301 Board Asks Steamfitters to Postpone Strike

The UE Board, in a move that could impact over 1,000 steamfitters, has asked them to postpone their strike for the first time in over 10 years. The strike is expected to affect over 20,000 workers across the US. The Board's decision is based on the current economic situation and the need to maintain productivity.

Some Difference

Facts for GE Workers

It's Big Business Greed for Profits That Boosts Prices, Not Wage Raises

General Electric and other monopoly companies are using their power positions to squeeze profits out of their workers. The companies are using their market positions to boost prices, not boost wages.

Pay Day Situation

As the UE Strike negotiations continue, the pay day situation is worsening. Workers are facing a 15% cut in their wages and benefits. The companies are using the strike as a leverage point to force workers to accept their demands.

UE Strikers Win Victory At Tiffin GE

Over 500 UE members, mostly women, employed at the Tiffin, Ohio, plant, have voted to strike. The strike is expected to affect over 1,000 workers across the country. The companies are using this as an opportunity to negotiate a new contract.

UEI Strike for Better Wages and Benefits

The UEI Strike is expected to affect over 20,000 workers across the US. The Union is demanding better wages and benefits for its members.
