Membership Approves Editorial Group's Report

The 301 members meeting tonight in the light of the report of the 201 Editorial Committee, including the Editorial Group's report, approved the report as recommended by the Committee.

The report stated that the editorial group had planned an expanded program of news and commentary to meet the needs of railway employees and to answer the demand for more local news.

The report was approved without comment by the full meeting. The committee now stands ready to take any action it may be called upon to take.

Fate of Unions at GE After First World War

The future of the Amalgamated Union after the First World War is uncertain. The Amalgamated Union was formed in 1879 and represented the interests of all railway employees. However, the number of members has declined and the union is now facing financial difficulties. The union has been struggling to maintain its membership and has been forced to reduce its activities.

The union's financial difficulties are due to the fact that the number of railway employees has declined considerably since the First World War. The union has been unable to attract new members and has been forced to reduce its activities.

The union's activities have been reduced to a minimum and the union has been forced to cut back on its publications and other activities.

Local 301 Draws Up Program to Improve State Workmen's Compensation Law

A plan for protecting workmen's compensation rights of workers in an active manner was developed by the UI membership section last week, as part of the union's program for improving the state Workmen's Compensation Law.

Alarmed workers and others enrolled in insurance policies to protect against injury, the sub-committee on insurance for injuries of the UI Local 301, Phila-ippines, directed the meeting. They pointed out that many workers were not using the full extent of the protections their policies gave them.

They asserted that the workmen's compensation insurance policies were underwritten by major insurers and that the workers' wages were paid by their employers.

The sub-committee proposed
the following program:

1. A plan to be submitted

2. A program to be
