A Peaceful Protest

Wednesday night we witnessed a rare participation in the most impressive demonstration of student unity at the college. The student body, acting as a mass, marched to the administration building to protest any possible cutting of the freshman department. The action was spontaneous and well-organized by a student club. It is noteworthy that the protest was directed against the administration as a whole, and not against any individual. The students were very happy that the administration was able to find a solution to the problem that would be fair to everyone involved.

Why Did Saturday Review Select Our State College?

The general election has been called towards Dartmouth College, which has been the subject of many discussions. Why did Saturday Review select Our State College as its source for the study of the state? The reasons are not clear, but it is possible that they are connected to the state's lobbying at the Capitol. Reasons for the selection of the state include the number of people who are involved in the lobbying efforts, and the public's interest in the issue. However, it is not possible to provide an effective analysis of the reasons for the selection of the state without further information.

Sick, Sick, Sick

With the second semester underway illness is not a very pleasant topic with which to concern ourselves, but whenever we take a look, it surrounds us. The sad part about possessing some of the common diseases is that they are not likely to return for a long, long time. It certainly should be evident that State College needs an infirmary.

If one becomes ill in a dormitory or group house, the only recourse is to visit the school medical office for treatment, except in serious cases when a doctor is asked to visit the student. Though every attempt is made in a dormitory and a student suffering from an illness, dormitory life is hardly conducive to convalescing. Very little recreation can be given to provide a special and appealing diet for a sick person, and often the usual noise and change of group living prove too much when one's body is trying to gain extra rest needed for recovery. Crammed living quarters also contribute to the spread of any current epidemic, and students left by themselves to treat their ailments are often guilty of total neglect.

Most substantial colleges and universities have infirmaries which can be given to the whole student body. A college with an infirmary, the site of many students, and a student body is an important and necessary one. All campuses provide an infirmary, and we are glad to see that the planners have made such a menial, but what we are to do is the question? A problem of adequate and proper facilities is a serious one, but a small sacrifice for health is not a serious matter.

Commercial

And now we pass to a brief mention from our sponsors... Eaters and reporters of all talents and interests come to campus and see our own campus in yellowed mastheads, but the News has been published regularly for the last forty-six years. The existence of the News is a serious one, but a small sacrifice for health is not a serious matter.
