CSEA helps highly acclaimed TV program return to airwaves

Inside Albany, the highly acclaimed Public Broadcasting System telecast that presented a bipartisan critical look at state government for two decades before losing funding several months ago, is back on the air.

And CSEA is a prime underwriter of the award-winning program that returned to the airwaves in early January.

"For twenty years Inside Albany provided taxpayers the most extensive, critical look at state and local government of any news media so people could stay informed about the ins and outs of government," CSEA President Danny Donohue said. "In the spirit that open government is better government, CSEA is proud to be a prime sponsor assisting in keeping this vital information flowing to the public."

Inside Albany, co-hosted by Dave Hepp and Lise Bang-Jensen, is seen on the following public broadcast stations:

- Binghamton: WSKG, Channel 46
- Buffalo: WNED, Channel 17
- Long Island: WLJW, Channel 21
- New York City: WNET, Channel 13
- Rochester: WXXI, Channel 21
- Syracuse: WCNY, Channel 24
- Plattsburgh: WCFE, Channel 57
- Watertown: WNPE, Channel 16

Blizzard, floods...

Public employees battle elements and win

"Fighting a major snowfall and rebounding to battle severe flooding conditions requires a great deal of coordination and a lot of behind the scenes work. It's time to take our hats off and salute our crews and our emergency services personnel," CSEA President Danny Donohue said in praising the work of public employees for their extraordinary efforts in January.

Examples abound. On Long Island, CSEA members worked on snow removal around the clock.

In the Town of Brookhaven, with 2,000 miles of roads, the aptly named Joe Blizzard, a CSEA Suffolk Local 852 highway maintenance crew leader, praised his workers. "My crew has done a tremendous job and I'm extremely proud of them," Blizzard, a 26-year employee, added.

In the Town of Smithtown and Town of Southampton where it became imperative for union members to truck in sand because of beach erosion and the loss of dunes. "Public employees proved once again they do the job better than anyone else. This is their community and they work hard to ensure the health and safety of their fellow Long Islanders," said CSEA Long Island Region 1 President Nick LaMorte.

The Hudson Valley and Southern Region was especially hard hit by both snow and flooding. "Public employees again came through magnificently under extreme pressure and horrible conditions," CSEA Southern Region President Maryjane MacNair said.

Poughkeepsie DOT Local 507 President Jack Shaw said the crews worked around the clock to make roads passable. Many, including Shaw, came to work hours before they were due so that they would be there when their shift began. "We had people who worked from 12 noon to 12 midnight and then the next shift would take over from 12 midnight to 12 noon," he said.

Shaw said many of the workers were sent down to Westchester County, the hardest hit in the area, to help dig out the day after the storm. Glen Cappello is a supervisor at the Westchester County Fire Training Center which serves as a central dispatch point for fire and Emergency Medical Services as well as the regional Medivac helicopter. Employees there work 12-hour shifts. Cappello said "everyone made it to work. The majority of us have four-wheel drive vehicles because most of us are volunteer firefighters and ambulance workers."

In the New York City area, CSEA mental health workers battled the elements and their own endurance to maintain care for mentally ill patients. "Our folks really held up their end, some working 20 and 30 hours straight," according to CSEA City of White Plains Unit President Glen Fortunato.

Dorr was found brutally beaten to death in a local park, according to CSEA City of White Plains Unit President Glen Fortunato. "We all did our best," Fermin said. "I was more concerned about my department than myself, really and truly."

Throughout the city during the storm, motor vehicle operators at state mental hospitals transported doctors, nurses and support staff from their homes to their jobs. Frank Galtier, Don Brooke, David Bjourklund, Jack Brennan and Ralph Pacchiano came into South Beach Psychiatric Center on Sunday night, slept at the hospital, and worked until Tuesday providing non-stop emergency transportation and operating snowplows.

The sacrifices of hundreds of such employees kept Manhattan Psychiatric Center, Brooklyn Developmental Center, Staten Island Developmental Center, Bronx Psychiatric and Developmental Centers, and Creedmoor, Queens Children's and Bernard Fineson Developmental Centers all operational.

Motor Vehicle Operators Benny Robinson, Nickolas Dukas, Phil Mastopolo, Alton McLeod, Leroy Hamilton, Barry Powell and Joseph Johnson were singled out by Local 406 President Caroline Sikoryak for transporting critical staff to Creedmoor, Queens Children Psychiatric and Bernard Fineson.

"The CSEA members at all our psychiatric and developmental facilities did themselves proud under extremely dangerous and threatening conditions," CSEA Metropolitan Region President George Boncoraglio said.

