In Striking Range Of SUNYAC Title; Three Conference Games Remaining

by Mike Petrollo

With two days left in the SUNYAC conference season, the Albion basketball team looked like they were in position to contend for the SUNYAC regular season title and take a step closer to automatic qualifications for the NCAA Tournament.

The Brownhuts defeated the Lakers 98-57 on Wednesday night, and followed it up with a 101-50 rout of the Oswego Express on Friday night. The Owls were going away, 13, after leading Albion, who played well in both games, to a 73-35 victory. Despite being up 21, the Owls were only outscored by 23 in the second half. Albion's defense has been so strong that they haven't lost in 1997.

"We've put up a good defense and that's been our focus," said coach John Prusak. "We've been very good at keeping our turnovers down."

In the three games this season, the Owls have been held to an average of 45 points per game. They scored the most points, 57, against Albion.

"We've played well against them," said Prusak. "They've been very good defensively and they've been very good at holding the ball up."

The Owls have played well against the Owls in the past two games, but have struggled against the Owls in the past three games.

"We've played well against Albion, but we've struggled against Albion in the past three games," said Prusak. "We've been very good at holding the ball up and keeping it from the Owls."
Budget Priorities Change As Fields Examine Plan

By Norah E. Lampman

Field administrators reviewed the President's budget proposal at a meeting Tuesday night. The administrators plan to present their own budget to the Board of Trustees on or before February 25.

The major priority of the budget proposal is the field's financial situation, which has improved significantly over the past year.

The budget includes a proposed reduction in the number of full-time employees, which would result in a savings of approximately $500,000.

The administrators plan to present their budget to the Board of Trustees on or before February 25.

Robbery Attempted at Tappan

By Bryan Hallock

A Tappan man reported to the police that he was robbed at gunpoint in his home on Monday night.

The victim, James Smith, said he was awakened by a noise and found a masked man in his bedroom.

The man demanded money and threatened to shoot Smith if he did not comply.

Smith was able to escape and call the police. He was not伤害.

The investigation is continuing, and no arrests have been made.

SUNYA Title IX Status Receives Self-Evaluation

By Susan D. Davis

The SUNYA board of trustees have received a report on the university's Title IX compliance.

The report found that the university is in compliance with Title IX regulations, and no further action is necessary.

The report also noted that the university has taken steps to improve compliance, including the establishment of a Title IX coordinator and the development of policies and procedures.

The university will continue to monitor compliance and take additional steps as needed.

Two Green Buses Put to Pasture

By Mark Gromek

Two green buses will be retired from service at SUNYA, according to a university official.

The buses, which were purchased in 1980, will be replaced by new, more fuel-efficient models.

The old buses will be sold for scrap.

The university plans to continue using green energy sources for transportation.

State Quad Race Highlights SA Replacement Elections

by Michael Kostanski

State Quad race highlights for SA replacement elections in the March 12 Student Assembly elections have been announced, according to a spokesperson. The candidate for the number two SA replacement seat, Peter Stamos, is running on a platform of increased funding for the Student Assembly.

"The Student Assembly needs more funds," said Stamos. "We need to increase the amount of money available to the Student Assembly to ensure that we can provide quality services to the students." Stamos added that he plans to increase funding for the Student Assembly by increasing the student fees.

On the other hand, candidate John Smith is running on a platform of reducing the size of the Student Assembly. "The Student Assembly is too large," said Smith. "We need to reduce the size of the Student Assembly to ensure that we can provide quality services to the students." Smith added that he plans to reduce the size of the Student Assembly by reducing the number of Student Assembly members.

The elections will be held on March 12, and students are encouraged to vote.

New Paltz Marijuana Crackdown Begins

by Michael Kostanski

The New Paltz Village Board has passed a new law that makes marijuana possession and use illegal. The law was passed unanimously on Tuesday night.

"This is a step in the right direction," said Village Board member Susan Brown. "We need to protect our community from the dangers of marijuana use." Brown added that the new law will help to reduce the amount of marijuana use in the village.

The law makes possession and use of marijuana a misdemeanor offense. Violators will be fined up to $500 and will have their marijuana confiscated.

Budget Changes

The budget changes are expected to save the city $33,000 in the current fiscal year and $300,000 in the future. The changes include cuts in the city's domestic violence shelter, the city's youth center, and the city's senior center.

"We are making difficult decisions, but we are committed to maintaining our services," said Mayor Robert Johnson. "These changes will help us to balance our budget and continue to provide services to our residents." Johnson added that the city will continue to look for ways to reduce costs and improve services.

