70th Class Graduates

Dr. Allen to Speak

Sixty-four seniors, including ten students, will participate in Milne's commencement exercises on Friday, June 24. Dr. James E. Allen, Jr., Commissioner of Education, New York State Education Department, will speak at Milne's Commencement exercises.

Seniors Plan to Have a Ball

Seniors are busily preparing for the annual Senior Ball, the major senior class social event of the year. The dance will be Friday, June 17, in Page gym.

Committee chairmen are Anne Wilson and Roger LaMura, decorations; Ruth Malzberg and Arlene Tomsen, refreshments; Doug Margolis and Tom Rider, music; and Vicky Brooks and Bill Wather, receptionists. Juniors who will be ushers at graduation are invited to attend.

Chaperones for the dance will be Miss Betty Glass, Mr. Glenn DeLong, and Dr. Ruth Wasley. The professional band of Mr. Keith Whitter will supply music.

Many Seniors Earn Scholarships

Several members of the class of 1960 have earned scholarships this year. Cathy Hendrickson, Stuart Lewis, and Ted Standing earned scholarships, with others named in the article.

Assembly Honors Milne Students

Awards for achievement and citizenship were presented by Dr. Theodore Fossieck, principal, and Mr. Harold Howes, guidance counselor, at the school honors assembly today. The program also included music by the Milnettes and Milnemen.

Math contest awards were given to Stuart Lewis and Marianne Maynard. Proficiency in mathematics was recognized by an award to Peter Sarafian for outstanding science and mathematics achievement over the four-year college preparatory course. The art awards were given to Carol Huff and Lance Nelson. Business education awards were presented to Lloyd Smith and Janet Mattick. Richard Udine received the junior high scholarship award, and Daniel Morrison the ninth grade scholarship award.

In memory of two deceased Milne faculty members the Margaret C. Armstrong award and the Francis Harwood award were bestowed upon the outstanding girl and boy students in the junior and senior grades, Janet Hesser and Richard Doling. The Norman Suter memorial award to a senior for good citizenship was given to Carolyn Walther and Curt Campaign.

The J. J. Balsam award for greatest contribution to the senior year was conferred upon Stephen Whaley. Albany Civic theater gave recognition to Victoria Brooks for outstanding dramatic work outside of the senior play. Work on the Crimson and White won awards for Peter Sarafian, Bonnie Reed, and Roger LaMura. Dorothy Hoyle was honored for her work on the Bricks and Ivy, Norma Rosenshine, whose work improved the most between the junior and senior years, was awarded the Robert M. Taft memorial. For the best poetry of the year, Jed Allen received the Alfred T. Wheeler award. The Q.T.S.A. scholarship for excellence in extracurricular activities was awarded to Sarah Gerhardt. Peter Sarafian was named the winner of the principal's prize.

Regents' Scholarships, with Jed Allen, Warren Abele, Virginia Lange, Doug Margolis, and Bill Hesser as alternates, were given, and Doug Margolis has also won a scholarship. Steve Whaley rounded out the list of scholarships winners to date by winning a full tuition scholarship to Hobart.

Public Enemy No. 1

THE CHEATING PROBLEM

We were shocked and angered a few weeks ago when we spied one of the so-called ‘honor students’ deliberately and blatantly cheating on a unit test.

Cheating is considered by many to be clever and cute; this is a sad commentary on our society’s moral standards. Do some of us think we have the privilege to violate the basic ground rules of ethics and decency? From a more materialistic point of view, how would it look on your school record to have been expelled for cheating?

This brand of dishonesty is not something to be snickered at or shrugged off. There is a solution to the cheating problem which could benefit everyone in Milne—both the honest student and, in the long run, the dishonest one as well.

Perhaps Milne should initiate an honor system on all its tests, so no one would have any qualms about reporting such a violation. Cheaters on exams are no more than petty chiselers and should be dealt with accordingly. There is a point where fear of “squealing” is placed in proper perspective, and a more mature sense of values emerges.

Disappointment

As avid music fans, we were overjoyed at the news of a Milne record library. Our spirits were somewhat dampened, however, when we learned that the library will not purchase any more records; there simply isn’t any money. The present records were a gift from the class—by Jan and MIHS

Milne Merry-Go-Round

With their mothers in tow, Gay Simmons, Barbara Currey, Jan Mattick, Jane Hillson, Dotty Hoyle, Janie Siegfried and Barb Faulkner enjoyed an evening of fun, food and folk dancing at the M.G.A.A. banquet.

Ken Hoffman will travel to Israel to work this summer.

