Culture: Alive and Well
on Western Ave.

by Michel Bual

The typical student's knowledge of Western Avenue is limited, to say the least. However, students shouldn't be discouraged from taking an interest in this area. The reason is not that Native Sons and Daughters of the Republic of Mexico are the only people you'll ever run into, but rather that the diversity of the people you can meet on this one street is very interesting.

Students who have never been here are generally surprised at the sidewalk restaurants that are clustered along the sidewalk on the west side of Western Ave., especially the | Mexican restaurants. They may also be surprised at the different types of food
available in one place.

Another interesting aspect of Western Avenue is the calendar of events that students can participate in. The University of Colorado in Boulder has sponsored an annual Maroon Bells Festival, which features music, food, and entertainment. This festival is a great opportunity for students to enjoy a variety of types of food and live music.

In conclusion, students who are interested in exploring all the fun that Western Avenue has to offer should take the time to explore this area. It is a great way to meet new people and try
different types of food.

Where Has All The Money Gone?

by crystal McFarland

In U.S. News and World Report, an article appeared on "For sale: Student Union". The article discussed how many student unions are for sale due to changing financial conditions. The author argued that student unions are, in essence, businesses and should be run as such. This viewpoint is not new, but it has gained new traction in recent years.

In this article, the author pointed out that many student unions are facing financial difficulties due to decreased enrollment and changing student preferences. The author argued that these unions should be run like any other business, with a focus on profitability and efficiency. This viewpoint has caused some controversy, with some students and faculty members arguing that student unions should have a different purpose.

In the article, the author also discussed the role of student unions in promoting diversity and social justice. The author argued that student unions can play an important role in promoting these values, but that they should not be viewed as a business. The author suggested that student unions should focus on promoting student leadership and activism, rather than on profitability.

In conclusion, the article on "For sale: Student Union" has sparked a debate about the role of student unions. While some argue that student unions should be run like any other business, others believe that they should have a different purpose. It remains to be seen how this debate will be resolved.
Banker and Lawyer Will Serve on Council

by Glenn K. Nettles

C. Theodore Carlson, an Albany student and Wayne P. Wagner of Schenectady, both average college men in every way, have been appointed to the SUNY Student Assembly Council by Governor Rockefeller.

Carlson, a partner in the management firm of Alton and Company, and Wagner, a partner in the law firm of Schenectady and Sons, are both active in their respective fields.

Carlson, who has been involved in Republican party affairs for several years, is known for his work in the field of education. He has served as the legal counsel of the New York State Education Department in several capacities and is currently serving as the chairman of the Council of Education.

Wagner, on the other hand, is a member of the New York State Bar Association and has been involved in various legal cases throughout the state. He is also a member of the Albany State Assembly and has served as its chairman for the last two years.

Both men are expected to bring a fresh perspective to the Council and to work closely with the student body to ensure that their views are heard and considered.

Their appointments were announced by Governor Rockefeller on January 10, 1972.

Fiscal Crisis Means: Big Cutbacks and Tuition Hikes

by Vicki Zeldin

The State University of New York is facing a fiscal crisis, and the cuts are coming down hard on the students. The administration has announced that they will be eliminating almost all state support for SUNY construction bonds, funds for SUNY construction bonds, funds for SUNY construction bonds, and SUNY construction bonds, funds for SUNY construction bonds, and SUNY construction bonds.

As a result, the University of Albany has been forced to raise its tuition rates. The new rates are $200 for in-state students and $300 for out-of-state students.

The University of Albany has also announced that it will be eliminating its two lower grades, the first and second ones. This will result in a savings of $100,000 for the University.

The University of Albany has also announced that it will be eliminating its two lower grades, the first and second ones. This will result in a savings of $100,000 for the University.

In order to close the gap, the University of Albany will be raising its tuition rates and charging additional fees. This will result in a savings of $150,000 for the University.

CONSTRUCTION HALT

Albany, NY—The State University expects Wednesday's 12-hour construction shutdown to cost $25 million, although the legislature had authorized $13 million. "The shutdown is a complete waste of money," said one university official. The shutdown was expected to close all the university facilities, including the Student Union, the library, and the athletics complex.

The shutdown was ordered by the governor to protest the university's decision to build a new campus in upstate New York. The governor has said that the university should be paying for the new campus itself, rather than burdening taxpayers with the cost.

The university has said that the new campus will provide more space for students and improve the overall educational experience. However, the governor has said that the university should be more self-sufficient and not rely on taxpayers for funding.

The shutdown is expected to last for 12 hours, from 7am to 7pm. During this time, all university facilities will be closed to the public.

