The PENALTY LIST

The penalty list published in last week's News was one composed of freshmen who, because of thoughtlessness or misunderstanding of college traditions, violated them. It was more than the college expected. Indeed, the list was surprisingly short. Freshmen must learn by their mistakes. Well and good. That is the way with beginners.

The penalty list published this week is not entirely composed of freshmen. There are senior names on the list as well as sophomore and junior ones. What to do?

Are the upperclassmen going to protest indignantly at thus being held up for criticism? Indeed, too. Will they try to protest and explain their actions? The freshmen, no longer beginners, will show less and less regard for college law and order. Myskania will have to spend all of its time for the remainder of the year in fostering harmony and respect for the traditions of the college.

If you are satisfied with the probable result, you take delight in seeing ideals shattered, in seeing disorder and dissipation controlling college spirit. If you are not satisfied, if you are concerned and eager to have college traditions, class rules, and college traditions respected and obeyed, there will be no more penalty lists.

Those rules are ours, self-imposed, for the purpose of adding to our col- legiate life things which we feel are a vital part of every college life. Especially should upperclassmen and sophomores adhere strictly to all rules and regulations laid down by their attitude aid the enforcement of rules applying to freshmen; they should refrain from all attempts at violation, not wink at them. Why? Because they make laws, and the right to make laws presupposes the willingness to be governed by them.

There is a natural law that makes us appreciate more fully whatever we have rendered handsome and or given up privileges for. The rules which apply to the wearers of buttons and caps, and to the square and circular games, are only such rules as custom, time and place has long since left us.

You will look back upon this year of tribulation with greater delight if you submit to these rules. Freshmen, honor the upperclassmen. You no longer State's guests; you are the younger members of her family. By honoring the rank of upperclassmen through the means provided in our traditions, besides fulfilling a natural law of our society, you are helping yourselves to a state of respect.

The more you respect the rank of the senior, the greater distinction will be yours when you reach that rank. The subtle influence of giving up privileges and of rendering honor where it is due, cannot be defined, but it will all feel its presence.

It would seem that we should feel instinctively all the reasons for living up to our splendid traditions, and that none should be tempted to break them except such as can show no loyalty to anything but the almsgiving. Why do we have tradition-violators in every class, (for they do violate when they wink at breaking of rules.) Is it in defiance of Myskania and its students, the Board of Censors? Nothing so far from the purpose and desire of these bodies as to entrust to its care the guidance of these bodies as to enter upon these unholy things, and that of our students.

For every one of these violations, students, you are helping yourselves to a state of respect. You are helping yourselves to a state of respect. You are helping yourselves to a state of respect.

PROFESSOR KIRTLAND JUSTIFIED ON HIS POINTS

The argument for required courses in college is that they develop the thinking powers of the students. Each professor in his respective department argues that his course can accomplish this to the best advantage. The professor of mathematics declares that mathematics is the one subject which will make students think; the coach, that athletic events develop; the scientist, that science is the subject which brings into play every part of our mental makeup. If we really stop and think, we must admit that not one of us in our daily lives can supply the richness of material which is to be gained from numerous courses taken together.

CHEER FOR THE TEAM!

Thru The Keyhole

There are two kinds of stupidity in State College. One is not knowing how to answer a professor's question, and the other is spelling a professor's pet catch-cry query.

If Caesar came back he might begin his new book, "All Germany is divided into three parts." Perhaps, our own Professor Richardson, of the Smith College, will produce this work now that they have been given the hint. It ought to bring a coupon for Washington week on the market.

It's a good thing, and we can be happy for it, that we don't have to pay our students tax in German marks. It might require the able assistance of the husky Coleman to carry the required amount to room 206.

There is a good thing no Albany city officials were in the audience recently when "Saloonman Billie" Heineman erected wise outside Washington church during the colloquium. Dr. Brinacker would be liable to get a rent bill on behalf of the state.

G. A. A. JOINS COUNCIL

Inter-collegiate rivalry and publicity advantages

Our G.A.A. has taken another progressive step in its successful career by joining the Athletic Council. This step is decidedly to State's advantage, for we can now keep in touch with all college activities. The Council publishes a magazine on women's athletics in which State will have a splendid opportunity for publicity and for showing up its pep.

