We hold that fair minds can sit down as equals around the conference table and reach agreement or compromise as fair as any that can be won by conflict and by strike. As men of good will, employees and high executives can discuss difficult problems fairly and fully, iron out differences and arrive at just and fair conclusions or compromises.

We owe much to the present administration, but to my mind the greatest is the advance in dealing openly with our employee Association. The Association has often been called into conference before—too frequently, after major decisions had been made. This year we were accorded conferences to reach decisions—a very different matter. We were given facts and figures prior to the conference, our proposals and points of view, and to fairly and fully examine counter-proposals and viewpoints.

Trust in Open Diplomacy

We hope, we trust, and we even expect that this policy of open diplomacy with agreements freely and openly arrived at, will prevail through the years as long as the Association is worthy of the trust and confidence of its members, of the people and of the administration.

The Governor remarked in the true entrepreneurial style of our democracy. He cited Jerry as an example of American attainment.

Stunt Show Draws Laughter

The other highlights of the dinner was a stunt show, written, directed, staged, produced, and acted by Association members. It was entitled, "Just One More Chance Dr. Heaven Can Wait." State officials, and even employees, came in for much ribbing in songs, story and dialogue. Governor Dewey laughed often at the jokes, particularly those at his expense.

Fisher Award is Presented By Governor

Jerry Finkelstein (left), whom Governor Thomas E. Dewey praised for having risen to publisher of the greatest civil service newspaper in the United States, Th Governor's remarks were made at the annual dinner of The Civil Service Employees Association in Troy. The picture was taken on a previous occasion.

"Leader' and Publisher Praised by Dewey

TROY, March 1.—Addressing the 39th annual dinner of The Civil Service Employees Association, Governor Thomas E. Dewey, delivered the speech of the evening and presented awards to winners of merit prizes. In connection with the presentation of the annual Harold J. Fisher Memorial Award, which William E. Hannan won for 1947, the Governor reviewed the history of the award and told about the fast progress of the LEADER, which donates the cup, and of its publisher, Jerry Finkelstein.

Maxwell Lehman, Editor of The LEADER, was standing beside Governor Dewey when the presentations of the cup and medals were made. The cup was received by the State Librarian, Charles P. Connell, proxy for Mr. Hannan, who was, until his recent retirement, director of the Legislative Library.

The Governor: "Jerry Finkelstein, publisher of The LEADER, stands for astute accomplishment under our system of free enterprise. There isn't any other guy that represents it better. He was my office boy 12 years ago when I was racket-busting, and he became the publisher of the biggest civil service publication in the United States, all by his own effort. It's an indication of what can be achieved in the United States under our free enterprise system."

Mr. Finkelstein was graduated from law school while he was working for Mr. Dewey and founded The LEADER in September, 1939, a little more than four years later. He had previously been a Democrat. I didn't intend to discuss this aspect, because my remarks are entirely non-partisan, but bring it up only to show how good remarks are entirely non-partisan, but bring it up only to show how good the American people have a curiously creative genius when they make a company out of the ground, and even their enemies..."
by MAXWELL LEHMAN

State employees like the idea of additional promotion opportunities for those with special abilities, but the plan does not include the provision for advancements in the beef of their departments and their positions.

Personnel officers like the idea of special training for those with special abilities, but they do not know what kind of training the State should undertake to train the employees who can fill jobs which can’t be filled by normal recruits.

The article described an experiment proposed by certain State officials in Cohoes, enthusiastically:

Mr. Heroux would like the program to apply to all employees. He says that the plan does not contemplate examination. Mr. Miller’s fears at rest.

The Lehadders is able to inform the employees that the plan does not contemplate examination, provided the examination would be held in a certain office over a period of time. Under an in-service training program takes cognizance of the fact that many thousands of the people who are hired are not able to make this group, it is not able to make the group.

Any warning note is sounded by Mr. Miller, who states warily:

Mr. Heroux, enthusiastically:

Training officers with special abilities for higher jobs is instituted, I would say that the dangers involved.

I am sure it is not even necessary for the State to undertake to train the employees who can fill jobs which can’t be filled by normal recruits. If a system of training something must be done which will enable those who are the least capable to fill important positions.

