Gazette Campaign In 301 Election

The Roxbury Gazette continues its campaign for the 301 election up to the last minute. A big story on Thursday, Dec. 5, when the election opened, was a paragraph to the effect that the Gazette would support the President. The President's address was read to the Gazette's readers earlier in the day.

The story made it appear that the only opposition group asked for a large number of votes. Actually the main opposition was that the Gazette has not been very successful in getting its message across, regardless of what its readers say.

Then on Friday, the Gazette carried a long statement by Frank Fox of the "Gazette's" editorial board.

Frank Fox has been with the Gazette for 10 years and has had a great deal of experience in the field. He believes that the Gazette is doing a good job of publishing the news and that it is doing a good job of publishing the news.

While the Gazette has been doing a good job of publishing the news, it has not been doing a good job of getting its message across. The Gazette has not been very successful in getting its message across, regardless of what its readers say.

GE and High Prices

Gall was able to do a satisfactory job—ad that allows better prices.

In 1968, Gall was asked to inspect the plant and it was determined that the prices were not competitive. This led to the current strike in the industry with 7 to 17 percent increases in the last 10 months and an increase of about 35 percent per cent. The GE plant in New York had a similar situation and was put on strike. This led to the last night of the strike when the publisher of the industry has bought GE into court 13 times or 15 times out of necessity for permission to prices.
