Emphasis Discusses UCC-IO Relations

February 12, 1948

ELECTRICAL UNION NEWS

What 1948 Legislature Did—And Didn’t Do

By John J. Emphasis

The 100th General Assembly ended its session last week. In addition to the usual toll of bills that were introduced but never enacted, the session was notable for the final enactment of three major labor laws: the Wage Stabilization Law, the Labor Relations Act, and the Welfare Fund Act. The session was also notable for the failure to enact a number of other important labor laws, including the Workmen’s Compensation Law and the Minimum Wage Law.

The Wage Stabilization Law, which was enacted in 1947, provides for the establishment of a State Board of Labor Stabilization, which is composed of a chairman and five members, appointed by the Governor with the approval of the Senate. The board is empowered to fix minimum wages for employees in certain industries, and to fix maximum hours of work for employees in certain industries. The law also provides for the establishment of a State Board of Labor Stabilization, which is composed of a chairman and five members, appointed by the Governor with the approval of the Senate. The board is empowered to fix minimum wages for employees in certain industries, and to fix maximum hours of work for employees in certain industries.

The Labor Relations Act, which was enacted in 1947, provides for the establishment of a State Labor Relations Board, which is composed of a chairman and five members, appointed by the Governor with the approval of the Senate. The board is empowered to conduct elections for the purpose of determining whether or not the employees of a particular employer are interested in being represented by a labor union. The board is also empowered to investigate and to issue reports on labor-management disputes.

The Welfare Fund Act, which was enacted in 1947, provides for the establishment of a State Welfare Fund, which is composed of a chairman and five members, appointed by the Governor with the approval of the Senate. The board is empowered to administer the program of welfare assistance to employees who are unemployed or whose earnings are inadequate to support themselves and their families.

Although much was accomplished during the session, there were also a number of important labor laws that were not enacted. These include the Workmen’s Compensation Law, which was introduced but never enacted, the Minimum Wage Law, which was introduced but never enacted, and the Fair Labor Standards Act, which was introduced but never enacted.

The next session of the General Assembly will convene in January 1949. It is expected that a number of important labor laws will be introduced during the session, including the Workmen’s Compensation Law, the Minimum Wage Law, and the Fair Labor Standards Act.

Packaging and Strike Bailed By Stewards

Local 303 stewards voted unanimously to implement the strike against the local’s management company, the Company, Inc. The strike was called by the stewards because of the company’s refusal to bargain in good faith and to negotiate a contract that would provide for fair wages, hours, and working conditions.

The strike was called by the stewards because of the company’s refusal to bargain in good faith and to negotiate a contract that would provide for fair wages, hours, and working conditions.

GE Very Anxious To Load Work

The General Electric Company is very anxious to load work at its Fairfield, Conn., plant. The company has been working hard to increase its production of electrical equipment, and it is expected that the company will be able to increase its production by 20% in the next few months.

At the same time, the company is very anxious to keep its employees on the job, and it is expected that the company will be able to keep its employees on the job by offering higher wages and better working conditions.

Seniority Threatened By Company Proposals

The company has made a number of proposals to its employees, including the elimination of seniority rights, the replacement of seniority with a merit rating system, and the elimination of union representation. These proposals are very threatening to the employees, and it is expected that the employees will resist them vigorously.

Time for Unity—Union is Target

The company has been very aggressive in its efforts to break the union, and it is expected that the company will continue to be aggressive in its efforts to break the union in the future.

The employees should be very vigilant and should resist the company’s efforts to break the union. The employees should be very vigilant and should resist the company’s efforts to break the union. The employees should be very vigilant and should resist the company’s efforts to break the union.

If any employee has any questions or concerns, he should contact his union representative or his union’s legal counsel. The employees should be very vigilant and should resist the company’s efforts to break the union.
Fix Fat Pensions For GE Officers

According to its report to stockholders on January 1, the General Electric Company's net profits were $81,021,000, or $2.69 per share, on sales of $5,495,000,000 and operating expenses of $5,392,000,000. The average pension amount paid to retired employees was $5,000. The company said that it would consider increasing the amount of its pension reserve to $20,000,000.

Remember the Depression

The depression of the 1930s was a time of widespread unemployment and economic hardship. Many people lost their jobs and homes, and the stock market collapsed. The government implemented various programs to help alleviate the effects of the depression, including the establishment of the Social Security Administration in 1935.

Withdrawals Should Try Saving on $53.83

The average savings of the General Electric workers is $53.83. The Workers' Benefit Fund, which is invests $60,000,000 in the stock market, is expected to have its profits reduced by about $10,000,000 this year.

Against Upping Pensions

The union representing General Electric workers has successfully resisted the company's proposal to increase pension benefits. The union argues that the company's profits are not commensurate with its expenses, and that a higher pension benefit would not be fair to all workers.

GE Can Easily Give Significant Pay Raise

The General Electric Company could easily give its workers a significant pay raise without adversely affecting its profits. The company has a large reserve of cash and assets, and its profits have been steadily increasing over the past several years.

Bacon, Eggs on Sale Today at 301 Hall

Bacon and eggs will be available for purchase today at 301 Hall, from 9 am to 12 noon. The price is $1.00 per pound. The sale is being held to raise funds for the union's scholarship program.

Editorial Committee Discusses EU News

The Editorial Committee met on Tuesday to discuss the latest news from the European Union. They discussed the implications of the recent elections in France and Germany, and the ongoing negotiations with Turkey for EU membership.

Who Is This Man?

Who is this man who has been seen walking around campus recently? He is often seen carrying a briefcase and wearing a suit and tie.

Support Is Needed For Hospital Drive

The hospital drive is in need of more support to reach its goal of raising $100,000. Contributions can be made to the hospital fund at any time.

Low Rates Adjusted

The electric company has adjusted its rates for the coming year to reflect the current economic conditions. The new rates will go into effect on January 1.

Union---Buried UAS Ad

The Union---Buried UAS ad campaign was well-received by the students. The ad featured a striking image of a struck worker and a clear message about the importance of union rights.

Children's Party

A children's party was held on campus to celebrate the new year. The party featured games, crafts, and a visit from Santa Claus.