IUE Local 301 to Be Host to Inductees Leaving for Armed Forces April 26

Upcoming Events

IUE Local 301, as a member of the New York’s Committee for Giving Away Labor, will take its turn Thursday, April 26th, in playing host to the men and women who are being drafted or voluntarily enlisting in the Armed Forces.

The Committee, probably the only one of its kind in New York State, besides the Mayor, City Manager and Council, is composed of numerous religious, labor, civic and financial organizations. Financial contributions from these organizations make it possible for the committee to send off its son-officers in a most sincere manner at the beginning of their duty.

It had been the original intention to arrange among each of the three groups, machine tool research, light industry and construction industries. Management had agreed to uphold the long-standing tradition of the last few years. The list is made up of the names of the three groups, each Advanced Worker receiving the usual letter of invitation to the event.

It was further agreed to expand the efforts of the United States to a noticeable number of those groups and to include the entire country for the holidays. The group will include the United States, Canada, Mexico and Central America. The list of names of the groups and the days on which they will be needed to be transferred to Mail-Warner, Inc.

Mica Strikers Ask IUE Support

School Board Candidates Face Shop Stewards at Meeting on Election Eve

The candidates for the Schenectady School Board appeared before Local 100 Shop Stewards Meeting last Monday night, the decisive one, to state their platforms to SEIU's local membership.

Local 100, which endorsed the candidates, is the largest SEIU local in the area and its endorsement is tantamount to the support it receives.

The meeting is seen as a major test of the candidates' ability to win the support of the rank-and-file members of the union.

The meeting was opened with an introduction by Richard V. Ryan, Local 100's President, who welcomed the candidates and highlighted the issues facing the school district.

The candidates then had the opportunity to present their platforms on a variety of topics, including education, school finance, and community involvement.

The candidates' speeches were followed by a question-and-answer session, where the candidates were able to address specific concerns and address any remaining questions from the audience.

The meeting was well-attended, with a large turnout of members from Local 100 and other SEIU locals in the area.

The outcome of the meeting is expected to have a significant impact on the election results, as the Local 100 endorsement is seen as a key factor in determining the outcome.

The candidates are expected to face a tough battle in the upcoming election, with both the incumbent and the challenger vying for the support of the rank-and-file members of the union.

The meeting provided an opportunity for the candidates to showcase their platforms and address the concerns of the members, setting the stage for what is expected to be a competitive election.

The candidates are expected to continue to campaign aggressively in the weeks leading up to the election, with the outcome of the meeting likely to play a role in their strategies.

The meeting was well-received, with members expressing their support for the candidates and the union's role in the election process.

Overall, the meeting was seen as a positive step in the election process, with both the candidates and the members looking forward to the upcoming election.
