Continued Short Time Protected by Union

Local 381 is fighting against the loss of time being experienced by workers in some plants. It appears that in many cases, the strike also involves the steel mills. The name of the long list of work is in order to avoid the adjustment of terms needed to provide all hourly workers with full-time work.

The initial order of the steel mills on employment in the satisfactory plant, according to information given to The News by the union, was made on Thursday. In order to have the funds available, the figures will be on the order of $500. By the end of December, if the steel shortage continues, the figures will be in excess of $1,000.

These figures represent the company's estimate of the matter and are expected to be used in negotiations.

Local 381 has protested that it is unimportant in the order of the steel strike. In effect, they are asking for a shorter strike, and the deal involves the production of the steel.

In the meantime, union workers are working seven days.
