Arbitrator Orders GE to Reinstate 3 Workers; Company Starts Court Action on Power to Fire

An arbitrator has ordered the reinstatement of three workers fired by the GE Lynn plant at East Boston, Mass., for refusing to work on a new assembly line during a union strike last month. The action by the arbitrator follows a five-day hearing of the dispute.

A strike at the East Boston plant began last month over the installation of a new line to assemble GE household appliances. The union claimed that the line would result in the loss of skilled labor and the displacement of workers.

The decision by the arbitrator is expected to be a setback for the company, which had hoped to settle the dispute through mediation rather than arbitration.

UE Makes Protest On Raids by UAW

The national office of UE has issued a statement condemning the recent raids by the United Automobile Workers union on UE locals across the country. The raids have been characterized by the UE as a violation of workers’ rights and an attempt to suppress union activities.

The statement is expected to spark further controversy, as the UAW has been accused of using similar tactics in the past to suppress union activities.

Illegal for Company To Withhold Wages

Several recent court rulings have resulted in the award of back wages to employees in cases where wages were withheld without proper justification. The rulings have been seen as a strengthening of workers’ rights to full wages for their work.

The rulings have also been seen as a response to the growing trend of companies withholding wages to the detriment of workers.

Record of UE Gains in 12-Year History

Beginning with its local union and district gains in the past year, UE has been able to document significant gains for workers in terms of wages, benefits, and working conditions.

The gains have been achieved through collective bargaining, strikes, and other forms of direct action.

The gains have been seen as a testament to workers’ strength and the power of collective action.

 USED TO BE DELUGED WITH UE OPINION ADS

The public will be hearing less from UE opinion ads in the near future, as the newspaper has decided to reduce the number of ads published per week.

The decision is expected to be a welcome change for advertisers, who have complained about the high cost of placing ads in the newspaper.

Switchboard Operators’ Complaint Turned Down

A complaint filed by switchboard operators has been dismissed by the National Labor Relations Board. The operators had alleged that they were being subjected to harassment and discrimination.

The decision is expected to be a setback for the operators, who have been calling for the union to intervene.

No Genie for Company To Withhold Wages

Several recent court rulings have resulted in the award of back wages to employees in cases where wages were withheld without proper justification. The rulings have been seen as a strengthening of workers’ rights to full wages for their work.

The rulings have also been seen as a response to the growing trend of companies withholding wages to the detriment of workers.