There is life after layoff

Ron Bouton turns a pink slip into a new start

DELI — After almost nine years working as a cleaner at SUNY Delhi, last August CSEA member Ron Bouton got what every worker fears most — a pink slip.

For many in his situation, 29 years old with no college education and a wife and four children, it might have seemed like a devastating blow. But not for Bouton — he turned the negative into a positive. And others can do the same, he believes.

After meeting with college Vice President William Harriman to be informed of his layoff rights, he turned the situation around by asking the vice president what the college could do for him.

“I let him tell me what he was going to tell me, and then I asked him if there was a way the college could help me out,” Bouton said.

Indeed there was. Bouton told the vice president that he was interested in taking courses for a certificate program in plumbing, heating and pipe fitting. Harriman told him the college would assist him in getting into the program and deferring payment for the first semester. As it turned out, Bouton applied for and received financial aid and did not even need the college’s help in paying for the courses. He says he still appreciated their offer.

“Basically they were willing to help anybody get back on their feet,” he said. “It was a very stressful time; I just tried to make the best of it.”

So Bouton started taking classes at the college in September, and the layoff took effect in November.

In less than a month, however, Bouton was hired off a preferred list as a full-time evening cleaner at nearby SUNY Oneonta. But instead of quitting the classes, he decided to work and go to school full-time.

“I started it, now I want to finish it,” he said.

Bouton said it was difficult, going to work from 10 at night until 6:30 in the morning and then taking classes from 8 in the morning until 2:30 in the afternoon, but the results were worth it.

“I’m happy. It was a lot of hard work, but it was worth it in the end.”

Bouton is now finishing the certificate program with the spring semester of courses and plans to go back next fall to get an associates degree and further studies to include HVAC training. Saying he’s basically an optimist, he had this advice for others facing a similar situation:

“The only thing I can say is don’t let it get you down and try to bounce back from it as best you can. Try to look toward the future.”

ALBANY — A hostage-taking incident at SUNY Albany in December 1994 has led to a number of positive changes on campus since, according to SUNY Albany CSEA Local 691 President Ellen Krzkowski. Former student Ralph Tortorici was recently convicted of several charges related to the incident in which a classroom full of students were taken hostage and one was eventually shot and wounded before Tortorici was subdued.

“The lighting in the parking lots has been improved,” Krzkowski said. Red emergency phones are now available throughout the campus. It’s just too bad it took an incident like that to make people more aware of security needs at the facility.”

Krzkowski noted that campus employees have been issued identification and that has eased worry by students when workers show up in dormitories at night to do work.

“And the campus has an emergency phone system now, just in case the main system goes down due to over use or other problems,” Krzkowski said. That new system, she noted, was the result of the bad experience the administration had in maintaining communications on and off campus during the height of the 1994 hostage crisis.

“And I even have my own cell phone, just in case. I never want to be without a way to communicate with the outside again, never,” Krzkowski said.

Kwanzaa
A celebration of black culture

MANHATTAN — More than 40 aunts, uncles, cousins, brothers, sisters, husbands, wives, children, grandchildren and one beaming grandmother crowded into Tony Bailous’ living room on Dec. 30 to celebrate “family” and “purpose.” They were there to observe Kwanzaa, the sixth year members of the Bailous family have gathered in each other’s homes to participate in this unique American holiday that honors the cultural roots of African Americans.

“Kwanzaa is about your roots, it’s about family, it’s about belonging and sharing. Kwanzaa is about love and being proud of who you are,” said Tony Bailous speaking as a proud son, husband and father, instead of as president of CSEA Local 419 at New York State’s Psychiatric Institute as he usually does.

This year the St. Louis branch of the family traveled to New York to share the family Kwanzaa in Manhattan.

Six years earlier Elfreida Bailous, Tony’s mother, seized upon the idea of beginning a Kwanzaa celebration after her own mother passed away at age 102.

“I realized in writing her obituary that I only knew what she wanted me to know about her ancestry,” Mrs. Bailous said.

It was the Kwanzaa principle of Umoja (Unity) in the family, community, nation and race, that compelled her to start seeking out her own roots, searching out people with the name Bailous.

“My Kwanzaa is strictly roots. It’s about finding out who you are and sharing your tradition,” she said.

The tradition of family storytelling is a rich part of the Kwanzaa celebration which began in 1966 as a cultural reaffirmation.

Federal agency resisting Pataki’s mass jobs transfer

Gov. George Pataki’s plans to relocate several hundred state jobs from New York City to Binghamton may have hit a roadblock, and his plans to shift state jobs from Albany to the Kingston area are going nowhere at the present time.