WASHINGTON AP

Thousands of U.S. soldiers, sailors, and marines are now being deployed to Middle East countries to assist in the war against Iraq. The deployment is part of a broader U.S. strategy to contain Iran's influence in the region.

The U.S. military has been reinforce in the region for several years, as Iran has become increasingly aggressive. The U.S. has been working to ensure that Iran does not acquire nuclear weapons, and to prevent Iran from interfering with the stability of the region.

The deployment of troops to the Middle East is expected to continue for several months. The U.S. military has said that it will be assessing the situation on a daily basis to determine if additional troops are needed.

The deployment is also part of a broader U.S. strategy to contain China, which is increasingly assertive in the region. The U.S. has been working to ensure that China does not acquire nuclear weapons, and to prevent China from interfering with the stability of the region.

Are We Served - or Controlled?

As with many other members of the university community, the author has been following the recent appointments to the University Council. We write to express our disapproval of these appointments, and to bring to the attention of the university community the lack of representation in the Council that it represents.

The appointments of Dr. David Looper and Mr. John F. King do not reflect the interests or concerns of the university community. Instead, they reflect the interests and concerns of the Board of Trustees, who have appointed these individuals to the Council without consulting the university community.

Dr. Looper is a political radical who has a long history of involvement in radical student organizations. His appointment to the University Council is a slap in the face to those of us who believe in the importance of academic freedom and the separation of church and state. Mr. King, on the other hand, is a conservative who has a history of opposing the interests of minority groups. His appointment to the University Council is a slap in the face to those of us who believe in the importance of diversity and inclusivity.

In addition, the appointments of Dr. Looper and Mr. King do not reflect the interests of the university community. Dr. Looper is not a scholar, but rather a political activist. Mr. King is not a scholar, but rather a business executive. Neither of these individuals has the expertise or experience to represent the interests of the university community.

Furthermore, the appointments of Dr. Looper and Mr. King do not reflect the interests of the student body. Dr. Looper is not a scholar, but rather a political activist. Mr. King is not a scholar, but rather a business executive. Neither of these individuals has the expertise or experience to represent the interests of the student body.

In conclusion, the appointments of Dr. David Looper and Mr. John F. King to the University Council are a slap in the face to those of us who believe in the importance of academic freedom, the separation of church and state, and diversity and inclusivity. We call on the Board of Trustees to rescind these appointments and to appoint individuals who truly reflect the interests of the university community.

Goodman Attacked Fairly

The Goodman Commission, appointed by the Board of Trustees in 1969, has issued its report to the University student body. The commission was formed in response to the growing unrest on campus, and its mandate was to investigate the issues of student representation and governance.

The report of the Goodman Commission is a fair and balanced evaluation of the current state of student representation and governance at the university. The commission was careful to consider the views of all stakeholders, and its recommendations are based on a thorough review of the evidence.

In particular, the commission was careful to consider the views of the student body. The commission held public hearings, and it received over 1,000 written comments from students, faculty, and staff. The commission also conducted a survey of students, and it found that a majority of students supported the recommendations of the commission.

The commission's recommendations are practical and achievable. They include increasing the representation of students on the University Council, improving the selection process for the Student Senate, and expanding the role of the Student Senate in academic and administrative affairs.

We encourage all members of the university community to read the report of the Goodman Commission and to support the recommendations that it has made. The commission's work has been thorough and fair, and its recommendations are important for the future of our university.

Who Can Beat Nixon?

Muskie Needs Primary Wins

by Walter R. Myers, AP Political Writer

See, Edward M. Muskie appears well on his way toward wrapping up the Democratic presidential nomination before the national conventions convene in July.

There are peaks to be found in the 23 presidential primaries, where Muskie will be challenged by several of his foes in the last months; but he has yet to score a clear victory in any one of them. By contrast, his chief rival, Sen. George McGovern of South Dakota, is far more successful at winning contests.

But reportedly, a Muskie campaign official said the Massachusetts senator was early in reaching for victory in the New Hampshire primary, which will be held on March 7, and which could determine the outcome of that state's contest.

What concerns Muskie is that some victory could shift his position toward McGovern, who has chosen the risky path of seeking a primary win.

This leaves the other primaries, where Muskie will be challenged by several of his opponents, to work to the benefit of the front-runner.

Muskies's organization, short on political expertise, might have to be strengthened in the early primary runoff in May, he said.

Muskie sounded as though he had launched a fundraising drive.

"I don't know that, so it is going to take a lot of money," he said. "We've got to have enough people to win.

The implication of this statement was that money, since a money problem is looming over the Senate, would be a key factor.

"We have to have a campaign that, we believe, will win," he said.
