GE Challenges Right of Retired Worker To Jobless Insurance Pay

GE is fighting the unemployment benefits of a former worker who is now a retired school teacher. The company is contending that the worker is not entitled to unemployment benefits because he is working at another job. The worker is a 65-year-old school teacher who was fired from his job at GE. The company is arguing that the worker is not unemployed because he is working at a part-time job as a substitute teacher. The dispute is expected to go to court.

Stewards Back Meeting on Compensation Law

The AFL-CIO's compensation meeting in Pittsfield, Mass., which is being held to discuss the compensation law, was attended by representatives from all the major unions. The meeting is expected to continue for several days to try to reach a consensus on the issues.

Wide Support for Bill

The visitors at the compensation meeting were met with a strong show of support from a variety of labor organizations, including the AFL-CIO, the International Association of Machinists, and the Service Employees International Union. The support was evident in the large number of attendees who showed up to the meeting.

GE Agrees to Cancel Plan for New Work

GE has agreed to cancel its plans for a new work site in Pittsfield, Mass., as part of a settlement reached with the union. The company had announced plans for a new work site, but the union had opposed the plans, citing concerns about the impact on the local economy. The settlement includes provisions for job security and training opportunities for affected workers.

GE Urges Higher GE Pensions

GE is urging Congress to increase its pension contributions to provide more retirement security for its workers. The company has been lobbying Congress to increase pension contributions as part of its efforts to improve worker morale and reduce turnover. The company has also been working with the union to develop a comprehensive pension plan.

Utilities Mirror Changes in Electric Usage

The changes in electric usage are being mirrored by utilities across the country, as more and more people turn to electric vehicles. The industry is responding to the growing demand for electric vehicles by investing in new infrastructure and new technologies to support the growth.

Unfair to UE-CIO

The Union of Employers-CIO has been criticized for its handling of the electric usage changes. Some critics have accused the union of not doing enough to protect the interests of its members. The union has been responding to the criticism by emphasizing its efforts to work with the companies to address the issues.