CHESTER ARRIVES

Shall Chester Camp go to State College? This was a question of great importance to the Gump family in the Gym last Friday. After a lengthy discussion, it was finally decided by 'Spark Plugs' who rode off with Chester to State College.

During the business meeting it was decided that points should be given for bicycling. Dorothy Dots, '25, was elected cheer leader.

There were interclass basketball games and also a contest between the B.A. and B.S. students. Babe Ruth would have been put to shame had he been the freshman baseball pitcher. Dancing occupied the rest of the evening with cider and doughnuts for refreshments.

SCOUT CONVENTION

A scout convention is to be held in Albany High School on Friday evening, November 2, which delegates from within a radius of one hundred miles will attend. Everybody who is interested in scouting and scout work is invited to come. The aim on charged will be in the form of a gift of vegetables to be given to the Old Ladies' Home. An interesting program, consisting of addresses, games, and songs is planned. The convention will close on Saturday with a sight-seeing trip through Albany, a visit to the Old Ladies' Home, and a luncheon at Washington Tea Room at two o'clock. College students who are interested in scouting are especially urged to attend the convention.

“I did not think— I investigated”

One day in 1895, Roentgen noticed that a cardboard coated with fluorescent material, while a nearby Pluecker tube was in action. “What did you think?” an English scientist asked him. “I did not think; I investigated,” was the reply.

Roentgen covered the tube with black paper. Still the cardboard glowed. He took photographs through a pine door and discovered them a white band corresponding to the lead heading on the door. His investigation led to the discovery of X-rays.

Roentgen's rays have proved an indescribable boon to humanity. In the hands of doctor and surgeon they are saving life and reducing suffering. In the hands of the scientist they are yielding new knowledge—even of the arrangement and structure of atoms. The Research Laboratories of the General Electric Company have contributed greatly to these ends by developing more powerful and efficacious X-ray tubes.

CURRICULUM JUSTIFIED

Professor Kirkland says that he believes that it is a mistake to think that any one course in particular can supply mental training better than another. He believes that the amount of mental training received from a subject depends on the student's nature and the way he is trained to think. The variety of courses are offered in the list of required subjects so that there will be some subjects among which the student will find the requirement.

KATHARINE CLUB
The Canterbury Club of State College held its second meeting of the year at St. Andrew's Church, Main Avenue, Thursday evening, October 25. Many students attended, including a good representation of freshmen. The invitation to join Canterbury Club is extended to students of Albany Medical College, Pharmacy College, and Law School. Meetings are to be held at St. Andrew's Church every second Thursday afternoon, following Dean Pierce's lecture to the young women of the freshman class, and every fourth Thursday evening at St. Andrew's Church at seven-thirty o'clock.

Address by The Reverend Mr. Flinley followed the opening service, which was led by Miss Mary Loy, class president of the club. After a short business session, there was dancing. Refreshments, consisting of coffee, cookies and chocolate bars, were served.

SPANISH CLUB
At a meeting of the Spanish Club, Friday, October 26, Miss Martinez gave a very interesting talk on her trip to Porto Rico last year. She gave a very vivid account of her voyage and, aided by pictures, painted very realistic scenes of Porto Rican life. The Spanish atmosphere of the meeting was further brought about by the playing of Spanish music.

It is evident by the accounts which Miss Martinez has brought back from Porto Rico that she thoroughly enjoyed her visit to the Spanish-speaking country.

MENORA TEA
The first Menora tea was held Sunday afternoon at three o'clock in the college cafeteria. Mrs. Pinley followed the opening service, which was led by Miss Mary Loy, president of the club. After a short business session, there was dancing. Refreshments, consisting of coffee, cookies, and chocolate bars, were served.

DEAN PIERCE ENTERTAINS
Dean Pierce entertained three of her classmates at State College on Thursday, October 25. After entertaining them through what they called the new building, Dean Pierce related the history of the building to the group. Dean Pierce recalled that her class had one social function during the whole college course.

The three classmates, Mrs. Jessie Campbell, Mrs. Campbell, and Mrs. W. S. C. Johnson, were all contributors to the Residence Hall Fund.