It should at least be given a chance. Why limit the field of recruitments and trainings to the State employees? Why not extend it to other people as well? Why not extend the plan to the State and the municipalities?

Since the proposal is adopted, I would say that the risk involved is not worth the trouble. It is not worth the trouble to take a chance on the State and the municipalities.

The bill should be passed. The new plan, which is to be adopted, aims at making the efficiency of the State service and the municipalities higher.

The proposal should be adopted. The State and the municipalities should be made to compete for the limited number of positions in the State and the municipalities. The proposal should be adopted. The State and the municipalities should be made to compete for the limited number of positions in the State and the municipalities.

It would be a step in the right direction to adopt the plan. The State and the municipalities should be made to compete for the limited number of positions in the State and the municipalities.

Rockland State—Speaker of the House Victor F. Calafiore, John W. Langan, Speaker of the Assembly, and Dr. Albert Shubic, Chairman of the Board of Regents, received a platitude from Hopewell and Edward F. Delahanty, Secretary of the Joint Committee on Public Building Construction, regarding the proposed project in Hopewell. The fact that the State has found many problems in administering the budget system has paid off, the Speaker said, in saving on extra hazardous and arduous work, and the state is trying to have more of this kind of work upgraded. The House heard a report from Assemblyman Paul W. Murray, of the Low Income Housing Committee, and the members were told to pass legislation for adjustments or disposal of the surplus.

NEW YORK CITY
Passing of Frank J. Prial
A Loss to Civil Service

E Very one connected with civil service in any way felt the pang of regret over the death of Frank J. Prial, editing official and publisher of The Chief, who during half a century did much for civil service employees as well as other individual. From 1915, when he placed first on a competitive civil service list, until the day he died, last week, Mr. Prial was an outstanding figure in NYC government affairs. The protection and advancement of the competitive principle was deep in his blood, as was only to be expected of a man who had entered public life through that route, and he was fearless in opposing all attempted intrusions upon the merit system. This he did not only as an individual, but as a public official. Early sensing the need of organization of city employees, he successfully undertook that task, showed his brilliant qualities of leadership and caused his policy of out spokenness to become the guiding principle of the group he led.

Mr. Prial was a man of many interests, exceptionally well informed and as close to the pulse of the city's body politic as any man was in his time. He was the courageous investigator of irregularities by government officials, when uncovered, was quite clearly and, in fighting for what he thought was right, in what he deemed a just cause, he did not hesitate to enter his name. As in all else, everybody knew he was born to fight. As Frank J. Prial stood. He was that kind of a man.

The Civil Service LEADER found in Mr. Prial a keen advocate of improving service, a man in whom each character it always admired, and while we contested with him on labor interest and coverage of civil service news, we felt we owed him a debt for inciting us to even greater improvement in NYC service, says the LEADER.

The LEADER expresses its deep sympathy with the family of Mr. Prial and extends its congratulations to the surviving members of the Prial family: Miss Helen Prial, Miss Parisi and Miss Elizabeth Prial. Miss Parisi is a woman of the strong type, with a firm hand and a keen mind. She's secretary of the Bellevue Hospital, a member of the Board of Directors of the New York City Hospital Association, one of the New York City Hospital Association's officers who have been the first to take up legal volumes in the law library, and in working with a patient, is working with a teacher, and a teacher who knows the way to success in the educational field.

The LEADER, in closing, declares that the LEADER is but a voice in the cry of thousands of men and women who are in some way interested in the public service and in the public service employees who have lost a friend in Mr. Prial. The LEADER is only a voice but a strong one, and it is the voice of the LEADER that is speaking. The Men Who Run New York City

Mayor William O'Dwyer of New York City will be away from his desk for a long time. The job he holds is one of the most trying in the world, probably the toughest in the United States next to the Presidency. The Mayor has to deal with political intrigue . . . the paying off of obligations . . . going to functions, worthy and unworthy ones, as well as the real job of running the city. Nobody begrudges the Mayor his announced vacation, even if extended. He's going away and won't come back to his job until he's in good shape, come snowstorms or investigations. The men on this page are those who are most influential in the sphere of Government, and on whom the major burdens will fall during the Mayor's absence.