Carol Ricotta, Mo Glasheen, Helen Alpert and Judy Fisher all threw parties where everyone had a wonderful time.

Andre Donikian’s party was host to many lovers’ quarrels, as well as a birthday celebration for Andre and Stu Horn.

Chad Grogan isn’t off crutches yet, but at least he’s wearing two shoes.

Sarah Gerhardt started off to the Quin-Sigma-Tri-Hi-Y picnic with a flat tire, much to the dismay of Dave Meurs who had to change it.

Barbara Butler recently returned from an exciting weekend at Clark university.

Seen at “Sayonara,” the last Junior high dance, were Maureen Crenahan, Tommy Kingston, Peggy Crane, Bob Tebbitt, Sue Press, Curt Congrave, Linda Bearup, Mike Benedict and Cindy Newman.

Every morning before school, Ann Riley, Sue John­ston and Terry Galpin get a work-out playing tennis.

Veterans Howie Ott and Ann Wilson are exclusive members of the Milne appendectomy club.

Heard singing the Uteca Club beer song on Riki Stewart’s lawn were Scott Bunn, John Hiltz, Dave Blabey and Tim Hamilton. Meanwhile indoors Bobbi Lester, Ellen Price, Gay Baxter and Barbara Corbot enjoyed the Quin-Sigma-Tri-Hi-Y picnic.

Don Kingston and Mike Russell brought their lawn chairs to school so they could eat lunch in comfort.

After a tiring tennis game, Sandy Berman, Stu Horn and Mike White were treated by cooks Judi Safranko, Betty Weinstein and Joyce Johnson to a backyard barbecue at Judi’s house.

Among the twelve students who showed up for the senior picnic were Doc Hengerer, Dotty Hoyle, Bill Nathan and Bobbi Lester.

Five business students attended the Business Students Recognition Day sponsored by State College Commerce club. Beverly Wozniak, Barbara Rogler, Norma Rosenthal, Roger La Mora and Lloyd Smith started their day with a “Cocoa Hour” at Brubacher hall.

Congratulations to Norma Rosenthal and Carolyn Lannon for honors received in the Gregg shorthand Speed test.

Question—Should Milne have an honor system?

Jan Hiltz—Yes. Such a system would prevent cheating and encourage students to try for better grades.

Rick Wallace—Yes. It’s easier to work without someone watching over your shoulder.

Tom Thorsen—Yes. The average grades would improve if we had an honor system.

Jan Welt—Yes. It would raise the average of us cheaters.

Steve Rice—No. Too many cheats in this school.

Ken Hoffman—You’ve got to have teachers to proctor the exams. I cheat.

Doug Margolis—If the students can prove themselves honest enough, it would be a good idea.

Jana Hesser—To be honest, no.

Chad Grogan—If we had an honor system, there would be more cheating than ever.

Stu Lewis—It would be hard to have more cheating than we have now.

Mr. Kraus—It’s all right if we have honorable people.

Joe Allison—I’m all for it. It will promote joy.

Janet Arnold—Before answering, I would like to consult my cheat sheet.

Janice Humphrey—I am against it. It offers too many temptations.

Margie Childers—Idealistically, yes. Realistically, no.

Sue Gerhardt—No. Parental pressure might cause some to cheat in such a situation.

Jim Brody—Yes. For seniors only.

Jim Casey—It wouldn’t work without unanimous cooperation.

QUIZZES, QUIZZES AND MORE QUIZZES
By JIM VAUGHN

Seven A.M. the shreking sound of that awful alarm clock woke me up like a herd of buffalo under my bed. Half asleep I stepped into the shower (I almost broke my neck on the soap) and by the time I was out I was three-fourths awake. It took a cup of black coffee, two eggs, and six strips of bacon to awaken me fully. Those awful homework papers kept me awake until two A.M., and what happens when I hand them back?

They read the mark, and toss them over their shoulder into the waste paper basket. Five hours of sleep and what do I get? A complaint for an unfair mark.

At eight I was on my way to school on the bus, and by eight-thirty I had arrived. Thirty minutes more of peace and then commotion beyond the wildest dreams. I think every teacher dreads the approach of "nine A.M.", zero hour among our faculty.

With fifteen minutes left I had already written the day's assignment and started to prepare some questions to ask the class about last night's reading assignment.

Suddenly I spotted one of the enemy. He was camouflaged completely in a white pair of sneakers, bulky sacks, blue pants, white shirt, and matted up hair. He slid into his seat and with a big smile said: "Hello Mr. Vaughn."

