Textile Union Strike in South

The textile workers of America are ending their 11-week walk-off at a Southern mill. Loomson's of Formosa, Inc., located at South Hill, South Carolina, is one of the nation's largest textile concerns.

The strike ended after 11 weeks of negotiations wherein the company refused to make any wage offer. The textile strike has had a total of 20,000 workers in 11 states in recent years. The average rate is the highest in recent years.

The textile industry is one that is aging. The textile workers' lives are being shortened by the unhealthy conditions in which they work. The workers are paid less than the minimum wage, and they are required to work long hours without proper safety measures in place.
