Threat of Business Ed. demise sparks debate

By Doreen Clark

The Business Education program at SUNYA may soon be on the chopping block. "We are in a very precarious position," said George Thomas, director of Business Education. "There is a strong possibility that the program could be suspended at any time."

The program, one of the oldest in the state, holds a lower priority than many other education programs. "Although 'there is a high demand for business teachers in New York State,' according to Education Officials, the program is more of a discussion of options, rather than a practical training ground," said Thomas.

The proposal was submitted to the Chancellor in 1983-1984 in response to an increasing need for business teachers. While the current program requires at least a minor in business education, the new proposal would offer an even higher standard of education.

The program is more than a discussion of options. It consists primarily of transfer credits and includes minimal research and vocational training. "The program is more of an extension of the existing curriculum," said Thomas.

Education teachers in New York, SUNYA, and the Jewish community have been voicing their concerns about the program in the past year. "We are the 'we' generation, and we have to rectify the error and hope that it would not be suspended," said Thomas.

By the time student work is complete, the program would have to meet the University standards of all combined programs. The proposal was submitted in 1983-1984 in response to an increasing need for business education programs.

The amount "could be approaching 1,000' for the current program, according to Thomas. "If the program is suspended, the amount would have to be met by the Student Accounts Office in the Future," said Thomas.

The Business Education program would be the last of its kind at SUNYA. "I think it's a shame," said Thomas. "It's a good program, and it needs to be continued."
Black history travels a road of pride, identity

By Patrice Johnson

Black history travels a road of pride, identity.

The importance of an individual or an entire race to know its history cannot be too highly stressed. In some countries, the study of black history has often been banned or restricted. In South Africa, history is taught from the perspective of whites. In the United States, the contributions of black people have often been overlooked. Perhaps as all people come to know the richness of black history, many myths concerning blacks can be dispelled.

In knowing black history, many myths concerning blacks can be dispelled. It is essential for blacks to know their true history so that they can tell others and enlighten them about the achievements of past great figures who would otherwise have gone unrecognized. It is also essential for textbooks to be revised in part so that blacks and whites can better understand the meaning of black history and the many myths concerning blacks can be dispelled. In knowing black history, many myths concerning blacks can be dispelled.

Moreover, history is a measure of race's progression and the blindfolds from the eyes of history cannot be removed. Perhaps as all people come to know the richness of black history, many myths concerning blacks can be dispelled. In knowing black history, many myths concerning blacks can be dispelled.

Who am I?
If I don't know who I am, I can't come to know myself. Carter G. Woodson, you initiated African-American History Week February 7, 1926. Woodson's purpose for establishing this week was to alert all races, including blacks, to the numerous contributions that have been made through the years. Today, Negroes need to know their true history. Not only does the removal of blindfolds from the eyes of history; a time for blacks to witness the attempts, efforts, and accomplishments of blacks.

The Reagan 'Dynasty'

What could be more fitting than sitting down to watch an episode of Dynasty during Reagan’s State of the Union Address?

After all, don’t they both present the same sort of image? The country is in a Depression, and the rich are even richer thanks to Reagan’s policies. The country is in a Depression, and the rich are even richer thanks to Dynasty. The poor can’t do anything about it, and the rich are even richer thanks to Dynasty. There’s no doubt we’re buying it.

Reagan proved that in November, and in January, they decided to show Dynasty instead of the Democratic Party. A Dynasty party.

It seems we’re more comfortable with riches and presidents that gloss over the truth. As we sit in front of our TVs, mesmerized by the glamorous cardboard Dynasty (and almost always white?) selling us an illusion where a dynasty is living an exciting escape a mess we helped create in their world.

In January of 1981, Reagan concluded his address by singling out a district court in Syracuse. It was a legal system that principled men would want it that way. It was a legal system that many believed that signing up for the draft was a very brave act, and so was the protesting of those principled men that believe that signing up for the draft was a very brave act.

When Mager joined Upstate Resistance, a network of numerous civil rights setbacks, and in 1981, Mager decided to go public about his refusal to register for the draft. He spoke at length about what they’re fighting for, and they would die to have the freedom to be threatened every day. For Andrew Mager’s sake, he is free to do so. Our government erisures that freedom.

I hope everyone will see the importance of my plea and respond favorably.

COLUMN

Choisce of principled men

Six months from now, Andrew Mager will be released from prison. A free man.

But we wish Mager and other conscientious objectors a free man from our own society, our own state, our own town.

Our government erisures that freedom.

Ignorance is a sin

To the Editor:

In your “The Reagan Dynasty” column, you write that “the Reagan dynasty is too much, and it is all wrong for the country.”

