Health Column

The body is a functional machine, with its parts and systems working together to maintain homeostasis. Regular exercise is essential for the proper functioning of this machine. Specifically, exercise helps to improve cardiovascular and respiratory fitness, as well as muscle strength and flexibility. It also helps to maintain a healthy weight and reduce the risk of chronic diseases such as diabetes and heart disease. In addition, exercise has been shown to have a positive impact on mental health, reducing stress and improving mood.

The American College of Sports Medicine recommends that adults engage in at least 150 minutes of moderate-intensity aerobic exercise or 75 minutes of vigorous-intensity aerobic exercise per week, along with muscle-strengthening activities on two or more days per week. These recommendations are based on the latest scientific evidence and are intended to help promote overall health and well-being.

As the body is a complex system, it is important to tailor exercise plans to individual needs and goals. Factors such as age, fitness level, and medical history should be considered when planning an exercise program. Pre-existing conditions may require modifications to exercise routines to ensure safety and effectiveness.

In conclusion, regular exercise is crucial for the proper functioning of the body as a machine. It is important to find activities that are enjoyable and sustainable to maintain an active lifestyle and enjoy the many benefits of exercise.
Bennett Moves In Two Directions

Although his teaching job paid the bills, it revealed to him that he needed to seek more artistic freedom for contributions. One thing that he realized was important was the opportunity to direct his own work. He began by directing his own productions, which led to directing students and directing professional productions. Bennett said that he is "delighted with the artistic freedom for contributions. One thing that I realized was important was the opportunity to direct my own work."

Waste Not

In the Editor:

"If the Lord gave it, why must we work for it?" The idea of accepting only the good things the world has to offer is as old as civilization itself. This is not a criticism of those who work long hours and hard to make ends meet; it is a plea for those who take little for granted.

The concept of "waste not, want not" is not new; it has been around for centuries. In medieval times, it was considered a virtue to be thrifty and to make the most of what was available.

Today, in an age of abundance, we tend to forget that just because something is available doesn't mean it is necessarily worth having. We must learn to appreciate the value of what we have and to use it wisely.

I encourage all of us to remember this maxim and to strive to live in a way that honors it.

Sincerely,

Editorial

Out of Control

Let's get it out of our system! We have some occasional letters to the editor, but they are the result of an organized group on campus. The issue has been debated at many schools across the country, and emotions are running high.

Instead, let's just get to the root of the problem: the recent decision to allow ROTC on SUNY's campus. There are a few things that bother us about this.

For example, why was the decision to allow ROTC on campus made without the input of the students? Although it was reported to the Senate system, the decision was not done properly. How could an organization be so much in favor of ROTC and yet not take the time to listen to its students?

In addition to the sneaky way it was passed, there are other problems. In the past, the army has shown outright hostility toward ROTC. Whether or not the university will stand behind its own policy remains to be seen.

The university has always had ROTC on campus; however, when it comes to holding classes on campus, there will be no input from the students. This is a total disregard for ROTC on SUNY's campus. These questions need to be answered, for it is the university and we must have a say in decisions which affect us.

Danes Sweep Colgate as Esposito Gets Record

by Bob Belhorne

At a ride, Colgate is now 4-3 in conference play and the Danes 5-2, 6-2 overall. A win for the Danes would move them into a tie with Colgate for the lead. Esposito's three goals and four assists split at Colgate mark the 10th of the season for the Danes and their fifth in a row. The Danes jumped out to an early lead with an early goal by Ridenour, assisted by Wray. The lead lasted until Colgate scored in the second period, with three goals each period.
