Netmen Successfully Defend SUNYAC Title

Albany Tops Buffalo, 27-24, On Arango's Boot

By Mark Herbert

Albany State's football team remained unbeaten with its 27-24 victory over Buffalo in the SUNYAC title game Saturday afternoon.

The game, played in front of a capacity crowd of 6,500 at University Stadium, was a seesaw affair, with neither team able to gain a decisive lead.

Albany, however, made the most of its opportunities in the second half, outscoring Buffalo 17-7.

Arango earned Most Valuable Player honors for the second straight year.

The game started with a bang, as Buffalo's Darnell Ford scored on a 5-yard run to make it 7-0.

But Albany's Bruce Collins answered with a 40-yard field goal to make it 7-3.

Buffalo then regained the lead on a 37-yard field goal by Mike Carroll, making the score 10-3.

Albany came back with a vengeance in the second half, scoring 17 points to take a 24-10 lead.

The game ended with a fumble, as Buffalo's defense was able to recover and seal the victory.

Job Search Made Easier with Seminar Program

by Katharine M. Kiefe

We believe that having a single, simple-to-follow format for SUNYA's Job Search Seminar is the key to its success. People who sign up for Seminars I through IV (which require no prior registration) find the process of finding a job to be easier.

NEWS FEATURE

Alexander worked with a friend of his in a different job to get started, but he also found it very helpful to talk to a friend of his in the same field. Although the friend had never had a job, he found the friend's success story to be inspiring. Although the friend had never had a job, he found the friend's success story to be inspiring. Alexander was able to use his friend's success story to help him in the seminar.

This systematic approach to job search, which includes matching your skills and experience to the job you are seeking, is what makes the SUNYA Job Search Seminar so effective. The first part of the seminar covers the basics of job search, including how to prepare your resume and interview. The second part of the seminar covers the job search process, including how to network and how to follow up on leads. The third part of the seminar covers the job search process, including how to network and how to follow up on leads. The fourth part of the seminar covers the job search process, including how to network and how to follow up on leads.

The seminar is free and open to all students, staff, and faculty at SUNYA. It is held on four sides. It's the ultimate Bruce.

"Who's" Calling?

One of the most frequently called numbers is the 408-408 number in San Francisco, known as "408-408". The number, however, was not always popular among the people of San Francisco. Originally, it was a toll-free number used for long distance calls. After a few years, the number became so popular that the phone company decided to charge for it. The number is now used by a variety of businesses and organizations, including a local restaurant.

Ronald Reagan—Conservative Inaction In Action

David Phillip

I feel it necessary to answer Jeffrey Shapiro's article in this newspaper. Mr. Reagan has expressed the opinion that the United States is not subject to any nation or organization in the world. This is a dangerous statement, as it suggests a disregard for the rules of international law and a desire to maintain a state of constant conflict.

In his article, Mr. Shapiro correctly points out that Mr. Reagan's views are inconsistent with the principles of international law. He argues that Mr. Reagan's position is based on a simplistic and unrealistic view of the world, and that it is not in the best interests of the United States.

Mr. Shapiro also raises the question of Mr. Reagan's record on the environment. He points out that Mr. Reagan has not taken a strong position on environmental issues, and that his administration has been criticized for its policies on this matter.

In conclusion, I believe that Mr. Shapiro's article is a valuable contribution to the discussion of Mr. Reagan's policies. It is important to recognize that Mr. Reagan's views are not based on a thorough understanding of the world, and that they are not in the best interests of the United States.

Pre-Law Advises

To the Editor:

We are writing to express our concern about the recent developments in the Pre-Law Association at SUNYA. We believe that the association has failed to live up to its stated goals and has become a haven for the worst kind of political opportunism.

First, we would like to mention the charges that have been made against Mr. Shapiro in the recent debate. We believe that these charges are baseless and that Mr. Shapiro has been the victim of a political witch hunt.

Second, we would like to express our concern about the way in which the association has been run. We believe that the association has become a platform for the worst kind of political rhetoric, and that it has failed to provide a safe haven for the exchange of ideas.

Finally, we would like to express our hope that the association will be reformed, and that it will once again serve as a source of information and debate.

