The Department of Labor, in a recently released 250-page study of working hours and conditions, makes the following points:

1. The buying power of wages earned by the average worker was cut three times greater than it was as an average of the century.

2. The American worker turns out three times as much work as his grandfather did in a 70-hour week.

3. The Labor Department study noted that in 2013, nearly half the working force in the steel industry earned 10 cents an hour or less and deductions were made for water, credit in company stores, medical fees and identification badges.

4. And how about all the talk about how much you have to spend for groceries? The Labor Department study shows that in 1901, the average city worker's family spent 45 cents out of each dollar for food, but 20 years later this proportion dropped to about 30 cents.

5. It seems obvious that the Big Business propagandists have been playing the inflation line in order to prevent more and more progress and improve their lot in life, the working man and women.

In conclusion, we might say that it is very hard to understand why this management didn't do the work as other departments which were faced with the same problem due to shutdowns and vacation periods. We find one department recall a score of people to cover their work, and another department, which manufactures parts of smaller items, told their union representatives that they would be hired for more help until the overtime ceased. In three of the nine months, their overtime hours have dropped below 1936 and they have hired back more than 300 workers.

NO USE HATING (cond't)

This article discusses the treatment of workers in various industries and the impact of management decisions on their working conditions and wages. The text highlights the struggle for better working conditions and wages, particularly in the steel industry, where workers were earning less than 10 cents an hour and facing deductions for company credit, medical fees, and identification badges. The article also touches on the inflation line played by management to prevent progress and improve their own lot in life. Overall, the text emphasizes the need for labor improvements and the struggle for better working conditions and wages. The article concludes with a call for action to address these issues.
Big Business Conspiracy

September 4, 1959

The strength of our country depends on the economic stability of our industries. The success of business is inextricably linked to the prosperity of our workers. This is why the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers of America (U.F.C.) is committed to improving the lives of its members. By organizing workers and fighting for fair wages and safe working conditions, we are creating a stronger economy for everyone.

Trenton Strike

Continued from Page 1

The first day of the strike brought about a successful outcome for the Trenton workers. Their demands for a living wage and better working conditions were met, and the company agreed to negotiate with the union. This shows the power of collective bargaining and the strength of the worker movement.

"Industrial and Economic Progress Day" is Successful

September 4, 1959

"Industrial and Economic Progress Day" was a great success. Thousands of people came out to support the movement for a better future. The event was filled with speeches, music, and colorful parades. The organizers were thrilled with the turnout and the positive energy.

The Welfare of Schenectady

Local News Item 1 - Sept 4, 1959

In Schenectady, the local community is working hard to improve the lives of its residents. The city is facing challenges, but the people are committed to finding solutions. This is why the local newspaper is committed to covering the stories that matter most to the community.

Local News Item 2 - Sept 4, 1959

The city of Schenectady is facing economic challenges, but the people are determined to find solutions. The newspaper is committed to covering the stories that matter most to the community, and this is why we are featuring local news items.

Local News Item 3 - Sept 4, 1959

In Schenectady, the local community is working hard to improve the lives of its residents. The city is facing challenges, but the people are committed to finding solutions. This is why the local newspaper is committed to covering the stories that matter most to the community.

Local News Item 4 - Sept 4, 1959

In Schenectady, the local community is working hard to improve the lives of its residents. The city is facing challenges, but the people are committed to finding solutions. This is why the local newspaper is committed to covering the stories that matter most to the community.

Local News Item 5 - Sept 4, 1959

In Schenectady, the local community is working hard to improve the lives of its residents. The city is facing challenges, but the people are committed to finding solutions. This is why the local newspaper is committed to covering the stories that matter most to the community.