The federal Social Security Administration, which funds the state’s Department of Social Service Office of Disability Determinations in Queens, has expressed “serious reservations” about funding costs related to such a move. Social Security management also complained the state failed to consult the agency about the planned move. Pataki wants to include the DSS workers as part of about 1,350 jobs he wants to transfer from New York City to former IBM facilities near Binghamton.

Meanwhile, a lease-purchase agreement between the state and IBM that would send more than 3,100 jobs from the Albany area to IBM facilities near Kingston has not been signed yet. And a state task force reviewing the Kingston move has not had an official meeting in months.

CSEA and state Democrat leaders oppose both large scale job transfers as “geographic patronage.”

Conceived by Dr. Maulana Karenga, a Black Studies professor, Kwanzaa is the only nationally celebrated, non-religious, non-political African-American holiday.

In times when there are severe stress upon all American families, Tony Bailous said Kwanzaa celebrations have a powerful renewing and strengthening influence.

Troy members give up parking to aid local State jobs transfer

TROY— CSEA city of Troy employees, who have already sacrificed a lot in an effort to aid this financially-strapped community, are sacrificing even more — their parking spaces — to help boost the local economy.

A lack of parking spaces is holding up the planned transfer of about 300 state Department of Labor workers from the Albany area to downtown Troy. The city had promised available parking as part of the package to bring the Jobs to Troy.

CSEA-represented city workers called a press conference as this edition of The Public Sector went to press to announce they will give up their assigned city employee parking spots to help the community complete the jobs transfer package and thereby improve its economy.

Adequate parking in a private facility is apparently available in Troy to accommodate the planned transfer of an additional 350 state Health Department employee to Troy soon.
MINEOLA — CSEA officials responded with anger and outrage at many of Nassau County Executive Thomas Gulotta’s recent proposals for a “New Nassau.”

While Gulotta pledged “health and safety” for Nassau residents, two of his proposals “wounded” CSEA Nassau County Local 830 President Tony Giustino said.

Gulotta’s plan to privatize and sell the Nassau County A. Holly Patterson Geriatric Center (AHPGC), the county’s only public nursing home, would effectively pull the health safety net from elderly residents who are dependent on the facility for their very lives, charged Giustino and CSEA Long Island Region President Nick LaMorte.

In 1994, a committee appointed by Gulotta to review and analyze the possibility of privatizing and/or selling the facility overwhelmingly rejected the plan and denounced the sale or privatization of A. Holly and the Nassau County Medical Center.

Giustino pointed out the main motivation for private entities is profit and privatization would make the facility unaffordable for most current residents.

“Claiming you will privatize the nursing home and residents will enjoy a new, state-of-the-art facility is fine for those residents who have money but what about the majority of whom are without income? And what about the AIDS unit? It is government’s fundamental responsibility to care for these people and it is clearly the public employees who do the job the best and at the least cost to the taxpayers,” Giustino said.

The proposal to have inmates work on county work crews is also unacceptable to CSEA, Giustino and LaMorte said.

“It is absolutely absurd to consider chain gangs in a busy area like Nassau County. The safety of the residents and the CSEA members would be compromised and it would actually cost the taxpayers money because of transportation and supervision expenditures,” Giustino said.

“It jeopardizes our members who may be asked to work alongside the inmates and it will be cause for fear for Nassau County residents who have to worry about escapes and even hostage situations. Inmate work should clearly be done within the confines of the jail.”

CSEA is also concerned with other proposals regarding the closure of the juvenile detention facility and workforce programs in school districts.

“Tom Gulotta put politics over people,” LaMorte said.

“He may as well call the “New Nassau,” “Newt Nassau” — Tom is picking up the torch from Newt Gingrich by abandoning our members would be compromised and it can't be cost the taxpayers money because of transportation and supervision expenditures,” Giustino said.

Director insults ECMC workers

"We demand a written apology to our members for this uncalled-for slur"

BUFFALO — Erie County Medical Center members and activists have demanded an apology for the latest unfounded insult hurled their way.

When ECMC Director Paul Candino was making his annual budget presentation to the County Legislature last month, he said "we don't believe we are getting eight hours pay for eight hours work" from ECMC employees, who are members of CSEA Erie County Local 815.

While he didn't document his ridiculous claim, he then showed his ignorance of collective bargaining, activists say, by asking the legislators to cancel lunch and break provisions of the employees' contract.

The county employees unit has reached agreement on a new contract, which will be signed soon.

"We demand a written apology to our members for this uncalled-for slur," said Mike Bogulsak, unit and local president. "This was two-faced, because when he sought our help for his so-called Strategic Initiatives improvements plan, he never even mentioned anything like this, or any problem with our work force."

