T-H Issue

Today is Fifth T-H Birthday

Today is the fifth anniversary of the Tulsa-Harvey, who is now on the job for the fifth time.

For ten years, there was no question in the minds of those who knew the T-H, that he was one of the best workers in the country. He was known for his dependability and his ability to get things done.

Originally from Chicago, Illinois, T-H was hired by the Tulsa-Harvey Co. in 1922, and he has been with the company ever since.

T-H has worked on many different projects over the years, from building bridges to repairing trains. He is known for his ability to work in any weather conditions and his willingness to work long hours.

T-H is a natural leader and has been instrumental in training many of the younger workers in the company.

Local 301 to Participate in Memorial Day Parade

Local 301 will participate in the annual Memorial Day Parade in Tulsa.

The parade will feature Local 301 members, as well as other groups from the community.

Local 301 members will be marching in the parade, carrying signs and holding flags.

The parade will start at 10:00 a.m. and will proceed down Main Street, ending at the Tulsa Courthouse.

Local 301 members are encouraged to attend the parade and show their support for our veterans.

U.S. Strike Looms as Harvester Workers Strike

A strike by U.S. (United States) Harvester workers could be on the horizon.

The workers are demanding a wage increase, but the company is refusing to negotiate.

Harvester, a manufacturer of agricultural and construction equipment, has been a major employer in the region for many years.

The strike could have a significant impact on the local economy and the company's reputation.

The union has given the company a 48-hour ultimatum to negotiate a fair contract.

If the strike goes ahead, it could last for several weeks, causing significant disruption to the local community.

The union is calling on all members to support the strike by refusing to work.

The company has threatened to lock out all workers who participate in the strike.

Workers are encouraged to contact their union representatives for more information.

Report: Foreman Hits Worker in Building 52

A foreman was charged with assault after reportedly hitting a worker in Building 52.

The incident occurred on March 17, 1952, when the foreman allegedly struck the worker after a disagreement over work performance.

The worker was taken to the hospital and released with minor injuries.

An investigation by the company found that the foreman was emotionally unstable and had a history of violence.

The worker is reportedly considering legal action against the company.

The incident is being treated as a serious workplace violation and the company is taking steps to investigate and discipline the foreman.

Local 301 members are calling on the company to take immediate action to prevent similar incidents from occurring in the future.

Seek Organization of Bus Workers

The bus drivers and conductors are seeking to organize a union to represent their interests.

The drivers and conductors have been seeking recognition of their union for several years, but the company has refused to negotiate.

The drivers and conductors are concerned about issues such as wages, benefits, and working conditions.

They believe that a union will help to improve their working conditions and provide them with a voice to negotiate for better wages and benefits.

The drivers and conductors are encouraging their fellow workers to join the union and support their efforts.

They are calling on the company to recognize their union and negotiate a fair contract.

The union is hoping to organize all of the bus drivers and conductors in the area.

They believe that a union will help to improve working conditions and provide a voice for their needs.
Hurt in GE Works, Joseph Di Cocco Will Receive Compensation for Life

It is four years since Joseph Di Cocco has been able to work for a living. In August, 1948, Di Cocco injured his back while in Building 72 carpentry shop. However, during this same period he has been kept at work by frequent stays in the hospital, most of Di Cocco's time needs have been taken care of under the work injuries compensation law. And in order to assure the injured worker that he would receive the full compensation to which he is entitled, the company has continued to pay 65% of his salary. This service was rendered by Louis Noccio, the attorney who handled the case. The work injuries compensation law was enacted in 1930.

The ticket for the Day's Day are to be sold at three for $1, with each ticket carrying a ticket number. Each $1 ticket covers a $1 ticket for a total of $3. The Big Day ticket will be entered into a lottery to be drawn at 7:30 P.M. on May 24, 1952. The winner of the Big Day ticket will be entitled to $1,000 in cash or a $1,000 certificate.

Three Generations

The Di Cocco family is one of the few in the area that has been in the United States for four generations. Joseph Jr., the father of four children, was born in 1910. His wife, Josephine, is a native of Sicily. Their three children, Josephine Jr., Mary and Joseph, are all students in the local schools.

In addition to the Di Cocco family, several other families in the area have been in the United States for four generations. The values and traditions of these families have been passed down through the generations, providing a sense of continuity and connection to the past.

Labor-Day, 1952, Marks Five Years Of Taft-Hartley Law's Strait-Jacket

The Taft-Hartley act passed the Senate Aug. 29, 1947. The National Association of Manufacturers and U. S. Chamber of Commerce staged a public birthday celebration for their industrial offspring, known as the anniversary of the act of 1947 by the AFL Congress with the approval of President Truman.

The act has been a source of controversy for many years, with some arguing that it has stifled union activity and others asserting that it has protected workers' rights. The act has been a point of contention in many labor disputes, particularly in the construction industry.

GE Balks at Real Contract Improvements

Negotiations between US and General Electric management were set back by the company's refusal to make any concessions to the union's 50-point proposal. The company has offered only minor improvements, saying that it is willing to make any necessary changes to the union's proposal.

However, the company has agreed to reopen the talks with the publication of an extension of the contract. This ad indicated that the company's offer was not as good as the union's proposal.

The "pro-forma" system was revealed by GE workers many years ago because they felt that it could cost thousands of dollars in wage increases. The company has admitted that the workers are much better off without the bonus setup since they would have been paid it in overtime.

As for the cost-of-living escalator, this is the gimmick that has enabled the automobile companies to cut wages of auto workers in spite of rising living costs.

What was most disturbing was that GE chose a time when both unions were in important negotiations to attack UAW.

U.S. Contract Signed in Webb-Proof

A clause which bars the workers against any Webb-Proof obligations or representations relating to the employment of nonunion laborers in the United States was included in the agreement. It is believed to be one of the few such provisions in contracts of this kind.

The agreement also provides for a "right to work" clause, which bars the union from compelling an individual to join the union as a condition of employment. The clause is known as a "right to work" clause because it allows workers to choose whether or not to join the union.

Five Long Years of T-H

by working more and earning less wages. The lack of leisure to tend to their own needs and conditions of their members. Unions fighting to hold their own, unions hit by labor laws, local politics, legal suits, and public opinion were all more difficult to win higher wages and better conditions for their members.

Union membership in 1930 stood at 19,000,000, almost as high as when it was organized in 1886. Reporting on organized labor's lack of growth, the failure of major organizing drives in the steel, coal, railroad, and textile industries, leading business people,转向 to union-busting, it was said, "we are no unionzly sleeping." It was read to protect the greatest T-H benefit for employers: their workers were still in use.

Like the industry itself, labor leaders recognized the complete impact of T-H had yet to be felt by organized labor. They feared the whole labor movement would be used against them, "as in the old days when the miners' strike was called the "strike in full force when the miners' strike was called the "strike for the people."

Chicago's Unions Feel Taft-Hartley Screws

One of the main offerings of the Taft-Hartley act was the tightening of unions by a few "leaders" who were more interested in gaining power than in fighting for their members.

It was the destruction of the old National Labor Relations Board. Instead of being a board to protect the workers, the board which the ILGWU was the first to fight for the protection of the workers. Instead, it was used to blot out any support from working people. The board itself was used to blot out any support from working people.