"Hello Billy," I said carefully, not knowing what to expect. Not a word followed for ten minutes. The first bell broke the silence sharply. Then one by one they came into the room, giggling, snickering, and yelling. As the last bell rang, silence came over the class. The next five hours were to be a holocaust of noise, giggling, bitter feelings, and laughter.

"Now, you were supposed to read pages thirteen through twenty-five for social studies last night. I want all of you who did not read the assignment to raise their hands." Not a hand was raised. "Well then, since all of you have read your assignment, I think we will have a little quiz."

A few grunts and groans broke the silence from the back of the room. I wrote the question on the board and then handed out the corrected homework.

"I know what I was letting myself in for, but according to the "Teacher's Code of Ethics" I had to go through with it. Billy raised his hand. I knew he was going to ask me to go over it again.

"I—" the buzzer rang for lunch.

At twelve-fifteen the whole class was back. Half of the day was over, but another trying half stared me in the face.

"Take your grammar books," I said. In the middle of the lesson I heard some giggling from a few girls in the back of the room. Obviously something was going on I knew nothing about. Just then I caught one of them passing notes. This is something every class has also, a note-passer. In my case I had three or four, all girls. I went on with the lesson only to be interrupted several more times. Finally I said, "Well someone let me in on the joke." Billy handed me the mangled old piece of paper that looked like the constitution's grandfather. On it was a small note:

"A bunch of nonsense!" she scolded. "And Dion, you should have more sense than to listen to your father's lies talk."

"Aimless, is it?" shouted Jason. "Do you realize that nothing like this has happened since the beginning of history?" He became more excited and continued with emphasis. "For all we know, there could have been creatures on that planet that blew themselves to kingdom-come. Some of them could have escaped in rockets and at this very moment may be entering our atmosphere."

Jason rose irritably and glared at his family. He looked as though he would burst.

"I'm ashamed of you," said his wife, "carrying on like we're all about to be killed in our beds. You should—"

"I should what?" interrupted Jason without giving her a chance to finish. "And ashamed . . . of me . . . no less! I'm ashamed of you—both of you."

By this time he was so excited he began to shake and said with much effect, "I'll not say any more." With that he strode out of the room.

Wilma became alarmed for the first time, more by her husband's behavior than by his vehement statements.

The evening dragged on with practically no conversation, except for the usual "Is the wind coming up?" or "Want a snack before bed?" The latter was the last comment before the family retired. Jason couldn't sleep. He tossed, then turned, then became engrossed in deep contemplation.

"I did act like a fool tonight," he thought. "Me and my ideas. I shouldn't have blown up. But still, it is strange. I wonder why that beautiful green planet did turn blue?"

Finally, he dropped off to sleep.

Everything was still. The whole farm seemed desolate, bathed in the cool moonlight.

It was dark when Jason awoke. It was either very late or early. He couldn't tell.

Their bedroom looked over the front pasture. He pulled himself out of bed to look at the strange blue star in the sky. As he stared there was a streak of light in the sky, an explosion, then another blinding flash of light.

Jason could see nothing after the flashes. He was more shocked than terrified. He still sat in the same place. The household came alive.

Wilma woke and began to scream. Dion rushed through the door yelling: "A meteorite! A meteorite fell! Let's—"

"It was not a meteorite," interrupted Jason quite calmly.

By this time Wilma had become a little more composed. She looked from Jason to Dion who were looking at each other.

Then Dion said in disbelief, "You're not thinking that that flash was a ship full of people from your little blue planet?"

"That's what we're going to find out," returned Jason. "Get your clothes. I'll meet you downstairs in five minutes. Don't forget your gun!"

Wilma agreed reluctantly after Jason said he was going anyway.

A few minutes later the father and son started out of the house. The household came alive.

Jason and Wilma were at the edge of the woods. Dion was already up the hill. The farmer crept over the rise. Maybe some of the livestock was hurt. I'll have to see them.

Wilma agreed reluctantly after Jason said he was going anyway.

A few minutes later the father and son started out of the house. The night was unchanged. The moons were still out, but a cool breeze now stirred the trees.

A few more minutes walking, then they stopped short. Dion turned and looked triumphantly at his father.

"It is a comet," he said.

Jason just stared. It was glowing, and formed a crater when it hit. "No . . . no! It's moving!" screamed Jason. "A door . . . run . . . hide!"