"And it's totally untrue," said Joan Bender, section president. "Many of our members come in early, don't take breaks or lunch and work late because they are dedicated health care professionals. Many have invested their whole career at ECMC, and wear the badge of professional pride."

In a letter, Bogulsak, Bender and CSEA Western Region President Bob Lattimer warned Candino that future relations may change.

"It is clear that the direction you have decided to take is likely to affect our working relationship for the foreseeable future," they wrote. "CSEA can no longer operate in an atmosphere where good faith commitments and cooperation are only words."

The letter was distributed to county legislators, ECMC Board of Managers, and ECMC members. Nancy Symes, a 32-year ECMC employee, also wrote a letter to the Buffalo News on behalf of herself and fellow workers.

Harold Kane: good will specialist

Putnam County worker gets the job done

CARMEL — Harold Kane is Putnam County’s ambassador of goodwill.

A Highway Department supervisor who not only loves his job, he thrives on complaints because it gives him a chance to show taxpayers what county employees can do for them.

"I set up all the jobs," he explained. "When the residents complain, I have to make the work assignments. I represent the county when I speak to the residents."

Kane, a 23-year county employee and member of CSEA’s Putnam County Unit, said the best part of his job is that people remember him and know they can count on him to get the job done. In fact, a newsletter from a local homeowners association praised the work he and his co-workers had done recently to improve a local road. The praise, though, is rare.

"Our guys don't get enough recognition for the work they do," he said. "There's a lot of pressure here. I tell management 'come sit at my desk for a day.' The reality is here."

While the population has increased, his department has shrunk, Kane said.

"When I was first hired in 1972, we had 95 employees on the road," he said. "Today, we're down to 37, and we still have the same amount of county roads and a lot more residents."

Those residents demand services, Kane said.

"If the (highway) commissioner gets flack," he said, "he'll come down on us."

In addition to road maintenance, department employees have also taken on projects that many counties would ordinarily contract out to private companies. Workers last year installed 8,000 feet of pipe and rebuilt a bridge, saving taxpayers $150,000.

Kane is also a community activist. A trustee in the Village of Cold Spring, he serves on the village Highway Committee. He also coached Pop Warner football for 14 years.

County Unit President Dot Trotter said the Putnam County residents are fortunate to have employees such as Kane.

"There are approximately 38 more just like him who work to maintain the safety of our roads as well as all the facilities owned and operated by Putnam County,"

Trotter has heard from several people who praised the condition of county roads after several back-to-back storms hit.

"Comments like these that make me proud to represent such a great group of individuals," she said.

EMPIRE PLAN INSURANCE

Unannounced Empire Plan changes ‘inexcusable’

Unannounced changes in the Empire Plan health insurance program covering local government employees that went into effect Jan. 1 caught employees off guard and generated an angry response from CSEA President Danny Donohue.

The state Department of Civil Service did not notify enrollees until several days after the changes went into effect. The changes included increases in copays and deductibles.

Donohue fired off an angry letter to the Civil Service commissioner, calling the breach of protocol “unprofessional, inexcusable and unconscionable.”

ROCKLAND COUNTY

Worker’s rights violated

NEW CITY — A court ruling in Rockland County reaffirms employees’ rights against self-incrimination.

Acting Supreme Court Justice Robert Mechan ruled that Rockland County officials violated an employee’s rights when they charged her with insubordination for refusing to answer questions after disciplinary charges had been filed.

The worker, a nurse aide, was interrogated and charged with negligent care of a patient. The county then requested a second interrogation.

She did not attend the second interrogation based on CSEA’s advice and was charged with insubordination.

Mechan ruled that the employee could not be compelled to answer questions related to the incident once disciplinary charges were made.

THE CSEA WORK FORCE

We Didn’t Vote for THESE Changes

Gov. Pataki’s proposed 1996 state budget would have potentially devastating effects on many state and local government programs.

CSEA believes recklessly reducing services is an affront to taxpayers and voters who want better government at the best cost, not less government at any cost. See Pages 9-11 for some examples of how CSEA is fighting the proposed state budget on several fronts.
In touch with you

A message from CSEA President Danny Donohue

We're at our very best when conditions are at their very worst

Anyone who questions the value of public employees should be pointed directly to the efforts of CSEA members during the Blizzard of '96. In a storm of historic proportions, CSEA members performed their work in heroic proportions.

Stories representative of the extraordinary dedication of CSEA members during the storm and its aftermath are presented on page 3 of this edition of The Public Sector. These stories demonstrate just some of the thousands of reasons why we have public employees.

