WASHINGTON. From everything I read and hear — especially in being cross-examined by campus audiences — here are some conclusions about today's situation:

1. Most students are definitively moving away from extramural bias — left or right. Only a minority continues to display rigidity with one group or another to the point of unreason.

2. Our campus climate can be characterized as highly charged but mostly positive. There is a good deal of genuine concern about the political scene rather than a desire to pursue one group's goals.

3. There is much energy, though wavering, for a deeper commitment to the problems of the community. There is some distress over being able to make the democratic process work for them and that their voices are not heard in the community's affairs.

Driving force

On balance I find a new generation much more concerned. But, in talking with young people, which is quite frequent, I also discern this: They may not realize how much they have discarded national policy in the last few years.

Young people have pronounced the driving force for a social change is public disillusionment with a seemingly rigid establishment. The establishment may have lost its way, as it used to believe in the name of conscience and economics, in bringing Campus crimes in trying and a vote.

By my standard of political action, this is a remarkable sign of awareness. I can think of nothing to match it short of a period of time.

Ability to influence

Except for differences of opinion over the pace of inflation, the students have devoted itself in large part to the Vietnam. This is crucial, I think, in understanding the student's sense of feeling that their voices are not heard. They have a feeling that if it is in a large sense social unrest, they have not got everything they want. But we have to remember that young people are young and that a young generation is not at all time of decision. It is not yet at the stage when they have to decide whether they are going to support a political candidate in a governmental election.

This suggests that most young people are not quite as radicals as what they have been supposed to be. I believe that there are quite a few students who have no idea what they are doing to make their leader appear to be a good political issue until they are really faced with a real political situation.

Political power

This means to me to see and to see and to see and to understand how democracy works. If you examine the world, we see that we have everybody who have to take part in the government on the streets where they were supposed to be in the streets where they should have been. They have taken their power. In a way, it is almost ironic that the young are taking control of the government, but that is what we have been saying for the past few years.

Young people have already been a great help to the students and the leaders. But, for the leaders to keep up, it is as important as being able to think as much as possible. The students have a very great role to play.

They may say that they are going to build or develop a new society, and that in some countries, the young are already beginning to build or develop a new society. They may be saying that they are going to make a revolution, and that in some countries, the young are already beginning to make a revolution. They may be saying that they are going to change the whole society, and that in some countries, the young are already beginning to change the whole society.

Students are not more successful in the American style of democracy than the Latin American people.

RATES REDUCED ON INDIAN QUAD

By Carl Brown

Residents of Indian Quad will receive a 10% rate reduction for their electric bills. Mr. Frank Brown, President of the Student and Faculty Council, announced the rate reduction this week. The new rate is $0.05 per kilowatt-hour for the first 1000 kilowatt-hours used, and $0.08 per kilowatt-hour for the remaining 1000 kilowatt-hours used.

The reduction is designed to encourage the students to use energy more efficiently. It is hoped that this will result in a decrease in the overall energy consumption on campus.

Overdue Book Fine Hike Proposed by Library Council

By Howard Molber

A recommendation of the Library Council of the University of Albany has proposed a new policy to make the effective of the fall semester. The recommendation is to increase the fine for overdue books to 50¢ per day. The proposal is to take effect with the fall semester.

Students have expressed some concern about the proposed fine increase. However, the library staff has stated that the new policy is necessary to encourage students to return books on time.

If a book is overdue for more than 14 days, the fine will be increased to $1 per day. The maximum fine for any one book is $10.

The proposal is scheduled to be reviewed by the University Senate in the fall semester.
John Nicolopoulos teaches history at Albany State. Formerly with the Department of National Defense in Greece, Nicolopoulos has written on aspects of democratic government in Greece. He has held a number of key positions in the Greek Armed Forces, who, in his turn, presides over a pyramid of military officers. Nicolopoulos has been a vocal advocate for the modernization of the military and has been critical of the Papandopoulos dictatorship. In Greece, Nicolopoulos has encouraged the development of the military as a counterweight to leftist political movements. His work has been influential in shaping the Greek military's role in society.

The signs of political transformation occurring in the military are evident in the recent appointment of a new chief of staff by the military. This appointment comes as part of a broader effort to modernize the military and align it with democratic principles. Nicolopoulos has been a vocal supporter of these efforts, and his appointment is seen as a significant milestone in the transformation of the military.

The appointment of a new chief of staff is a crucial step in the modernization of the military. It is a symbol of the military's commitment to democratic principles and its willingness to work with civilian authorities. Nicolopoulos's appointment is a testament to the military's ability to adapt to changing circumstances and to play a constructive role in democratic societies.

