The membership of Local 301, IUE-AFL-CIO, voted unanimously to change the discipline policy to a "no strike" policy. The vote was taken at the meetings of the 3rd and 4th districts and was endorsed by the Constitutional Committee, May 18, 1959.

The changes provide more protection for Shop Stewards and a financial saving for the Union in case a Union Office becomes vacated.

Henceforth, Shop Stewards were subject to removal because the steward must or the Union Office is deemed vacant. The changes provide more protection for Shop Stewards and a financial saving for the Union in case a Union Office becomes vacated.

Carey Addresses GE Conference Board Comments on Mr. Cordiner's Remarks

New York, N.Y. (June 5, 1959) James R. Carey, President of the International Union of Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers, was on a recent visit to the International Union headquarters in New York and New York City. He addressed the Board of Directors of the International Union, which he headlined "some observations concerning the labor-management problems of the moment." He concluded his remarks with the statement that he believed the country was at a turning point in its economic history and that the labor-management problems of the moment were critical.

Mr. Carey's remarks were based on a study of the labor-management problems of the moment, which he considered to be critical. He noted that the labor-management relationship had been characterized by a sharp deterioration in recent years, and that this deterioration had been accompanied by a decline in productivity and a rise in unemployment. He concluded that the labor-management relationship must be redefined, and that this would require a new approach to the problems of labor and management.

Mr. Carey's remarks were well received by the Board of Directors, who expressed a desire to work closely with him on this important issue. The Board of Directors also expressed a desire to have Mr. Carey's remarks published in the International Union magazine, "The Unionist," and to have them distributed to all members of the International Union.