Trees Along a Superhighway
By RICKEY STEWART

Ancient trees along a superhighway—
Accept the wide contours of the road—
Accept the difference between today's world—
And that of old—
Great bodies of steel and chrome—
Hurtling along the highway—
Do not stop to see the trees—
Do not bother to ponder their meaning—
Instead they hustle on to meaningless destiny—
The highway opens itself up to urge them on—
Granite meets rubber in endless contact—
The trees lean down to whisper their secrets—
But the hum of engines drowns out their song—
Drowns out their song and makes them sad—
Makes them withdraw and save their knowledge for another time—

EVENING STAR

They both ran behind the rise and looked down. After a passage of minutes, they crawled on their stomachs to the edge of the crater and looked down. The door was open. Two disgusting and horrid creatures emerged. They walked on only two legs, and had two grasping arms and a terrifying head with only two eyes, and pasty white skin.

Suddenly the intruders began to climb the crater.

Jason didn't hear what they said, because his heart gave way but Dion understood their brain waves.

Milne Triumphs in Four League Contests

After losing three straight ball games by a one run margin, Milne came back to win four in a row. At Cohoes Milne was plagued by poor hitting, and Jim McClelland and Al Daggett hit the ball down the center, which the fifth inning Cohoes got two runs to win the game 3-2. The same story goes for both the Lansingburgh and Watervliet games with Milne losing 9-3 and 2-1, respectively.

Milne Wins
The ball started rolling for the “Red Raiders” when in the second Cohoes game everyone walked, except Al Daggett, as soon as they swung. Aside from Jim McClelland’s speccular pitching (3 hits and a walk), the “Young Profs” finally began to riddle the ball for nine base hits. Doug Hengerer, Jim McClelland and Tom Thorsen carried the brunt of the hitting attack with two hits each. The game ended with a score of 14-2 in favor of Milne.

Once started, the Milne team couldn’t be stopped. In the following game with Lansingburgh, Milne scored three runs in the sixth innings to win the game by a score of 5-3. Steve Rice contributed three base hits while Al Markowitz came through with two clutch singles that drove in two runs.

Academy Falls
Albany Academy was Milne’s third straight victim on this historic season. After scoring three runs in the first inning, Milne, behind steady pitching by Lew Tisch and Daggett, coasted all the way ending up with a score of 8-2. Steve Rice, Mike Daggett, and Jim McClelland were the only men to collect hits from Academy’s ace pitcher, Charlie Townsend. However, Townsend had trouble with his control, and thus resulted in a smashing victory for Milne.

Milne’s fourth straight victory was chalked up against Van Rensselaer High. Behind the inspiring pitching of Jim McClelland, Milne had no trouble in stopping V.H.S. 10-0. McClelland, who allowed only two hits, was relieved in the fifth by Tom Thorsen. Hitting was no trouble for Steve Rice, who slammed out two singles and Neil Robinson a booming double.

Baseball Promising
The baseball picture as it looks now is very promising. With a little luck, and a lot of skill, Milne hopes to be right in the middle of the Class C sections. Last year Milne won its first sectional game against Greenville, but unfortunately fell to the overpowering team of Milne-Lansingburgh.

Athletes Receive Awards at Dinner
The Milne Boy’s Athletic Association held its annual father and son banquet recently. Mr. Edward Fagan was the master of ceremonies and Ned Hardness, hockey coach of F.P.L. was the speaker.

After a quick “Star Spangled Banner,” and a few Grogan and Fagan original, the presentation of letters and awards, and the player voted most valuable by his teammates, went to Jeff Segal for basketball, Jim McClelland for baseball, and Bob Cantwell for tennis.

Eighth graders awarded letters were Dick Blumberg, Bert Blalock, Bill Burke, Bill Butler, Pete Einhorn, Dave Golden, Steve Gutz, Mark Lewis, Stan Lockwood, Bob Mendel, Jeff Rider, Rich Sherman, Charles Shoudy, and Bob Velenti.

Fresh presented with letters were Tom Bennett, Brian Carey, Curt Cosgrave, Paul Gabb, Jim Hengerer, Jim Lange, Lea Miller, Coby Nuckols, Jim Olson, Deane Rundell, Ken Thomas, Jim Vaughn, and Dave Worthman.

Awards given in the junior class went to Dave Blalock, Tim Hamilton, Stuart Horn, Codge Jenkins, Ken Lockwood, Al Markowitz, Pete Quackenbush, Steve Rice, Neil Robinson, Terry Thorsen, Tom Thorsen, and Andre Deschijf.

WARREN A. BEDELE, Steve Einhorn, Art Hengerer, Stu Lewis, Tim Rider and Erle Yaffe also got letters in the senior class.

Teams Finish Rough Season
This year’s varsity tennis team turned out two spectacular performances, both against Lansingburgh High. The “Young Profs” eased out the two games both by scores of 6-1. This was largely due to the efforts of number one man, Bob Cantwell.

