IEU Toolmakers Vote GE Strike for More Pay

This week, the toolmakers in Pittsburgh put the IUE-CIO leadership on the spot to demand more than the 21% percent agreed to by Carey and his small clique of yellow artists without membership or leadership.
UE Backed By Strike Vote

(Continued from Page 1)

Statement touched on cheers and support of the local.

Local Board Members and Stewards report that there is no question but that the vast majority of UE members in this area are determined to stick it out and support their union. Members are satisfied and impatient and will continue until they think the time is right.

Democratic Vote

A byproduct of the democratic voting procedure was the democratic and open discussion on the issue of the strike vote and the strategy of the UE workers. The vote, which was taken by the local union, showed that the majority of workers favored the strike vote, and that the union was in agreement with the National Executive Board on the strategy of the strike.

Same Issues

The issues remain. Our living standards are on the line, and we have the power to make demands that will affect the standard of living of our families. The same issues that affected us before and that will affect us again.

Ready To Bust Open!

Under rank and file pressure, the CIO union in New York City on Monday called a meeting of its rank and file to discuss the strike vote and the strategy of the UE workers. The meeting was called in response to the strike vote, which was taken by the local union, and the strategy of the strike.

CIO Forced To Attack Wage Freeze

In Chicago, the CIO was forced to attack the wage freeze in the steel industry. The CIO, which represents about 30 percent of the steel workers, has been working to raise the minimum wage for steel workers. The CIO asked the workers to support the union's demands and to vote for a strike vote.

CIO Voted On Strike

With over 750,000 CIO members in the General Electric chain still in dispute, the company's top brass, including the chairman, have expressed a strong majority of support for the company's decision to vote for a strike vote.

"Dreary Christmas"—And All That Malarky

Managers, who are expected to express a strong majority of support for the company's decision to vote for a strike vote, are expected to express a strong majority of support for the company's decision to vote for a strike vote.

More Christmas Cheer

Fifteen minutes after the strike vote, the CIO union announced that they would be attacking the wage freeze. The union, which represents about 30 percent of the steel workers, has been working to raise the minimum wage for steel workers. The union asked the workers to support the union's demands and to vote for a strike vote.

Rail Union Cuts Strike

With 1.3 million railroad employees, the CIO union was expected to vote for a strike vote. The union, which represents about 30 percent of the railroad employees, has been working to raise the minimum wage for railroad employees. The union asked the workers to support the union's demands and to vote for a strike vote.

Nominate Officers

The following names were presented at the nominations meeting. Local 5 of the November 5th nominations meeting.

For President

John D. Gage
Jim O'Connor
For Vice-President

Joseph J. Gage
For Secretary-Treasurer

John J. O'Connor
For Recording Secretary

James J. O'Connor
For Local 5 Representative

James J. O'Connor
For Local 5 Representative

James J. O'Connor
For Local 5 Representative

James J. O'Connor

Local 5 Officers

President

John D. Gage
Vice-President

Joseph J. Gage
Secretary-Treasurer

James J. O'Connor
Recording Secretary

James J. O'Connor
Local 5 Representative

James J. O'Connor