Wagner Act, Cornerstone Of Democracy, Endangered

By MILO LANTZEN

The Wagner Labor Relations Act (as it is now known) was signed into law by President Franklin D. Roosevelt on July 5, 1935, and it was the cornerstone of the National Labor Relations Act (NLRA). The act was intended to establish a framework for labor relations and to protect workers' rights to organize and bargain collectively.

FITZGERALD URGES UNION

Community Cooperation

James J. Cosgrove, Industrial Union District 13, Local 303, in a speech before the IOSF Labor Committee last week, said that the Labor Relations Act is a step in the right direction.

This act is a step in the right direction.

Veterans' News

In this article, we highlight some of the issues faced by veterans who are seeking employment after their service.

Services Offered By Chest Agencies

In this article, we discuss the services offered by various chest agencies and how they can assist veterans in their transition to civilian life.

Jandreau Warns Failure to See Full Importance of Wage-Job Program Endangers All Workers

Business Agent Leo Jandreau today stated that he was convinced by the recent evidence that people in the shop generally do not realize the great importance of the wage-job program of the IUE and the IOSF and how their own future earnings as wage and salary earners hang on the acceptance of rejection of those proposals by the Congress of the United States.

Returns to Union Post

James J. Jandreau returned to his active post today, after his six-week tour of person, which was spent out of the country. It was during this absence that he was elected to the position of vice-president of the International Union.

Morgenthau Calls Job Plan 'Gov. Responsibility'

In one of his last letters before leaving the post, Secretary Morgenthau stated that the job plan was a "governmental responsibility." He also stated that the plan "is a necessary measure to prevent further economic disaster."
British Elections

Working men and women all over the country are allied over the victory of the British Labor Party in the recent elections. Millions of votes have been given for the Labor Party, and such a great victory has been achieved as the result of hard work and determination. The Labor Party is the party of the masses, and the people of Britain have spoken for themselves.

Facts

- The number of working men and women in Britain is estimated to be around 20 million.
- The Labor Party has gained a majority in the House of Commons, which will enable them to form a government.
- The government of the past has been criticized for its policies, which have not benefited the working classes.

Cases Pending Before Management

Several cases are pending before management, including those of workers who have been dismissed without cause. The workers are demanding their rights and are calling for fair treatment.

Morgenthau Calls Job Plan Govt. Responsibility

Morgenthau has stated that the government has a responsibility to ensure fair treatment of workers. He has called for the government to take action to ensure the rights of workers are protected.

LeMoine Back On Exec. Board

LeMoine has been re-elected to the executive board. His re-election is a sign of the support he has received from the workers.

Mead, Wagner Warn Thousands Will Be Idle

Mead and Wagner have warned that thousands of workers will be idle unless Congress acts. They have called for action to ensure the rights of workers are protected.

Facts and Fancies

- The program of trade unions has been strengthened, and the workers are demanding their rights.
- The government has been criticized for its policies, which have not benefited the working classes.

Original Torn