Developing the political will necessary to bring about these changes will require a concerted effort on the part of the military and civilian authorities. Nicolopoulos has been a vocal supporter of this effort, and his appointment is a significant step in the right direction. The military has a critical role to play in shaping the future of democracy in Greece, and Nicolopoulos's appointment is a testament to the commitment of the military to this goal.
Third World Interaction

by Amir A. Siddiqi

Exploration of the Third World peoples and minority groups was to be the subject of a conference sponsored by the SUNYA University on the weekend of April 10th through the 12th. The conference, which was attended by representatives from many underdeveloped nations, notably including the minorities of Africa, Asia, and Latin America, was organized in an effort to present this conference to anyone interested in international affairs and Third World problems.

Ed Degree Devalued

by Diane Margolis

We are in serious trouble! Something must be done immediately to rescue the Education Program! The problem is that the students taking this course are doing nothing.

As a result, we are hearing cries from all over SUNYA! I see many students bringing about how bad they have been reading material and getting an "A," in how they didn't appreciable anything and did well on the exam. I see them ripping pages out of the library books, getting an "A," or how they didn't read anything all year and did well on the exam.

I have thought of some possible solutions to this problem. One solution would be for the professor to assign a large number of short assignments, which if the students do not complete, the professor will grade. This is an attractive method if he is not going to be teaching. There are also fun ways of achieving the same result. Many of the students become bored and half-off, and if they have no respect for the professor, then they can be less costly than you may think. It is no way to be the kind of a teacher. It is generally easy to get with a bit of a little detail. Then, the average score of education continually perpetuates itself.

To help you get there, TW A introduces the Getaway Program.

The Premise of America

ToButtonClicker, a group of students at SUNY Albany, has just released a recording of three poems written by the late poet John Ciardi. The poems are "The April Snow," "The Country Road," and "The Yellow Birds." The group recorded the poems in Ciardi's voice and has released them on a cassette tape.

The poems are not for sale, but are available for loan to anyone interested in hearing them. The group has set up a loan system at the SUNY Albany library, and anyone interested in hearing the poems can contact the library to arrange for a loan.

The poems are part of a larger project by the group to promote the work of John Ciardi and other poets. The group plans to record and release more poems in the future.

Dear Mr. Smith,

I am writing to request the loan of the three poems by John Ciardi that your students have recorded on a cassette tape. I am a poet myself and have long admired the work of John Ciardi. I believe these poems would be very beneficial to any students at SUNY Albany who are interested in the poetry of John Ciardi.

I understand that the poems are not for sale, but are available for loan. I would be grateful if you could arrange for me to borrow the tapes. I promise to return them in perfect condition.

Thank you for your consideration.

Sincerely,

The APB Television Network Now Available To Colleges

The APB Television Network's only network affiliation in the Pacific Northwest is going to the University of Oregon in Eugene for the 1971-72 academic year in an effort to reach the all important female audience. This affiliation is being made possible through the efforts of the APB Southern California office in Los Angeles.

The APB Network is already affiliated with over 100 public television stations throughout the nation, and by making this affiliation, the University of Oregon will be able to provide its students with a source of programming not available through any other network. This includes new and exciting educational programs, public service programs, and a wide variety of entertainment programs.

In addition to the programming available through the APB Network, the University of Oregon will also be able to provide its students with a chance to see live coverage of events such as the Winter Olympics, the Summer Olympics, and other major sporting events.

The University of Oregon is proud to be one of the select few colleges and universities in the nation to have this affiliation. We look forward to providing our students with a wide variety of programming that will enhance their educational experience and provide them with a chance to see some of the best entertainment that the nation has to offer.

I looked up and saw you pass by
and I passed you by
A dreamer, a dreamer
I looked up as I passed you by

I walked up and saw you pass by
and I passed you by
A dreamer, a dreamer
I walked up as I passed you by

I danced to the music of the breeze
and we will watch the flowers
I danced as I walked as I passed you by

I watched them, each alone with loneliness as a companion, and I looked up as I passed you by

I asked myself:
Why must there be a reason?

I thought of you and I
looked up as I passed you by

I thought of you and I walked up as I passed you by

I watched you as I passed you by
and I passed you by
A dreamer, a dreamer
I looked up as I passed you by

I watched you as I passed you by
and I passed you by
A dreamer, a dreamer
I looked up as I passed you by

I dreamed of you and I
looked up as I passed you by

I dreamed of you and I walked up as I passed you by

I dreamed of you and I
watched you as you passed me by
A dreamer, a dreamer
I dreamed of you as I passed you by

I dreamed of you and I
looked up as I passed you by

I dreamed of you and I walked up as I passed you by

I dreamed of you and I
watched you as you passed me by
A dreamer, a dreamer
I dreamed of you as I passed you by

I dreamed of you and I
looked up as I passed you by

I dreamed of you and I
