Danes to take on Brockport in home opener

By Marc Schwarz

Tommie's success brings the Albany Great Danes a 2-0 start after a 27-18 victory over the State University of New York College at Brockport on Sunday afternoon.

With the two teams separated by only eight miles, it was no surprise to see a high-scoring game. The Danes, who are ranked No. 13 nationally, won their second straight game and improved to 2-0 in the SUNYAC Championship, a league that they have dominated in recent years.

The Danes scored 27 points in the first half alone, setting the tone for the game. They led 14-7 at halftime and never looked back.

Sophomore Mike Milano will start his first game as a senior quarterback on Wednesday. "I'm excited to be playing against a new team," Milano said.

The Brockport Golden Eagles, ranked No. 18 in the nation, will be looking to rebound after losing to the Danes last week.

The game is set for 7 p.m. at University Field. The winner will move to 3-0 in the conference and have the inside track for the championship.

Solomon Amendment delays aid processing

By Eric Hildreth

More than 1,500 SUNYA students have filed complaints with the Office of Student Affairs saying they were denied financial aid because of the Solomon Amendment.

The amendment, passed by Congress last summer, requires colleges to prove that students are complying with the draft laws. If they cannot, they risk losing federal aid.

SUNYA Financial Aid Director Donald Whitlock said the university is doing everything it can to ensure students are complying with the amendment.

"We are doing our best to comply with the amendment," Whitlock said. "However, we are also aware of the complaints and are working to resolve them."
Red Guard tells lie

By June S. Gross

The Albany Student Press reported last weekend that a Red Guard spoke at an event on the University campus. The event was an introduction to a series of lectures titled "The PrePAR Program," which will focus on the history of the Red Guard movement.

The Red Guard is a left-wing political group that emerged in the late 1960s and early 1970s, with members often associated with the American Student Movement and the New Left. The group was known for its radical activism, including protests and demonstrations, and its influence on later movements such as the Black Panthers and the Young Lords.

The Red Guard movement was particularly active on university campuses, and their lectures and seminars often attracted controversial figures and debates.

It is important to note that the views and actions of the Red Guard were not universally supported or well-received, and that their legacy remains a subject of debate and controversy. Some see them as a form of political extremism, while others view them as a serious and legitimate expression of student power and resistance.

Therefore, it is crucial for universities to be aware of the potential for controversy and to ensure that their events and programming are inclusive and representative of a wide range of perspectives.

Campus groups active in registering students

By Ron Clements

While students and city officials pressed for the first time in more than 10 years to get as many students as possible to register to vote by Election Day, the Student Action Committee was not the only group working with campus security to increase voter registration on SUNY Albany.

Steve Gawlcy, chairman of the Student Action Committee, has been distributing registration forms, and has been visiting suites of freshmen students. "I hope to have 3,500 to 4,000 students registered to vote by Election Day," he said.

The Department of Public Safety got three new Chrysler K-cars this summer, sprucing up the campus security fleet. "By the time we traded in the cars, we must have paid for them twice in maintenance and repair costs," said Lieutenant David Prendergast.

The state allocated new cars to SUNY-A because of costly and repetitive breakdowns, said Prendergast. "We're finding that acquain­tances are not deterred by the sex of the guy. They invite you home with them, then try to have sex with you whether you want to or not."

"In many cases, I believe the students are not even aware of what they are doing," said Prendergast. "They don't understand the gravity of the situation until it's too late."

Walk On The Wild Side

Evan Murphy

The album sounds as if it were recorded in two stages. The first half, which includes the title track, is a relatively straightforward collection of songs. The second half, which includes Lofgren's more introspective lyrics, is more complex and experimental. The result is an album that is both accessible and challenging, combining elements of folk, rock, and country into a cohesive whole.

No Thrills From Nils

Keith Van Allen

Nils Lofgren's newest release, "Sixties Music," is a disappointing effort. The album lacks the energy and innovation that made Lofgren's earlier work so exciting. Instead, it is a collection of dull, predictable songs that fail to capture the spirit of the sixties.

Graham Parker Rocks On

Chris Berliner

Graham Parker's latest album, "Heat Treatment," is a return to form. After a string of less than successful releases, Parker has delivered a powerful, passionate album that is both a tribute to the past and a statement of his own musical identity.

