Westinghouse Workers Hand 5 to 1 Shellacking to IUE and Politicians

The 7,000 workers of the Westinghouse Electric Company, headquartered in East Pittsburgh, Pa., went out on strike January 16th in a battle over the issue of whether Westinghouse workers would be allowed to vote on a proposed contract between the company and the IUE. The strike was the result of a series of bitter disputes over wages, hours, and working conditions, and was supported by the Westinghouse workers union, the United Electrical Workers Union (IUE). The strike was considered a major victory for the Westinghouse workers, who were successful in getting the company to make significant concessions on the issues of wages and working conditions.

FIGHTING JOB PROGRAM OUTLINED BY UE BOARD

The U&H Board outlined a comprehensive Job Program last night, which includes the following objectives:

1. To increase the number of union members by encouraging more workers to join the union.
2. To increase the bargaining power of the union by negotiating better contracts with employers.
3. To increase the public awareness of the union's role in fighting for workers' rights.
4. To increase the political power of the union by involvement in political campaigns.
5. To increase the financial stability of the union by increasing dues and membership.

The U&H Board also discussed the importance of maintaining strong local unions, and the need for regular training programs for stewards and other union leaders.

UE Launches National Campaign Against Anti-Labor Legislation

The Union Election Information Network (UEN) has launched a nationwide campaign to fight anti-labor legislation. The campaign is aimed at raising awareness of the issues and educating workers about the dangers of anti-labor legislation. The UEN has also launched a website to provide workers with information about the issues and how to take action.

The campaign includes a series of town hall meetings, a national tour of key congressional districts, and a social media campaign. The U&H Board has also approved a resolution in support of the campaign, and will work to mobilize union members to participate.

Local Blasts GE-McCarthy Plot Against Union

"McCarthy and My Mother-in-Law"

"You look like you swallowed the top of the aspirin bottle instead of an aspirin, ma," muttered Mike one day.

"I feel fine," said Mike.

"You look tired," said Marty, as the pair sat down in a corner chair.

"It's the way I always say when I'm thinking," said Mike. "Thinking." He smiled at Marty. "That is a dangerous practice for which McCarthy is soon to score a few low-balling.

"That is just what I have been thinking about," said Mike.

"That man McCarthy," said Marty.

"McCarthy does not enjoy much of a mother-in-law," replied Mike.

"Or a grandmother," added Marty.

"No," said Mike, with a shake of the head. "The old lady is saying that I should answer the question.

"Why did you marry my daughter?" asked Marty.

"I married Mike," replied Mr. Mike. "But they don't know you the same way I do," said Mike. "As for my marriage to the old lady, if you want to know the truth, she only married me for her own sake and her own happiness."

"And what do you say?" asked Marty.

"I tell her she will look better if she ever comes to see me or if she will ever look at me as I am."

"That's quite right," said Mike.

Mike shook his head. "Oh, yes," he said, "you can't understand the problems of being a mother-in-law."

"Yes, it's a problem," said Mike. "I think I understand a little about it."

"McCarthy" said Marty.

"McCarthy is a problem," said Mike. "He's a problem in every way."

"McCarthy may be a problem," said Marty. "But he's not a problem in my way."

"That's what I'm thinking about," said Mike.

"Oh, he's a problem," said Mike. "I think he's a problem in some ways."

"McCarthy is a problem," said Marty. "He's a problem in every way."