Yes, public employees are always on the front line in an emergency; that's our job. But there's so much more than just a paycheck involved when snowplow operators work 16-hour shifts in the height of a storm: when people stay on duty for 24 hours straight or longer in health care facilities. All across New York it was commonplace to see public employees putting themselves on the line to be sure that others got the help they needed. I have always said 'nobody does it better' and you proved me right once again.

Helping New York get back to normal quickly is an excellent example of the value that CSEA members provide for the tax dollar. But it is not only that high level of service, but also that spirit that is at risk in a blizzard of another sort — political and budgetary assaults on public employees.

Even as CSEA members were mopping up after Mother Nature's assault, Change-NY, a millionaire's club dedicated to getting ever bigger breaks for the wealthiest at the expense of the rest of us, renewed its attack on public employees.

Change-NY announced it is recalling three staffers from top posts in the Pataki administration to help restart the organization. Disgracefully, one of the founders of Change-NY said the move was necessary to offset the "squeals from those who feed at the public trough."

An incredible statement, considering the three Change-NY staffers were being paid nearly $270,000 annually in taxpayer-financed salaries in their Pataki administration posts.

The CSEA work force stands in a constant state of readiness, and public emergencies are dramatic examples of our abilities to rise above and beyond. But those who bash public employees should recognize that our greatest worth is providing quality vital services that New Yorkers want and demand day in and day out, in good weather and bad. Nobody does it better, nobody.
CSEA member Felicia Paul, right, talks about the likelihood of losing her job because the Harlem Valley Division For Youth is closing. Listening intently is Joseph Camara, another CSEA member at the facility with an uncertain future. They are just two of the faces behind state budget cuts.

CSEA campaign successful in saving 150 jobs scheduled for privatization

WHITE PLAINS — Thanks to the strenuous efforts of CSEA members and staff in Westchester County, a campaign to stop the privatization of a number of county departments was partially successful.

When Westchester County Executive Andrew O'Rourke announced last summer that he intended to contract out the operation of some county services, CSEA members rallied together to organize a task force to oppose the plan.

A strong political campaign which involved phone calls, letters and petitions, demonstrations during legislative meetings and a newspaper and radio advertising campaign resulted in the overriding of executive budget vetoes which, in the end, saved 150 of the 400 CSEA jobs eliminated from the county budget.

"It was the hard work of our members along with CSEA staff which convinced some of the legislators to work with us by attempting to restore some of the budget lines," said CSEA Political Action Coordinator Stan Merritt, who continuously assisted local and unit officers and members during months of meetings with lawmakers.

"It never ceased to amaze me that these politicians were so convinced that contracting out was going to be the answer to all the fiscal problems in Westchester County," said CSEA Southern Region President Maryjane MacNair.

"I know these are tough times," she said, "but how can they actually believe that an out-of-state, for-profit company is actually going to save taxpayers money?"

Merritt thanked the members who worked on the telephone campaign during the last weeks of legislative meetings.

"Their efforts did not go unrewarded," he said. "Several legislators reported being barraged with phone calls."

Merritt also reminded members to put the blame where it belongs.

"Remember those legislators who worked hand in hand with Andrew O'Rourke to privatize jobs in the county and take those names to the polls in November."

"It isn't over yet," warned MacNair. "We will continue to monitor these contractors and we will let taxpayers know where they fail and what it is costing them. O'Rourke and the legislators will be made accountable."

PRIVATEZATION doesn't work!

In Monroe Co.

Negotiations to sell health agency continue

ROCHESTER — While Monroe County continues to negotiate the sale of the Community Home Health Agency to a private contractor, CSEA is fighting on several fronts to cancel it, including:

CSEA's research department is reviewing the financial data the county is using to justify such a sale;

Political action activists are showing county legislators the negative impact of such a sale, especially on those who are unable to afford health care insurance costs, while pointing out the contractor's refusal to commit to care for all;

CSEA's legal department is reviewing the potential transfer of the county's certificate of need, and its legality if the contractor continues to refuse those in need;

CSEA is gearing up to organize the current employees of the contractor, as well as those who might be affected.

And in Wayne Co.

Privatization averted at nursing home as members prove they do the job best

LYONS — Intelligent, concerted action by CSEA activists and staff has removed the shadow of privatization for about 15 members' accounting jobs at the Wayne County Nursing Home.

"We're very happy that we were able to show the county that our members can do a better job than the private sector competitor they had in mind," said Bill Gutschow, president of the County Employee Unit of Wayne County Local 859. "And since the deadline has passed for a county study of the issue, they must believe it, too."

When they learned the county was considering a contract with Genesee Regional Home Care Association, Gutschow and CSEA Labor Relations Specialist Pat Domaratz went to work.