Rock 'n Roll in the Ballroom

Maddy Pacucci

The Bongos' latest release, "The Real Macaw," is a solid effort that captures the spirit of the sixties. The band's blend of folk, rock, and tropical sounds is perfectly suited to the album's themes of love, loss, and politics.

Sharing a joke with the city

A recent editorial in the Times Union, written by Mike Trubin, addressed the issue of the growth and delivery of the city. Mike Trubin argued that the city needs to be more efficient and effective in its delivery of services. In particular, he called for better coordination between the city and the university, noting that sometimes the two entities seem to be working at cross-purposes. Mike Trubin also suggested that the city could benefit from more transparency and accountability, and that residents should be more involved in the decision-making process.

COLUMN

The Black family in America

The Black family in America, written by Dr. Japhet M. Zwanza, explores the unique dynamics of African American families. Dr. Zwanzda notes that African American families have a rich history and have faced significant challenges over the years. He argues that the Black family is not only a product of the African American experience but also a force for positive change in society. Dr. Zwanza also highlights the importance of understanding the cultural and historical context of the Black family and its contributions to American society.

LETTERS

Best wishes

In the Letters column, a reader expresses gratitude to the editor for the opportunity to share their thoughts in the editorial section. They note that writing a letter is a way to connect with the community and contribute to the dialogue on important issues.

Improve access

Another letter addresses the issue of accessibility in the city. The writer suggests that the city should make it easier for people with disabilities to navigate the city, perhaps by improving the accessibility of public transportation or by creating more accessible buildings and facilities.

No harm done

A letter challenges the notion that certain actions have no harm. The writer argues that even seemingly minor actions can have negative consequences, and that it is important to consider the impact of our actions on others.

Positive changes

A reader notes that they have witnessed positive changes in the city, such as improved public safety and increased diversity. They encourage others to see the progress being made and to continue to work towards a better future.

U.S. not innocent

A letter challenges the idea that the U.S. is innocent in the current conflict. The writer argues that the U.S. has played a role in the conflict and that it is important to acknowledge the U.S.'s responsibility for the situation.

Messy parking lot

Another letter addresses the issue of parking in the city. The writer expresses frustration with the current parking system and suggests that it is time for the city to take action to improve the situation.

The Albany Student Press is published Tuesday and Fridays between 9 a.m. and 11 p.m. at the University of New York. The newspaper is dedicated to providing a forum for the exchange of ideas and opinions on campus and in the community. The editors welcome letters from readers and encourage them to submit their thoughts to the newspaper.
Clarkson makes history with required computers

Clarkson University now requires its students to own personal computers. Dr. Joseph A. D'Amelio, president of the university said, "It's a step we feel is vital to our goal of turning Clarkson into one of the leading multidisciplinary institutions of higher education in the nation."

The move is in line with recommendations in recent reports and surveys on campus. "It's an exciting new era," said D'Amelio. "It's quite possible that we all, as a university, will come to learn and appreciate the implications of electronic communication on the way we live and work."

Clarkson requires personal computers because the students will be using them in their classes this fall. Students are limited to one computer per space and will be able to use computers in the second dormitory.

D'Amelio added that personal computers are a must for today's curriculum. "In some areas of our curricula, computer technology will change the way we teach and learn. It will help us to build a new campus environment through the use of new campus classrooms and laboratories."

Clarkson already has plans to implement computer technology into the curriculum. "We are now at the point where it's possible to use personal computers as a tool to help students in the classroom. We plan to do this in a way that will allow students to work together in a collaborative environment," said D'Amelio.

Clarkson Policy

Clarkson Policy is now open to the public for the first time. It offers many new features for the public that it was not available to before.

The policy now includes new guidelines for students and alumni, as well as a new section on the website that allows students to view and print their own personal policies.

The website also includes a new feature that allows students to submit complaints and suggestions directly to the administration. This feature allows students to have their voices heard more quickly and easily.

Clarkson is also expanding its online services, with the addition of new classes and events.

The policy is available online at www.clarkson.edu/policy.

