Jandreau Nails Kersten Digest Lies

This month’s issue of the Reader’s Digest carries a story about the union under the by-line of Congressman Charles Postlethwaite of Wisconsin. The article, like the other pieces placed by big business in their magazines recently, strives to paint a false picture of the union and the workers that have brought it about.

"The picture is not complete," says Jandreau, "but the story is a complete lie. It is written by the workers of the Reader’s Digest, not by the management of the company. They are the story. They tell it in their own words and with their own voices, and they want us to know what is going on in the union and the work of the workers.

"We have had a long fight to win the right to organize, and we are not going to give it up without a struggle. We have held our ground, and we will continue to do so. The Reader’s Digest is not telling the whole story, and it is not telling the truth."