They informed the county administrator and Board of Supervisors of an obligation to negotiate such a move. Then they met with affected employees, learned county's figures were not correct, got correct numbers and other employee improvement suggestions.

At a labor-management meeting, they took an aggressive stance supporting members and offering the problem-solving assistance of the union.

Along with other activists, they lobbied the county administrator, key board members and department head on the dangers of privatizing accounting functions.

"We also offered to be available in the future to help show that privatization doesn't work as well as public employees do," Domaratz said. "Because it's true."

Binghamton member saves co-worker’s life

BINGHAMTON — Danger lurks everywhere. Just ask CSEA Binghamton State Employees Local 002 member Kevin Kresge, a state DOT motor equipment mechanic who was sent to help co-worker Richard “Dick” Presto.

Presto’s vehicle had broken down on the side of a busy highway, but ironically, it was Presto who ended up “rescuing” Kresge from a life-threatening injury.

The incident occurred after Kresge replaced a plugged fuel filter in the excavator that Presto, a highway worker 1, had been driving back to the DOT residency.

Attempting to start the vehicle, Kresge poured gasoline directly into the carburetor, as Presto turned the key from the cab. After starting and stalling several times, the engine backfired, igniting the gasoline Kresge was pouring and spraying him with flaming gasoline. Shielded by the open engine hood, Presto couldn’t see the explosion.

“All I saw was a flame shoot across the machine in the back and out into the driving lane of the road,” Presto said. “I jumped out of the cab and ran around the other side of the machine looking for him, and he was in the ditch rolling around, to put it bluntly, like a human torch. He was yelling ‘put me out.’

Kresge knew from his experience as a volunteer fireman that he needed to put out the fire on his body, so he did as the lessons taught and “stopped, dropped, and rolled.”

Presto immediately jumped on Kresge and extinguished the flames with his coat and body, then helped Kresge tear off his still-smoldering clothing. He then got a fire extinguisher from the truck, put out the remaining fire in the engine and the grass surrounding Kresge, flagged down a truck for assistance and used the service truck’s radio to call into the residency for medical assistance.

“How the hell do you thank somebody for saving your life?” he asked. “How many people would have panicked and run for help without putting me out? How many people would have done that? Who’s going to jump on someone with four feet of flames on them?”

Kresge said that before the incident, he and Presto were little more than acquaintances.

“I’d say we’re pretty close now,” Presto said.

Kresge said he and his family were very grateful for the outpouring of support from their co-workers and friends.

“I want to say thanks to the hundreds of co-workers and friends for their generosity, thoughts and prayers,” Kresge said. “And especially Dick.”

Bridge worker injured

BEACON — For CSEA State Bridge Authority Local 050 member Walter Swanson, danger came roaring out of the night in the form of a speeding car without headlights one night recently.

The Newburgh-Beacon Bridge worker sustained a fractured hip and a cut hand when the speeding car slammed into Swanson’s toll booth.

Two teenagers in the car, including the 13-year-old driver, were killed in the crash. Police said the driver, without headlights, was attempting to evade a local police officer who had attempted to pull him over.

“No job is safe, especially in this industry,” said Local 050 President Chris Perrello.

CSEA forces Bronx PC to tighten asbestos removal precautions

BRONX — When Bronx Psychiatric Center management began removing asbestos from a hospital ward in proximity to patients and staff without notifying CSEA, Local 401 President Ed Gray hit the ceiling.

“We had CSEA members descending on the union office every day worried and fearful about asbestos removal going on in the midst of patient care,” Gray said.

Gray, Local 401 Safety and Health Chair Abraham Benjamin and CSEA Safety and Health Specialist Dan Morra promptly brought their concerns to management.

The result was the creation of an alternate “swing” ward where each group of patients and staff whose regular location must undergo abatement will be accommodated.

But the local is still concerned about the slowness with which management has responded to several CSEA requests to receive promised air quality test results, according to Benjamin.

“Management has now agreed that the union will be informed in advance about any additional asbestos abatement and they will provide this safe area where staff and patients will be moved while abatement is under way,” Gray said.

CSEA Mental Hygiene Therapy Aide Curtis Rice said management brought in representatives to advise the staff that it was “safe” to continue working in the same area where asbestos was being removed.

“How can it be safe to work in an area where there is a known respiratory carcinogen?” he asked.

“CSEA is relieved that affected staff and patients will be removed to a different ward location during abatement,” Gray said, “but we expect to monitor the entire project extremely closely to assure that the highest safety standards will be observed.”

CSEA is also demanding that Bronx Psychiatric Center prepare and maintain the records required by law of all staff and patients exposed to asbestos, thereby insuring that they are covered under Workers’ Compensation should asbestos-related lung disease appear in future years, Morra said.