I believe that the unknown writer’s statements about Reagan’s policies are not accurate. Reagan is a man of principles, and his policies are based on those principles.

As a result, I would like to respond to the unknown writer’s statement that Reagan’s policies are all wrong for the country.

Men tracksters stunned by RPI

By Adam Maroun

The Albany-RPI men's indoor track dual meet had all the trappings of an important contest, with both teams having a strong showing in the first 11 events of the meet. Albany took the first five places in the 60 meter dash, with Darrel Hodge winning in 6.8 seconds. The Danes also won the 4x200 relay, with a time of 1:28.4. RPI's best time in the event was 1:30.7. In the 60 yard dash, Albany's Mike Mackinnon finished first in 6.7, with RPI's top time of 6.8.

Another area where the Danes had an edge was in the 500 meter run, with Albany's Samuel Connolly winning in 1:06.4. RPI's best time in the event was 1:09.6. In the 620 yard run, Albany's John LeMay won with a time of 2:04.8, while RPI's top time was 2:08.6. In the 880 yard run, Albany's Ben McCutcheon won in 2:00.4, with RPI's best time of 2:05.9. In the 1 mile run, Albany's Ralph Payne won in 4:04.5, with RPI's best time of 4:07.8. In the 2 mile run, Albany's Mike Munsey won in 8:29.4, with RPI's best time of 8:44.0.

The Danes also had a strong showing in the field events, with Albany's Mike Smith winning the high jump with a height of 6' 0". RPI's best jump in the event was 5' 11". In the pole vault, Albany's Bill Smith won with a height of 13' 6.5", while RPI's best jump was 13' 0". In the discus throw, Albany's Mike Mackinnon won with a throw of 149' 8", while RPI's best throw was 137' 10". Danes survive huge scare from Union, 63-60

By Rich Sheridan

The Danes survived a major scare from Union College Saturday night as 6,300 fans in the Dunn Center watched the Danes pull away for a 63-60 victory.

The game saw the return to the court of John Carmello, who led all scorers with 19 points. Carmello, a senior, was limited to just 13 minutes in the first half of the last game due to a high ankle sprain. He said he was feeling fine and was ready to go.

At halftime the Danes were ahead 32-23, but the game was far from over.

In the second half, Union came out with a 10-0 run to tie the game at 38-38 with 13 minutes left. The Danes then went on a 14-2 run to grab a 52-39 lead with 6:23 left. Union cut the lead to 59-50 with 1:34 left, but from there the Danes were able to hold on for the victory.

"We were challenged by them for the entire game," said Dane Kim Kosalek. "But we were able to pull away in the second half and seal the victory." Kosalek scored 12 points in the second half.

The Danes are now 15-5 on the season and 7-1 in the conference. Union is 8-11 on the season and 3-5 in the conference.

Echoes of a distant past

As part of the 50th anniversary of George Crumb’s “Music for a Summer Evening,” the University of Albany’s Symphony Orchestra performed Crumb’s work on Saturday night.

The performance featured the work’s three movements: “Summer Rain,” “Furioso,” and “Pleas of the Earth.” The orchestra was conducted by Thomas Daffern, who also served as the program’s emcee.

The performance was held at the Performing Arts Center, where the audience was seated in the round to enjoy the full experience of Crumb’s music.

The first movement, “Summer Rain,” was performed by the orchestra and featured a variety of percussion instruments, including timpani, tam-tams, and snare drums.

The second movement, “Furioso,” was performed by the winds section and featured a variety of wind instruments, including oboes, clarinets, and trumpets.

The third movement, “Pleas of the Earth,” was performed by the strings section and featured a variety of string instruments, including violins, cellos, and violas.

The performance was well-received by the audience, who were praise for the orchestra’s performance and the conductor’s skill.

"The orchestra really impressed me," said audience member Mary Johnson. "The conductor did a wonderful job leading the orchestra and the performance was truly a highlight of the evening."

The 1980s have proven to be very profitable for the jazz scene. The cost of recording has been reduced, and there is a growing audience for jazz. Many jazz artists have begun to record and perform outside of traditional venues. This has led to a increased number of venues for jazz performances.}

Without exception, David Hicks has taken a very distinctive role in the jazz scene. His music is a unique blend of classical and jazz elements. He has performed with many of the top jazz artists of today, including Oscar Peterson and Stan Getz. His latest album, "Serenade in Blue," has received critical acclaim and is available at many record stores.

Davus Jenkins is a musician who has been active in the jazz scene for many years. He has recorded several albums, including "Jazz Revolution," which was released in 1985. His music is known for its complexity and innovation. He is currently touring the United States with his band, "The Davus Jenkins

Jazz Quartet."

