'301' Gives Hughes-Brees Repeat Big Push

The campaign of labor throughout the state to repeal the Hughes-Brees amendment to the N.Y. state unemployment insurance law has continued to be backed up by a series of walkouts and other acts of protest. With the bill in its third week, William H. Hughes, chairman of the California Labor Board, and his associates are working overtime to persuade the state legislature to pass the measure. The campaign is being conducted by the state labor unions and is supported by many members of the state legislature.

Stewards Signing Up

The Unemployment Insurance Fund has been in operation for nearly three months, and the fund has received over $2 million in contributions. The fund is now over $400,000 in debt, and the state legislature is expected to pass a bill to provide for the payment of the debt.

A Fighting Fund Wouldn't Have Helped

A fighting fund wouldn't have helped these textile workers boost their employers' attempts to win their conditions. It wouldn't have helped because neither the AFL nor the CIO union is a fighting union.

Brees a KKKer

Brees, a KKKer, was said to be understood in a foreign country, and he said that he would get a full report on the situation in the next few days. The report was said to be received last night.

Committee To Study GE Works Changes

A representative committee was appointed by the AFL and the CIO executives to study the changes in the union rules. The committee is expected to meet next week.

Action Taken On Piled Grievances In Bldg. 46

Building 46, which supervises the work of 500 workers, has been the scene of a series of labor disputes. The workers have been demanding better wages, better working conditions, and an end to the use of strikebreaking methods. The workers have called a strike, and the company has threatened to lock them out.

The Answer '301' Cave GE

The '301' law has been a bad joke to the workers who have been involved in the strike. The workers have been forced to work on the weekends, and the company has refused to negotiate. The workers have called a strike, and the company has threatened to lock them out.

UE Whirlwind Campaign Starts Thawing Freeze

The U.S. government has increased its efforts to combat the spread of communist influence, and the campaign has been gaining momentum. The government has been using a variety of tactics, including the use of the '301' law, to压制 communists. The workers have been forced to work on the weekends, and the company has refused to negotiate. The workers have called a strike, and the company has threatened to lock them out.
New Progression Chart Won By Bldg. 273 Welders

A Union victory has worked out and resulted in agreement with General Electric and the United Electrical Workers union. The agreement, which provides for collective bargaining, is expected to be signed by both sides in the near future.

Erie GE Local 506 Spurs Fight To End Wage Freeze

The 10,000-member local of the United Electrical Workers (UE Union) at the GE plant in Erie, Pa., is calling for action on the labor movement throughout the country as a call to mobilize against economic policies that have led to the current wage freeze.

Disabled Vets Helped By GAV Services

Only by way of a minor reorganizational change in the Disabled American Veterans (DAV) has been made to help improve the lives of disabled veterans. The change is expected to have a significant impact on the organization's ability to provide support and services to disabled veterans.

Hughes-Brees Repeal Drive Gains Ground

The repeal movement for the Hughes-Brees amendment, which was introduced in Congress to allow for more flexibility in the use of public funds for highway projects, is gaining momentum. Supporters of the amendment are hopeful that it will be adopted in the near future.