How the hell do you thank somebody for saving your life?”

KEVIN KRESGE, right, thanks co-worker Richard Presto for his quick actions which saved his life after the excavator pictured behind them exploded, showering burning fuel onto Kresge.
DECATUR, IL — When more than 700 workers refused to make unreasonable concessions, A.E. Staley Manufacturing Co. locked them out of its corn-milling plant.

The workers turned to their brothers and sisters in the labor movement, and AFSCME Council 31 answered their call.

From the beginning, we were very involved with the Staley workers," said Buddy Maupin, Council 31 region director in Decatur.

"Very involved" has ranged from raising money to help support locked-out workers, represented by the United Paperworkers International Union (UPIU), to going to jail.

And that's just for the Staley workers. The council has also supported striking Caterpillar and Firestone/Bridgestone workers in Decatur.

The Staley workers recently ratified a new contract. Not everyone is happy with the final result, Maupin said, but AFSCME's support during the lockout was vital.

"We fought a fight that we needed to fight," he said. "AFSCME members have a lot to be proud of."

During the 30 months of the Staley stalemate, AFSCME Council 31 members and staff walked picket lines and joined huge rallies to support the Staley workers.

AFSCME President Gerald McEntee attended rallies to support the Staley workers.

"We had rallies with 8,000 people; we had autoworkers on strike, rubberworkers on strike, Staley locked out," said Maupin, who was master of ceremonies at those rallies. "To ask an AFSCME person to MC all those rallies tells you something about the role AFSCME played.

Why Council 31 cares about private sector

DECATUR, IL — Why would the public employees who belong to AFSCME Council 31 mobilize to help the troubled employees of A.E. Staley, Caterpillar and Firestone/Bridgestone?

According to Council 31 Region Director Buddy Maupin, the answer is simple.

"We cared in Illinois because we know that our fates are intertwined. We know public sector labor cannot flourish or even survive without private sector labor," Maupin said.

"Besides the lofty ideals of solidarity, it's in our self interest to protect and defend the right to organize and get good wages in the private sector.

"If these workers end up on the ash heap, if we're the only ones with good wages and benefits, then we don't have a very good future, either."

"We had a tremendous response from AFSCME members in this part of the country," he said. "That's why we were able to contribute more than any other union.

The council's 24 locals pledged money every month to the Staley adopt-a-family program; AFSCME staff used payroll check-off to make contributions. The council raised $140,000, more than any affiliate or international.

Council 31 helped pressure Staley's customers, too. Since Staley sells directly to large corporations, a standard consumer boycott wouldn't work. Instead the UPIU targeted the corporations that buy from Staley. One of their main products is corn syrup sold to beverage manufacturers.

AFSCME joined the campaign to convince Miller Brewing Co. to stop doing business with Staley.

"They credit us with being the straw that broke Miller's back," Maupin said.

Council 31 Executive Director Henry Bayer wrote to Miller promising to send a letter to Council 31 members saying that Miller was "funding the war on workers in Decatur" if the company did not stop doing business with Staley by a certain date, Maupin explained.

Two days before Bayer's deadline, Miller agreed to drop Staley.

AFSCME's dedication got very personal for Maupin and others.

During one incident, Maupin and Council 31 Staff Representative Debby Lippincott were arrested with 43 others.

Maupin was also among a group of protesters brutally pepper-gassed by Decatur police during a peaceful demonstration.

"We were blockading the plant entrance," he said. Some people were laying face down when the police approached. "They turned them over to spray directly into their faces, six inches away."

Small children were among the pepper gas victims, he said.

"The pepper gassing was a pretty offensive measure," he said.

The Staley lockout is over, and AFSCME Council 31 activists are ready for the next fight to help union brothers and sisters.

Payoff at polls

DECATUR, IL — Supporting the many union members facing labor struggles in Decatur was the right thing to do, but it also helped AFSCME Council 31 in its own struggles.

Not only did the council support the locked out workers at A.E. Staley Manufacturing, they also helped striking workers of Caterpillar and Firestone/Bridgestone.

"We mobilized all these workers and elected the first Democratic mayor in Decatur since 1945," said Council 31 Region Director Buddy Maupin. "We tapped into and mobilized people who had not been politically active to elect a good city council."
Days he puts a shine on hallways; nights it’s a gleam in a child’s eye

“The best part of it is seeing the smiles on the kids’ faces when they come running to you, just the gleam in their eyes,” he said, with a bit of a twinkle in his own.