Hot New Roles Won't Stop Her Search for Old-Fashioned Love

BY HARRIET MODLER

February/March 1985, Ampersand

Though her strong jaw connotes steely determination, and her hazel eyes hold steady as she searches for carefully considered answers to probing questions, Ally Sheedy is also a portrait of wistful vulnerability. The young girl who achieved best-seller status as an author at age 12 with her book She Was Nice to Mice, grew into an accomplished screen, best known for her box-office smash WarGames, and then into a daughter of a Breakfast Club and Twice in a Lifetime.

She has accomplished much in her 22 years, but Ally still readily admits to searching for and believing in the possibility of real, lasting love.

"True, pure love can enhance your life in every way; a free, warm, supportive relationship is rare, but worth finding. I think there is a return to old, traditional values," says the young movie whose parents were divorced when she was nine.

"You want to believe there's a Santa Claus, that it's all true, because it's all so enticing. A lot of people float along, trying to give life some meaning with things, drink and money. But I don't think any of those things work. It has to come from inside. It takes a lot of work for me to keep myself at peace, and I say, 'Thank God, I don't buy into the other scene.'"

Ally lives alone now, in a small guest house in the Hollywood Hills, but a few years ago, she lived with her boyfriend. That long-term relationship dissolved when they both grew in separate directions.

Each day you spend in college brings you closer to the day you’ll be leaving it behind. And that means one eminent thing: having to work for a living. For most college students, the idea of leaving the half-way house of college and entering the real world to become gainfully employed is terrifying. Finding that perfect job, the one for which you are ideally suited, is no easy task. So says Nancy Anderson, author of Work With Passion: How to Do What You Love for a Living.

Most people today are unhappy with their jobs,” she says. “The problems they encounter are often simple, and yet they are modern. According to Anderson, 60 percent of the people who switched jobs five years ago are still unhappy with their work. As a partner in a career counseling firm for the past eight years, she has helped people ranging in age from 18 to 50 find new jobs, all the way from new college graduates to those who have made midlife career changes.

The ideal time for anyone to start considering what career change is best for them is in college. Most students enter college knowing what is on their minds and what they want to study. As a result, they are often unaware of what kind of job that will lead you down the path that is most likely to make you happy. For example, you might think to yourself, ‘I can’t stand a career in graphic arts, my father never did.’ You are already an expert in your own life. Just get into the habit of asking the questions that you just don’t ask, you’re not missing the kinds of things you really need for a job interview. It doesn’t just say, ‘Do you like what you do?’

The problem is that most people intend to go to the personnel department, and the higher you go, the more this becomes evident. That others think that others can judge their successes correctly. The ideal time for you is in college. To develop your own idea of what you want to do, go to the personnel department, and then go to the personnel department. The higher you go, the more you will be able to make the decision that is going to last forever. It’s true that in the past, you will be able to look at the personnel department and say, ‘I’m not sure it’s right for me, but I’m happy to look at the personnel department.’

According to Anderson, if you know how to be a partner with someone who is going to help you, and to get some feedback on your ideas about what you really want to do, you will be able to make the decision that is going to last forever. It’s true that in the past, you will be able to look at the personnel department and say, ‘I’m not sure it’s right for me, but I’m happy to look at the personnel department.’

With Hertz, you can see Europe from a first class compartment that stops anywhere you want and goes whenever you’re ready. And whether you share that compartment with three friends or just one, Hertz will cost you less than Eurail. At a level of convenience that takes the confusion out of locomotion.

As long as you’re 18 years old you can rent a car from Hertz! And you can reserve it just seven days before renting, without paying in advance. Whatever you do, reserve early, and you will be doing.

Guess which one will grow up to be the engineer:

As things stand now, it doesn't take much of a guess. Because by and large, he is encouraged to excel in math and science. She isn't.

Whatever the reason for this discrepancy, the cost to society is enormous because it affects women's career choices and limits the contributions they might make.

Only 4% of all engineers are women.

Only 13.6% of all math and science Ph.D.'s are women.

And an encouraging, but still low, 31.3% of all professional computer programmers are women.

In the past ten years, IBM has supported more than 90 programs designed to strengthen women's skills in these and other areas. This support includes small grants for pre-college programs in engineering, major grants for science programs at leading women's colleges, and grants for doctoral fellowships in physics, computer science, mathematics, chemistry, engineering, and materials science.

We intend to continue supporting programs like these.

Because we all have a lot to gain with men and women on equal footing.

Romance may not be specifically covered in any of the classes required for your major, but it just keeps popping up anyway. Hormones surge in Biology 213, signaling arousal; Olympian erotic maneuvers of the Greek Gods are retold in Mythology; Chaucer himself expounds on "Sunny Santontyna's Day" in Survey of English Lit. The subject of romance is always alive.

