What GE Workers Are Demanding

At the last negotiating session, GE said one percent, or a fraction less, maybe a fraction less—depending on what the latest national Bureau of Labor Statistics shows in April 1952. But the last word on what's to be in negotiations will rest with GE—but with its workers.

RAY ELLIS, international: "I've worked in all 5 1/2 years. When I started, our demands were considered the biggest in the industry. We wanted to see them doubled, and we saw our demands were doubled in a fraction. We'll see how the negotiations go." Ellis works in the Metal Trades Workers' Department at the General Electric Co.'s Schenectady plant.

New York Times-Union, March 20, 1952

"We can't argue that we're not skilled workers. A new argument after 12 weeks they were doing the same kind of work. When they were not skilled workers, they were not skilled workers. We're not trying to put something against something. We're trying to put something to do something." Ellis.

SELDON JOHNSON, Big 61: "We don't want to waste any more time. We're not getting any more time. We still have the same (as last year)." He was talking about the Westchester County Electric Union near New York City.

HELEN QUINCE, Big 81: "We're never going to stop working. Our organization is like a family, like a family, like a family. We're not going to stop working. We're going to stop working when we're dead." She works in the Metal Trades Workers' Department at the General Electric Co.'s Schenectady plant.

WILLIAM MASTRAMMENNO, Big 734: "We've been doing this for 4 1/2 years. We've been doing this for 4 1/2 years. We've been doing this for 4 1/2 years." He works in the Electrical Workers' Department at the General Electric Co.'s Schenectady plant.

"We're not doing this just because we want to. We're not doing this just because we want to. We're not doing this just because we want to." He works in the Electrical Workers' Department at the General Electric Co.'s Schenectady plant.

Ray Ellis, international: "I've worked in all 5 1/2 years. When I started, our demands were considered the biggest in the industry. We wanted to see them doubled, and we saw our demands were doubled in a fraction. We'll see how the negotiations go." Ellis works in the Metal Trades Workers' Department at the General Electric Co.'s Schenectady plant.

"We can't argue that we're not skilled workers. A new argument after 12 weeks they were doing the same kind of work. When they were not skilled workers, they were not skilled workers. We're not trying to put something against something. We're trying to put something to do something." Ellis.

SELDON JOHNSON, Big 61: "We don't want to waste any more time. We're not getting any more time. We still have the same (as last year)." He was talking about the Westchester County Electric Union near New York City.

HELEN QUINCE, Big 81: "We're never going to stop working. Our organization is like a family, like a family, like a family. We're not going to stop working. We're going to stop working when we're dead." She works in the Metal Trades Workers' Department at the General Electric Co.'s Schenectady plant.

WILLIAM MASTRAMMENNO, Big 734: "We've been doing this for 4 1/2 years. We've been doing this for 4 1/2 years. We've been doing this for 4 1/2 years." He works in the Electrical Workers' Department at the General Electric Co.'s Schenectady plant.

"We're not doing this just because we want to. We're not doing this just because we want to. We're not doing this just because we want to." He works in the Electrical Workers' Department at the General Electric Co.'s Schenectady plant.

"The Electric Union is not going to give us the same thing. We're not going to give us the same thing. We're not going to give us the same thing." He works in the Electrical Workers' Department at the General Electric Co.'s Schenectady plant.

Ray Ellis, international: "I've worked in all 5 1/2 years. When I started, our demands were considered the biggest in the industry. We wanted to see them doubled, and we saw our demands were doubled in a fraction. We'll see how the negotiations go." Ellis works in the Metal Trades Workers' Department at the General Electric Co.'s Schenectady plant.

"We can't argue that we're not skilled workers. A new argument after 12 weeks they were doing the same kind of work. When they were not skilled workers, they were not skilled workers. We're not trying to put something against something. We're trying to put something to do something." Ellis.

SELDON JOHNSON, Big 61: "We don't want to waste any more time. We're not getting any more time. We still have the same (as last year)." He was talking about the Westchester County Electric Union near New York City.

HELEN QUINCE, Big 81: "We're never going to stop working. Our organization is like a family, like a family, like a family. We're not going to stop working. We're going to stop working when we're dead." She works in the Metal Trades Workers' Department at the General Electric Co.'s Schenectady plant.

WILLIAM MASTRAMMENNO, Big 734: "We've been doing this for 4 1/2 years. We've been doing this for 4 1/2 years. We've been doing this for 4 1/2 years." He works in the Electrical Workers' Department at the General Electric Co.'s Schenectady plant.

"We're not doing this just because we want to. We're not doing this just because we want to. We're not doing this just because we want to." He works in the Electrical Workers' Department at the General Electric Co.'s Schenectady plant.
Westinghouse Strike Over Speed-up Won, Boycott Off

A two-month strike by 7000 Westinghouse workers ended today when the company and the United Electrical Workers (UE) union agreed to end the strike, which began on March 5. The company agreed to end the speed-up that caused the strike in the first place.

To Speak on School Aid

The strike was called to protest the speed-up at the Westinghouse plant in Brownsville, Pennsylvania. The workers went on strike to pressure the company to end the speed-up and restore their working conditions.

Civil Liberties Meeting Sunday

The meeting will be held at 2 p.m. on Sunday, April 18, at the United Electrical Workers (UE) Hall in Pittsburgh. The meeting will be open to the public and all interested persons are encouraged to attend.

Uge Steelworkers Get Raise Now

The United Steelworkers of America (USWA) has agreed to give its members a raise. The raise is expected to go into effect in the next two weeks.

GE's 1% Offer Rejected: Next Steps Called

The GE offer was rejected by the workers who went on strike at the GE facility in Buffalo. The workers are demanding a raise of at least 1%.

Crafted Steelworkers Conduct Noon-hour Demands

Over 1500 steelworkers at the Bethlehem Steel plant in Lackawanna, New York, went on strike to demand better working conditions and a raise. The strike is expected to last for at least 24 hours.

Reapers Must Pay Full Membership Dues

The United Steelworkers union has demanded that all its members pay full membership dues, including those who are on strike. The union says that all members must pay their full dues, regardless of their current employment status.

Hit 100% On Fighting Fund

The fighting fund is at its highest level ever. The workers have contributed over $100,000 to the fund, which is used to support the union's activities and negotiate better working conditions for its members.