More Lost Jobs
In Turbine
By Jim Barch

"You make us tremble." This is Turbine management's reply every time the short metal group is hit with a layoff or job scarcity.

Here is the story concerning form-outs in the short metal group, in order to give job seekers the chance to find more jobs than would be found elsewhere, the short metal group filed a grievance, and the company was forced to take action.

The story was related by management at Union meetings where some of the grievances were being discussed.

A management representative explained that the change in procedure between the two companies was a result of the negotiations on the new grievances.

Union leaders at the meeting were concerned that the change in the grievance handling procedures would affect the rights of the workers.

The management representative assured the union leaders that the change in procedure would not affect the rights of the workers.

The union leaders were not satisfied with the management's assurance and asked for clarification of the new grievance handling procedures.

The Right of an Injured Worker To Sickness Benefits

A worker who is injured while at work receives compensation for lost time under the compensation laws. His maximum benefit is $50.00 per week for 56 weeks or $7,000.00, whichever is less. If he is unable to work due to illness not connected with an injury at the plant, he is entitled to Social Security benefits. If his recovery from the injury is expected to be more than 56 weeks, the amount of his Social Security benefits is reduced.

Union To Prevent Strike

The right of a worker to refuse to work is not limited to injuries at work. A worker who is injured at the plant may also refuse to work and receive compensation for lost time.