JOHN J. BENNETT, Deputy Mayor. A quiet, steady man and top administrator whose job it is to do the details of city government. Commissioners report to him; O'Dwyer looks on him greatly. A self-effacing individual, the qualities which make him less effective in O'Dwyer are the very qualities which make him invaluable to him. He is a LEADER. Bennett's job is to get things done. Commissioners report to him; other employees without political affiliations make him more about municipal finance than anyone else in the country.

JOHN CASHMORE, Borough President of the Bronx. Has served on the Board of Estimate longer than any other member. His energy in debate, lively humor, abounding wit, are qualities which impress people as soon as they speak to him about any city problem. Has grown with his office. Nevertheless, sharp-thinking, he's ambitious to be Mayor. He's expected to retire soon.

ROBERT MOSES, City Commissioner of Transportation. Has steadily increased his stature, and is now head of the Mayor's cabinet of fiscal advisers. LaGuardia consulted with him on financial matters, and under O'Dwyer his influence has reached a new high. A career employee without political affiliation, he was a LEADER. Moses's job is to get things done.

WILLIAM J. DONOHUE, Executive Secretary to the Mayor. If O'Dwyer is the Mayor's publicity man and confidant, Donohue is his “boy.” If his budget is any indication of the Mayor's interest in civic affairs, which impresses people as soon as they speak to him about any city problem, LaGuardia and Moses also make Queens more autonomous, often clashes with city authorities over who does what job.

Others Who Play Big Part In NYC

JOHN REID, Chairman, Board of Transportation. Has steadily increased in stature, and is now head of the Mayor's cabinet of fiscal advisers. LaGuardia consulted with him on financial matters, and under O'Dwyer his influence has reached a new high. A career employee without political affiliation, he was a LEADER. Moses's job is to get things done.

CHARLES PREUSSE, First Assistant Corporation Counsel. New member of administration. Known to make quick decisions. Heads the largest law office under one roof in the world.

HUGO ROGERS, Manhattan Borough President. Considered one of the most logical minds in the administration. His experience as an unemployed attorney is an asset with the public. He's often been seen to speak to him about any city problem. Has grown with his office, earned praise from sources which had formerly opposed him or wondered about him.

WILLIAM J. DONOHUE, Executive Secretary to the Mayor. If O'Dwyer is the Mayor's publicity man and confidant, Donohue is his “boy.” If his budget is any indication of the Mayor's interest in civic affairs, which impresses people as soon as they speak to him about any city problem, LaGuardia and Moses also make Queens more autonomous, often clashes with city authorities over who does what job.

Nevertheless, sharp-thinking, he's ambitious to be Mayor. He's expected to retire soon.

JAMES A. BURKE, Borough President of Queens. Fights for causes he believes in the Borough. The mere fact that he may share minority office of the city, he perform s with sincerity and ability. Friends would like to see him succeed O'Dwyer if the Mayor should become Governor of the State. His cause is aided by his fine legislative background.

JAMES J. LYONS, Borough President of Queens. Fights for causes he believes in the Borough. The mere fact that he may share minority office of the city, he perform s with sincerity and ability. Friends would like to see him succeed O'Dwyer if the Mayor should become Governor of the State. His cause is aided by his fine legislative background.

LAZARUS JOSEPH, Camp满满的。A rough, gruff, hard-thinking watchdog of the City's treasury, in an unpopular post, as independent chief fiscal officer of the city, he perform s with sincerity and ability. Friends would like to see him succeed O'Dwyer if the Mayor should become Governor of the State. His cause is aided by his fine legislative background.

VINCENCE R. IMPELLITTERI, President of the City Council. Will act as Mayor during O'Dwyer's absence, will make the decisions attended the functions — but exercise any real power, he will like to become Surrogate of Ditmas Park, Brooklyn. Enterprise and energy, splendid qualities.

WILLIAM J. DONOHUE, Executive Secretary to the Mayor. If O'Dwyer is the Mayor's publicity man and confidant, Donohue is his “boy.” If his budget is any indication of the Mayor's interest in civic affairs, which impresses people as soon as they speak to him about any city problem, LaGuardia and Moses also make Queens more autonomous, often clashes with city authorities over who does what job.
