Members Aided by UE In Many Ways

"UE is more than a union. It’s also a part of the working class in decline and a tool for resisting the depredations of capitalism. And they are our mighty enemies who appear united under the banner of "Honest天天 is a ULW," always a ULW."

This conclusion is certainly true and by the experience of UE’s local 381, "Talk to Leo Morin, "I’ll attend, and ask the workers what they want," and you’ll see results." And the one who actually does it is John Kigman, who says, "I don’t know if I’ll be back in 1964, but I’ll be back in 1965."

On May 15 of that year he convinced the miners union to swap their bargaining graphs for a PLUS plan.

Miners Union Won’t Swap Bargaining For Graphs

A PLUS plan is a wage negotiation system based on employer-provided figures which are calculated by the United Mine Workers’ Union. Such a plan is one way to prevent labor disputes and is something that UE negotiated for its members. The PLUS plan, which will allow miners to receive a wage increase for a shorter period of time, is an improvement over the old system where miners had to be satisfied with a small increase in their wages. The PLUS plan is a better way to prevent labor disputes and is something that UE negotiated for its members.

Wishing Won’t Make It True

The wish is certainly carried to the working class when it comes to the vaguely understood role of PLUS in the United Mine Workers’ Union. PLUS, or "Plus Plan," was the main bargaining tool for the workers in the United Mine Workers’ Union. PLUS is a way to prevent labor disputes and is something that UE negotiated for its members.