Sincerely,

Sex In Language

To the Editor:

I would like to comment on an article that appeared in the recent issue of the Journal. The article, entitled "Sex In Language," discusses the ways in which language is used to reinforce gender roles.

While I agree with the general thrust of the article, I would like to raise one point that I believe is important. The article suggests that language is a powerful tool for reinforcing gender roles, but it does not consider the ways in which gender roles are reinforced through non-verbal communication.

For example, the article does not consider the ways in which gender roles are reinforced through body language, facial expressions, and other non-verbal cues. These cues can be just as powerful as words in reinforcing gender roles, and they are often not considered in discussions of language.

I believe that a more complete understanding of gender roles requires a consideration of all aspects of communication, including both verbal and non-verbal cues.

Sincerely,

Observations And Realizations

To the Editor:

I would like to respond to the article "Sex In Language" that appeared in the recent issue of the Journal. While I agree with the general thrust of the article, I believe that there is a need for a more nuanced understanding of the ways in which language is used to reinforce gender roles.

As I have mentioned in my previous response, non-verbal cues can be just as powerful as words in reinforcing gender roles, and they are often not considered in discussions of language.

The sweat of numerous which curled slowly down Arthur’s forehead accumulated into larger flows, as each drop formed, it would string itself out along a strand of hair that was later on lost to the body. They were followed by a stream, which in turn would form a continuous path that would eventually disappear in the obscurity of the darkness. The water that was being held in the body was no longer visible, but it was felt as a pressure against the skin. The thought of these events was enough to make Arthur’s face crumple into a twisted grin.

A sign of sympathy preceded the man’s response. “Such is life, Arthur.”

“Thank you,” Arthur replied softly, the words barely audible in the darkness.

“Of course,” the man said, reaching out to place a reassuring hand on Arthur’s shoulder.

Arthur nodded, understanding the gesture, and then turned away, his mind still reeling with the events of the day.

Arthur had always been a man of few words, preferring action over conversation. He had learned to read the world around him through the vibrations and movements of the earth, and he could sense things that others could not. It was this skill that had saved his life on numerous occasions.

But today, everything was different. The world seemed to be closing in on him, the darkness closing in from all sides. He had never felt so isolated, so alone.

The man who had accompanied him earlier was still there, standing next to him, but Arthur could not bring himself to speak. He knew he had to be careful, to think before he acted. But the darkness was closing in, and he could feel it.

Arthur was a man of many talents, and he had always been able to adapt to his surroundings. But today, he felt as though the world was closing in on him, and he could not escape it. The darkness was too strong, too overwhelming.

But he knew he had to keep going, to keep fighting. He had to stay alive.

Arthur’s eyes were closed, and he was breathing heavily. The man who had accompanied him earlier was still there, standing next to him, but Arthur could not bring himself to speak. He knew he had to be careful, to think before he acted. But the darkness was closing in, and he could feel it.

Happy 30 Year Rip-off

UAS is currently celebrating its 30th anniversary by offering the student body "super discounts" on merchandise. Sounds good, doesn't it?

But let's check it out. In their advertisements in current ASP, the service will give you a whopping 30 cents off a lousy meal, or a free medium soft drink when you lose $3 or more from your purchasing goods in the Bookstore. Big deal!

While we're pleased to see that they celebrate -- we can't! Only a campus of masochistic consumers would find joy in getting ripped-off for thirty years.

Now the ASP isn't quick to promote our own advertisers, but which has never been opposed to make a deal, we feel we can make an exception.

For instance, you can purchase a pair of equal weight and value at a local sub shop for much less than the flat. The difference in quality, of course, leaves little debate.

And if you happen to be on the Carriage Center dinner plan, UAS provides you with a generous $1.80 toward your supper. Two bucks couldn't even get you a turkey sandwich -- never mind a meal.

We won't even waste your time discussing the beauty of our Bookstore -- the student body knows too well how the monstrous services continues to rip off their books. (Remember that this last year which lowered prices? Well, our bus has turned and they've risen again.)

The list goes on. Thanks for the free pen, UAS. And for the 30 cents off my sandwich, too. But it might be just as well if you kept your coupons.

We're waiting for genuine offers to make life more affordable for the low to middle income, public university students. And then we might just be able to see the possibility of a 30th anniversary discount.
