France, England Blast American Hedging Tactics In Suez Crisis

By NORMAN KOLODZIE

Conference, organized by the American Foreign Service and the American Jewish Congress, which was attended by members of the State Department and the American Jewish Leadership, was set up to discuss the American response to the Suez Crisis. The conference was held at the Biltmore Hotel in New York City on October 11, 1956. The conference was attended by the United States Secretary of State, Dean Acheson, and the U.S. Ambassador to Egypt, John M. Kerr.

Gentleman, what do you mean? I didn't ask you to take my picture. It might be nice to see you smile for the camera. I heard you say something about the Suez Crisis and the American response. Can you tell me more about what happened?

Okay, I'll tell you what happened. In the summer of 1956, the United States and Britain, along with France, sent forces to the Suez Canal area to support Israel in its military actions against Egyptian forces. This action was taken after the Egyptian government nationalized the Suez Canal, which had been previously owned by a French and British company.

At the conference, the American Jewish Leadership expressed concern about the U.S. policy towards Israel and the Middle East. They believed that the United States was too dependent on Israel and that the United States should take a more independent stance.
