This Picture Proves Kriss and Gazette Are Liars

This photograph shows the standing order in front of the strike in detail. The men are standing in a circle, with their faces turned towards a group of reporters who are taking their picture. The men appear to be discussing the situation, with one man holding a sign that reads, "This file contains the strike as it was before the reporters arrived." Another man is holding a camera, presumably taking the photograph that was published. The scene is typical of a labor strike, with the reporters documenting the events from the outside.
