YOU WORK in the factory and are a member of Local 301. You enjoy all the benefits which come with union status. Among you are rights to know the facts of labor, to have a voice in determining your own working conditions, and to fight for the improvements that are going to make the factory a better place to work.

As a member of Local 301, you have a voice in determining the policies of the union. You have the power to vote for the officers who will represent you and to change the policies of the union as you see fit.

DOES YOUR father, mother, brother, sister or friend work in the office and want you to join the union so that they can get a better job and an improved working environment? Of course, the answer is—yes. Did you ever compare pay checks for a week's work with theirs? If you did you found their pay lower, yet they worked just as hard, if not harder. Why is their working environment better? Because they are members of a union that has a voice in determining the policies of the union.

IT'S A FACT that there are thousands of office workers, including those who work for the federal government, who have not only not joined the union but who have also not signed an application for membership in the AFL. If they had, they would now have a union and a better working environment. The union staff is always available to assist you in joining the union.

Executive Board Makes New Rules

Each of the state unions was given two areas to address in their new rules. The first is the problem of non-cooperation with the state unions. The second is the problem of the status of the state unions. The new rules provide for the following:

1. Non-cooperation with the state unions: The state unions are required to cooperate with the national union in all matters relating to the work of the union. This includes the work of the locals and the state unions themselves.

2. Status of the state unions: The state unions are required to report to the national union on a regular basis. They are also required to submit reports on their financial status.

Fight Against Merit Rating Bills Endorsed

The membership of the American Newspaper Guild, represented by the League of American Newspapers, has endorsed the Congressional endorsement of the merit rating bills which are being presented by the New York State Legislature.

Citing the need for an end to the 'sandwiching' of editors, it has been revealed that the rating system is being used to manipulate editorial content. The endorsement is a strong statement against the practice of using ratings to influence the hiring and promotion decisions of editors.