Reagan cuts education spending

Reagan administration's fiscal policies, the Congressional Budget Office (CBO) has reported, have resulted in a dramatic reduction in federal education spending. The CBO said in its report released in June that the Reagan administration had cut education spending by $8 billion in the fiscal year ending September 30, 1983. This represents a 14 percent decline from the previous year's budget, which had been increased by 20 percent in the fiscal year ending September 30, 1982.

The CBO report also found that the administration had cut education spending in every major education program, including grants to states, grants to local educational agencies, and scholarships for students. The report noted that the administration's cuts had been more severe in some programs than in others, with the largest reductions occurring in programs that had been subject to budget constraints in previous years.

The CBO reported that the administration had cut education spending by $3 billion in the fiscal year ending September 30, 1984, and by $4 billion in the fiscal year ending September 30, 1985. The report also noted that the administration had proposed further cuts in education spending in its fiscal year 1986 budget, which was submitted to Congress in February 1985.

The CBO report warned that the administration's cuts in education spending could have serious consequences for the nation's educational system, as well as for the economy. The report noted that education spending was a key component of the nation's economic growth, and that cuts in education spending could lead to a decline in the nation's economic performance.

The CBO report also noted that the administration's cuts in education spending were likely to be reversed in the future, as the nation's economy improved and the federal government began to increase its spending on education. The report noted that the administration had proposed a budget for fiscal year 1986 that included a 10 percent increase in education spending, and that the administration had also proposed increases in education spending in its budget requests for fiscal years 1987 and 1988.

Danes rout Brockport, 28-0 for first win of year

By Marc Schwarz

The Albany State University of New York football team emerged from the rain in good shape when they defeated the Brockport State Golden Eagles, 28-0, last Saturday at the state football field.

The game was the first for the Danes this fall and the first at home since the 1982 season. The Danes, who were the only team in the state to win last year, were favored to win the game against the Brockport State University.

The Danes were able to cross the goal line for the first time this season with their first touchdown of the game when fullback Todd Barnard scored on a 1-yard run in the first quarter. The Danes increased their lead to 14-0 with a 34-yard field goal by kicker Mike Purcell in the second quarter.

On the opening drive of the third quarter, quarterback Bill Minor completed a 12-yard pass to wide receiver Rich Goulet for a touchdown, giving the Danes a 21-0 lead.

The Danes continued to dominate the game in the second half, scoring again on a 2-yard run by fullback Todd Barnard. The Danes went on to score another touchdown on a 4-yard run by fullback Todd Barnard to cap off the game.

The Danes outgained the Golden Eagles in total yardage, 366 to 175, and held their opponent to just 175 total yards. The Danes also had 27 first downs to the Golden Eagles' 11.

The Danes improved their record to 1-0 with this win and will look to continue their success in the upcoming games.

Netmen take second in Great Dane Classic

By Marc Schwarz

On Saturday afternoon, the Albany State University of New York men's tennis team took second place in the Great Dane Classic tournament.

The men's team played against several teams, including the University of Connecticut and the University of Notre Dame, and were able to come out on top with a total score of 4-1.

The team was led by coach Steve Koosman, who was voted coach of the year for his efforts in guiding the team to success.

The team's success can be attributed to the hard work and dedication of the players, who have been practicing for weeks leading up to the tournament.

The Danes will look to continue their success in the upcoming matches and aim to win the tournament next year.

Women's safety demanded; University supports efforts

By Eric Hinds

The university is facing an increasing number of complaints about women's safety, and the administration is taking steps to address the issue.

The university has established a safety committee, which is made up of students, faculty, and staff, to address the issue.

The committee is working to identify areas where improvements can be made and to develop strategies to enhance safety for all members of the university community.

The administration is also working with local authorities to address the issue, and has provided additional funding to support these efforts.

The university is committed to providing a safe and secure environment for all students, faculty, and staff, and is taking steps to address the issue of women's safety.

Women's safety demanded; University supports efforts

By Eric Hinds

The university is facing an increasing number of complaints about women's safety, and the administration is taking steps to address the issue.

The university has established a safety committee, which is made up of students, faculty, and staff, to address the issue.

The committee is working to identify areas where improvements can be made and to develop strategies to enhance safety for all members of the university community.

The administration is also working with local authorities to address the issue, and has provided additional funding to support these efforts.

The university is committed to providing a safe and secure environment for all students, faculty, and staff, and is taking steps to address the issue of women's safety.
