Jandreau Urges Dewey Act In Rem-Rand Case

Les Jandreau, president of UE District 3, this week urged Governor Dewey to help prevent "industrial slavery" at the Remington-Rand plant by "proposing a law to protect the workers' rights." He said the plant was "the epitome of the worst kind of management." The plant is a "perfect example of the way a company can use its financial power to control the lives of its workers," he said.

Jandreau plans to give a talk on the subject at the 10th annual meeting of the Schenectady Labor Council. He has been a strong proponent of the Dewey Act, which he says would help protect workers' rights.

Editor Reverses Position on OPA

At a box a newspaper editor has been known enough to admit that he made a mistake in opposing the death of the OPA.

William S. Barnes, managing editor of the Lewisburg (W. Va.) NewsJournal, voiced the following in an editorial recently:

"When we say that OPA was on the way out, we joined in the melee that was led by the National Association of Manufacturers and unthinking zealots who thought they were doing a patriotic job by不用 the agreement that the end of price control would increase production and lower taxes.

"After several months of struggle, during which prices continued their steady fall, we began to realize that the fact the OPA is working, rather than nothing, and not too long ago we had the courage to ask for the return of the OPA. If prices could not be controlled, it was impossible.

"The Smelteries Committee and the Un-ion-Riser are still singing the OPA tune, however, like practically all other newspaper editors.

Danham Claims He Was Misquoted on Rem-Rand

Robert N. Danham, general counsel of the Steelworkers Organization, now claims he was misquoted by newspapers reporting his remarks on Remington-Rand and the CE contract.

Preceding every paper in the country reported Danham as saying that if Rem-Rand agreed a contract with UE it was "his own peril." The company used the important statement as a basis for pressing for contract relations with UE and refusing to honor an agreement made in settling last summer's strike.

Even some newspapers that defended the T-2 law approved a bill that Danham says was his own peril. The company used the important statement as a basis for pressing for contract relations with UE and refusing to honor an agreement made in settling last summer's strike.