McDonald got the idea of portraying Santa Claus five years ago when he took his grandson to see Santa for the first time, and was not impressed with how the kids were being treated. He felt he could do a better job. “Santa Claus should make them feel happy and make them believe there’s a real Santa,” he said.

Soon thereafter, he called the New Jersey company that hires the area Santa, and told them he’d like the job for the next year. Needless to say, he got it, and has been sitting in Santa’s chair for the past four years, and says he’ll keep on “as long as I can do it.”

McDonald makes the illusion more real by going to a hair salon each year and spending from eight to ten hours having his naturally brown hair and beard dyed white, and by putting his heart into it, constantly ringing bells, waving at children as they walk by, and “ho, ho, ho-ing” just as loudly as he can. And the magic doesn’t end just at the mall — for two years he played the jolly old elf for the children in the developmental center’s day care facility.

SUNY SANTAS — SUNY Oswego employees pitched in with a truckload of toys for Oswego County’s neediest children this past holiday season. College people donated more than $400 and more than 500 toys during their eighth annual campus Drive for Toys. The donations were delivered to the Oswego County Department of Social Services for distribution to local children. Shown with some of the gifts are toy drive committee members Casey Walpole, Ann Marie Ellis and Vernon Reynolds.

CSEA TAX AND FINANCE LOCAL 690 members came through in a big way when they learned that Albany area radio station WGY’s Christmas Wish Fund faced a shortfall this holiday season. Local members raised $2,167 and presented a check for that amount on air to WGY radio personality Don Weeks. Local 690 member Sue Mailloux, center, chats with Weeks, right, as Local 690 member Pat Finn records the event.

Thaxton case goes to arbitration

LAKE GEORGE — A state Supreme Court justice has ruled that CSEA Warren County Unit member Bernie Thaxton is entitled to an arbitration hearing in a controversial dismissal case.

CSEA demanded an arbitration hearing after Thaxton was coerced by management into resigning last May after being accused of taking two gallons of gasoline from the county Department of Public Works. He had been denied union representation during improper interrogation by management.

Three named top PEOPLE recruiters for November, December

Three members earned Recruiter of the Month honors recently by recruiting new members for the PEOPLE Program. PEOPLE (Public Employees Organized to Promote Legislative Equality) is the CSEA-AFSCME lobbying program that operates at the federal level.

Two members tied for top honors for November, each recruiting 19 new members for the program. November recruiting leaders were Jackie Stanford, a member of State Insurance Fund Local 351, and William Bowen, a member of the Orange County Unit of Orange County Local 836.

James Statom, a member of Harlem Valley Secure Center Local 553, earned top honors for December by recruiting 30 new PEOPLE members.

A rose, by any other name, is still a Wiesen

Andrew Wiesen, a Nassau County Local 830 member, has a lot to be thankful for. He survived a kidney transplant, got his job back with the help of CSEA and is benefitting from good benefits negotiated by his union. His story was profiled in the January edition of The Public Sector. Unfortunately, he was referred to as Andrew Wilson throughout the article. We apologize and regret the mistake.

Your union dues work for you

Your union dues, which are among the lowest in the country, support CSEA efforts to obtain better wages, better benefits, retirement benefits and equitable terms and conditions of employment for the 265,000 active and retired members of CSEA that are far superior to non-unionized workers.

CSEA negotiates the best contract provisions and protections possible because effective management of union dues make it possible for the union to employ an experienced, qualified professional staff.

CSEA also supports CSEA’s legislative and political action program, making it possible for CSEA to promote and support legislation that is in your best interest while working to reject legislation that would be harmful to you.

CSEA supports issues that help you throughout your working career and assists you when you retire, such as pension supplementation, permanent cost-of-living adjustments, health insurance for retirees and preservation of the retirement system.

Your union dues work for you in many ways. Of every dues dollar paid, 97 cents goes toward negotiating and enforcing union contracts, improving and protecting terms and conditions of employment and working on a wide range of issues and projects that directly affect members. Three cents is used for promoting political or ideological programs and projects important to CSEA members and labor in general.

CSEA members who object to the appropriation of a portion of their dues for political or ideological purposes unrelated to collective bargaining can obtain a rebate.

To request a refund from CSEA, individual refund requests must be submitted in writing by certified or registered mail addressed to: CSEA Treasurer Civil Service Employees Association P.O. Box 2611 Albany, NY 12220-0611

CSEA refund requests will only be accepted during the month of March. Requests must be postmarked during the month of March and no later than March 31, 1996.

Individual requests only must be submitted; lists of members are not acceptable.

Each request for reimbursement must be typed or legibly printed and must include the individual’s name, home address, Social Security number and CSEA local number. The request must be signed by the member.
