Answer to Stevens—

Editor’s Note: The following is an answer to Mr. Stevens’ letter of August 1, 1958 in which he asks the Union how it would run the affairs.

Mr. C. Stevens, Manager, 801 E. 85th St., Cleveland, Ohio

Dear Mr. Stevens:

Your letter of August 1st asking how our Union officers and their elected representatives should deal with the American Legion and similar organizations interested in our operations is a matter of the highest importance to all of us.

We have no idea how the American Legion and similar organizations would deal with our Union officers and their elected representatives, nor do we know how the American Legion and similar organizations would deal with the management of the company.

We believe that our Union officers and their elected representatives should deal with the American Legion and similar organizations in a manner that is consistent with the highest principles of labor relations.

Yours truly,

Joe Walker

Jandreau Reports On Negotiations

Resorting to the Meadmoor on National Negotiations affecting Employment Security, at four Pontifical Council meetings covering the First and Second Shifts, Jandreau, Local 301 Business Agent, said: “The General Electric Company is not engaging at good faith with the Unions on the issue of Employment Security.” The Business Agent went on to say that a Contract between the General Electric Company and the IUE-AFL-CIO was signed on August 10, 1955, for a five-year period.

The Union, during the negotiations, in 1955, tried to persuade the Company to include in the Contract a more specific provision, that would guarantee Employment Security for all GE employees. The Company refused to include such a provision, that since the Electronic Company was the only one in the United States, that has been a problem for the Union to negotiate with the employer.

The Unions, on the other hand, pressed for that all the companies that were negotiated in the industry, would have to include Employment Security in their contracts.

In November 1955, the Unions, feeling compelled to make the negotiations, by informing the management that no other major companies had already provided in their contracts, assurances of Employment Security to all their employees.

Jandreau, the Business Agent, said that the negotiations, in 1955, were not satisfactory, and that the Unions, feeling compelled to make the negotiations, by informing the management that no other major companies had already provided in their contracts, assurances of Employment Security to all their employees.

EMPLOYMENT SECURITY?

A News release by a company announcing that at least 92% of the G.E. employees wanted to participate or elect the Saginaw and Steelworkers Union in the next election under the General Electric Company on August 27th, 1951, to the United Steelworkers (U.S.W.O.S.)

Questions to be considered in National Negotiations at the time under the present Agreement:

1. What provisions for the improvement of employment security are there in the contract?

2. How are they going to be handled and what are they in your opinion the best ways to approach them?

3. What will be the effect of any such arrangement on employee wages and working conditions?

4. Does the company intend to make sure that the employees are aware of the arrangements?

5. What provisions are there for the protection of employees in case of layoffs or plant shutdowns?

6. How do you feel about the present system of seniority and how would you propose to improve it?

7. What provisions are there for the retraining and reemployment of employees who are laid off or discharged?

8. What provisions are there for the protection of employees' health and safety?

9. What provisions are there for the protection of employees' personal security?

10. What provisions are there for the protection of employees' working hours and working conditions?

and hence suffered a loss in their wages. Numerical changes in this respect have been so large that the resulting changes have been quite noticeable. For example, a survey of 1950 Wisconsin union contracts showed that the average wage for electricians was $3.50 per hour, while in 1951 it had increased to $3.75 per hour. This increase may not seem large, but it represents a significant step forward in the struggle for better wages and working conditions.

The problem of how to improve employment security is complex and cannot be solved by any one factor. It requires a combination of efforts from the company, the union, and the employees themselves. The company must be committed to providing a stable work environment, while the union must be committed to bargaining for better wages and working conditions. Employees must also be committed to their own personal development and career planning.

The Steelworkers' Union is committed to improving employment security for its members. The union has a long history of fighting for better wages and working conditions, and has been successful in negotiating many contracts that include provisions for job security. The union is also committed to providing training and career development opportunities for its members.

The Steelworkers' Union is working closely with the company to improve employment security for its members. The union and the company are working together to develop a comprehensive plan that includes provisions for job security, training, and career development. The union is committed to fighting for better wages and working conditions, and will continue to negotiate contracts that include these provisions.

Steelworkers Indorse Defense Program

The Steelworkers are proud to endorse the Defense Program, which is designed to help our country meet the needs of modern warfare. The program is funded by a tax on wages and salaries, and it is designed to provide funding for the national defense.

The Steelworkers' Union is committed to supporting the Defense Program, and we encourage all of our members to support it as well. The program is an important part of our country's defense, and it is essential for our nation's security.

We are proud to be part of the Steelworkers' Union, and we are committed to supporting the Defense Program. We believe that it is important for our country to have a strong defense, and we are proud to be a part of the team that is working to ensure our nation's security.
