UE to Meet with GE on Contract Tuesday

Induction Motors Wins Disputes by Stoppage

A 25-hour strike by 2000 UE locals at Induction Motors in Schenectady has so far succeeded in recent wage grievances, the struggling company told the UE locals at a meeting on Monday.

The strike was prompted by a series of grievances, including a $1 raise for the first time in 10 years, and a 10% increase in health benefits. The company had offered to meet with the UE locals to discuss these issues, but the UE locals refused to return to work until their demands were met.

Speedy Run-Off Decision on Toolmakers Urged

UE is urging the National Labor Relations Board (NLRB) to speed up the selection process for UE toolmakers. The UE locals have been waiting for several months to see who will be selected as the new toolmakers, and the UE locals want a decision made as soon as possible.

UE locals have been struggling to keep their job in the face of increasing unemployment and recession. The UE locals have been working with the NLRB to ensure that their voicess are heard in the selection process.

Gains Sought for '50 and To Offset '49

In negotiations with the United Electrical Workers (UE), the UE locals have been demandg increased wages and benefits, including a 5% raise for all workers and the elimination of the two-tier wage structure.

Proposals Expanded

The UE locals have expanded their proposals to include a 10% increase in health benefits, a 7% increase in retirement benefits, and an end to the two-tier wage structure.

Laborers and Welders Being Hired by GE

The union's negotiators have arrived at the O.K. that GE has been willing to negotiate with the union on a new contract. The company's claim that they had no labor problems on the street, only the job volume seems to be increasing. As a result, it appears that there were only 30 on the job there through the week. The company also seems to be increasing its use of unskilled labor.