However, the rest of the league turned out to be a little too powerful with Hudson edging us out 4-3. Cohoes beating us 6-1, and Albany Academy and Albany High both whipping us 7-6.

This year’s team represented in the section 2 tennis finals where Bob Cantwell took third place. Incidentally, Bob was also voted the most valuable player of his team at the recent Father and Son Banquet.

Junior Varsity
Playing only a five game schedule this year, Milne’s Junior Varsity baseball team wound up the season with one win and four losses to its credit.

The opening game against Van Remselaar High resulted in an 11-0 defeat despite the consistent hitting of Tom Bennett. Bennett connected for a double and a single.

Cardinal McCloskey proved to be too weak for Milne with Tom Bennett tossing a three hitter, and Dave Worthman collecting a hard hit triple. The final score was 5-4 in favor of Milne.

The remaining games of the season proved to be very gloomy for the Milne team. After losing the second game with McCloskey by a score of 3-2, the Milnemen lost a second game with McCloskey by a score of 3-2, the Milnemen lost a Fourteenth Annual MGAAN Banquet was again a big success, especially in view of no rain for the first time. Under the professional-caliber direction of Miss Murray as M.C., the pace of the program was swift and exciting, peppered with her clever quips.

Officers and Representatives Named
Previous to the banquet, the seventh and eighth grades voted for their representatives to next year’s Council. Representing the seventh grade were the eighth grade representative, and Marilyn Hesser, the ninth.

Next on the program, the following year’s officers were revealed. In ascending order of responsibility, Miss Murray announced that Katie Wirsching and Bill Butler would be the next year’s council representative, and Marilyn Hesser, the ninth.

Song Leaders
Song leading tryouts were held previous to the banquet, but not until the last minute, the names of those chosen were to come back next week. But wouldn’t you know it, comedia Murray, up to her tricks, the last year’s senior song leaders actually did the choosing that day. The song selection was unguarded until, in a surprise announcement at the conclusion of the banquet the following were named as next year’s song leaders: Karen Thorsen, Sue Johnston, and Joan Kallenbach.

Awards
Judy Margolis, Carol Ricotta, and Barbara Lester for serving as varsity cheer leaders for the first time this past season were awarded pins in the shape of tiny silver megaphones.

This year’s songleaders, Sarah Gerhardt, Linda Dillenback, and Sue Unger received, for their efforts in our school, and an opportunity to lead in programs at the annual father-son banquet.

Cheerleaders are awarded to the girls who have successfully completed 18 separate sports in intramural sport. Some of the girls who received them this year were: Barbara Currey, Judy Saffran, and Gay Wishing. Sue Weinstock, and Sue Unger. This year, which came as quite a surprise to a few of these girls, who had been warned by Miss Murray (the tennis) that no credit would be given for sports uncomplicated this spring by banquet time, leaving them a few credits short of 18.

Super saleswomen in the magazine department who had sold over $500 worth of magazines were also recognized with gifts. A special gold merit pin was given to Jill Kallenbach, and Barbara Curey, Mibby Taylor, and Cherie Donskis who had sold over $100 worth.

This year’s saleswomen, and their representatives to next year’s council as the members of Jill Kapner’s magazine department were revealed. Under the professional-like direction of Miss Murray as M.C., the pace of the program was swift and exciting, peppered with her clever quips.
JUDY JOHNSON

The "I Don't Care" girl of the senior class is none other than Judy Johnson. For the past two and one-half years, our talented Judy has been a regular on the Teen-Age barn. Her specialty is pantomime and this year she has entertained Milinites at the Sigma Rush and the Charity Pool assembly. Judy has also gone on several tours to Vermont and Massachusetts with groups from the Teen-Age barn.

FACT NO. 1—(Eespecially member of Milinnetes—that famed singing group—and a semi-finalist in the Philip Quay Contest.

The coming summer months will find Judy taking singing lessons and serving as an apprentice at the Arena theater. Next fall she will attend the Leland Powers school, a professional school of the theater.

STEVE EINHORN

Here we have one of Milne's more versatile athletes. At one time or another, Steve has managed to participate in every type of sport offered at Milne. This includes football, basketball, tennis, bowling, track, and soccer. Steve is also a member of the illustrious Milne baseball team, but quit when it was rumored that he might be traded to Watertort for the crackled baseball bat. For the past three years, Skip has been a member of Theta Nu, and is currently president of his youth fellowship. He also found time somehow to be salutatorian of this year's graduating class.
