Kearney Supports Anti-Strike Bills

Representative Bernard Kearney told Fred Pallazi in Washington last week that he will vote "for any bill that will stop strikes."

Brother Pallazi, chairman of the 801 Legislative Committee, was one of 60 US members from all parts of the country to confer with Congressmen on anti-labor legislation last week. They voted to have the Congressmen favor workers' rights.

On the other hand, labor's law suits were not considered. A letter from the Senate Labor and Public Welfare Committee to Senator Pallazi suggested that labor's law suits might not be effective.

Kearney referred to the anti-labor legislation as "just amendments to the Wagner Act." He defended his action in writing for the committee that his Bill had not yet been signed by the President.

All the members from New York state voted against legislation to change the Wagner Act.

Jesse didn't give a "Yes" or "No" answer on any particular Bill, but claimed he had always opposed bills harmful to labor.

He said he objected to politicians making "a political football" out of labor.