When European fashion houses reveal their upcoming lines recently, it becomes obvious that romance has just returned to style. Lascivious-forward aspects for women, the last vestiges of what had been called the "Annie Hall style," have vanished. Similarly, new manganese lines about a turn in the romance by emphasizing soft, yielding fabrics and adventurous styling qualities. Consider these examples, presented to you in time for spring's optimum romantic effect, the melting of winter-frosted hearts and most lovers' emotional turning pole.

Compact Stereo Alternatives Deliver Big Sound

A college-bound hi-fi ought to be reasonably priced ($299) Walkman-style CD player. Midi components are easier to operate than the cassettes they enclose, yet the sound can be really, really good, lacking only the lowest of bass lows. Moreover, most powered speakers are stereo marvels. They’re fairly inexpensive ($399) Compact Disc player (model 353K), but they plug right into anything that attaches to a normal car stereo. Midi components are essentially big components with the air and sound of an Inadequate tape player, and they lack Dolby and for a tape selector, even if they can run on either batteries or line current. The prime concern is for to guarantee your future listening pleasures. In tape, you’ll need a Dolby, and no other tech is better than one. If you want the best, you need Dolby C (and all but the cheapest components now have the third Dolby). Older Dolby B (or just plain Dolby) forms compatibility with most modern tape reassure me this way, preserving both your stylus and your records throughout. Some new models have a choice between Dolby and a new one that makes a better choice for your ears. Most powered Stereos, Audio Technica and Shure, have a line of Summit components that come with universal matching adapting so that they’ll fit in any case or turn.

If you get a walk, that’s okay. Don’t worry about all the differences you’re supposed to hear. Just get what matches your style — digital or cd. And even, a stereo light may brighten your day, but listen carefully to the differences. Most models are designed after the same track, having a choice between the built-in speakers and built-in booster amplifiers. They are genuine components that you can upgrade and refine into the best of all possible systems. After graduation, you’ll have a lot of free time to spend on your personal musical tastes.

Everything with me. Another person I meet since coming to Los Angeles, recollection — or a guy will meet me than with non-professionals. It might be a major step, but more like just a part of a relationship with an actor.”

She focused on her career and not on her love life. Ally was not drawn to being single, but the other two were incompatible. The people she's closest to are those she met in school... She was among a group of female students who spent time in the dormitory serving as a detention room. In it, Ally played in the kitchen and the kitchen was locked. She didn't let it happen. I went to the university and was repelled by it. Ally was taken aback... It was hard for me to let it happen. It's so frightening when something big happens and you don't know what the next step will be.

Today, Ally has learned to handle media events with some ease, but seeing a brother-in-law at home, running a newsletter, long walks on the beach by herself, Ally rarely gets to think about her former relationships. "When I go, it's a major step on my part," she says.

Because her appearance has changed after Kaufman and her new shows hero, Ally can still walk around with her head held high.

Sometimes I am recognized, and people will come up to me and say something like: "Thank you for being famous." I think there's something approachable about me, a bit of innocence people have a certain amount of respect for your privacy.

This privacy may greatly diminish, as her new films open. The Breakfast Club is an ensemble piece, and as an upper-middle-class suburban high school student, Ally is trying to keep her privacy.

The motion picture opened in June, and Ally got her first real exposure to fame — and it was a shocker. She lived six months with her parents in Los Angeles, and spent eight weeks on the set of The Breakfast Club, for which she was nominated for an Academy Award. Ally says that what was most difficult was being constantly recognized.

Her friends Rob Lowe and Demi Moore have a certain amount of respect for her privacy. She says she's not mobbed the way other celebrity status with some aplomb. Ally is a woman who acts, and who is a photojournalist and a writer. She was among a group of female students who spent nine very intimate hours together. In this contemporary drama, she plays Helen Mackenzie, the youngest daughter of Gene Hackman and Diane Keaton.

Student-Drawn Strip Displays Sure Comic Touch

Sure comic touches of college life.

In 1938, I was then a pre-promotion student of the lot, and also a junior. He started calling the Irregular Daily a student newspaper and its crinkly-haired, reluctantly-maturing main character. They even love Hank the Hallucination, the grin the real world, is gradually "growing up" eyebeam himself, for starters, there's Eyebeam during long study sessions. Back in 1932, "H.T. Hallucination" was entered in the U.T. student body elections by some non-serious types. He won the presidency in a landslide.

Therefore I Am...

The only apt comparison for Eyebeam's comic strip and its crinkly-haired, reluctantly-maturing main character. They even love Hank the Hallucination, the grin

Why love? Because Valentine's Day is as appealing as those of the serious types. He won the presidency in a landslide.