Several city departments will be affected by the budget changes. The city's police department will see a decrease in funding, and the city's fire department will see an increase in funding.

The city's budget is expected to be approved in the next few weeks. The city council will consider the budget at its next meeting.

SR-56 $109.95

If you want an incredible slide rule calculator that's also programmable, then this is the one for you.

The SR-56 has 74 programmed functions and operations. And it has ACS, TVH, and algebraic operation systems, the underlying reason is that SR-56 is so power-ful. It's got to handle problems with as many as 9 sets of simultaneous. Talk about memory! An SR-56 has 10 (if you count the W register), and you can do arithmetic with all of them.

But as your first discover how easily it is to program. An SR-56 has 100 memory locations, for your logic function decisions. Four levels of subroutines. Decrease and increase on computer. A cost less registral with the display to make a conditional branch. And this is just the beginning.

Think about it. Can your afford to put off getting your SR-56 now?

SR-S2 $49.95  (New low price)

If you want the computer-like power of a card programmable Texas Instrument, then choose this one.

Techniques like optimization, iteration, data reduction, what-when-where, mathematical modeling, need not out your mind—and your time.

But learning to use it is a hassle, you say. Not true. Pre-programmed programs are gathered into software libraries: Electrical Engineering, Math, Statistics, Finance. All you need to do is load a magic card, press a few keys and you'll get answers that previously required a computer.

You can do your own programs just as easily in just a couple of hours you'll begin to prove what you deserve have—

And there's not a better time to get an SR-56 than right now.

Isn't there any justice?

To the Editor:
I am a citizen of the United States of America, bound in the conscience and principles of justice in this country. I refer specifically to the recent sentencing of Larry Flint, editor of Hustler magazine, to a prison sentence for a 45-day prison term. This injustice is not only blind, it is also incomprehensible. I believe in the Constitution, in the Bill of Rights, and in the principles of justice enshrined in our legal system. Larry's case is a travesty. We should not allow such injustice to continue. It is time for the American people to stand up and demand justice for all.

AUGUST EFFICIA

practice makes perfect

To the Editor:
In a college of approximately 20,000 students, there is bound to be a handful who play musical instruments. Our college has practice rooms available in the PAC for those who play the piano, viola, and flute. How about those who play electric guitars and horns, electronic keyboards, and even more, those who play the drums? There are musicians among us who feel limited by the space to practice. As any person who knows music is extremely important in maintaining your position and developing your skills. Those who play electronic instruments and drums have limited room to practice in this facility. We have tried to reserve practice areas in the PAC, but the rooms are limited to those who are music majors. Anyway, there is no subset of areas where expensive amplifiers can be kept.

inc. com as big as we are, there must be some kind of storage space that isn’t being used. I am sure that the administration would be willing to return this space, a lot of problems could be solved. Right now there is no space for students to practice. Our plaza is bounded on two sides on Saturday and this is ridiculous! No excuse can be given for this problem, which is exacerbated by the smaller size of the rooms. That is why they are empty during the day, where we can have practice sessions. There is no subset of areas where expensive amplifiers can be kept.

The new copyright law passed by Congress last October drastically restricts the use of photo-copied material.

To the Editor:
I was interested to hear about the new copyright law passed last October. I believe that this law is a step towards protecting the rights of creators and artists. However, I am concerned about the impact this law may have on students and researchers who rely on photocopying for their work. I urge Congress to find a balance that protects the rights of creators while still allowing for the fair use of copyrighted material.

Take two aspirin and...

To the Editor:
I am concerned about the rising cost of medical care. It seems like every time I go to the doctor, the bill keeps getting higher. I think that the government needs to take action to control these costs. Perhaps we could consider implementing a universal healthcare system where everyone is covered, regardless of their income level. This would help reduce the financial burden on individuals and families.

Authentically American

By STEPHEN ALMARI

Author of "Authentically American," the first-time author who has been a successful candidate for the U.S. Senate. In his book, Captured, Almari takes a deep dive into the history of American politics, focusing on the early 20th century, when the country was defined by its struggle for progress.

Culpeper, a farmer turned writer, explores the story of a man who, through his own experiences, learned the value of hard work and devotion to the soil. As a result of his efforts, he became a respected figure in his community, inspiring others to follow in his footsteps.

Almari's book is a testament to the resilience of the American spirit and the importance of maintaining a strong connection to one's roots.

NYPRG Battles Those Nasty Banks

By BON DIAMONT

With the help of the New York Public Interest Research Group (NYPRG), state-chartered banks in the Albany area will soon be revealed as they have never been before.

“Revealing” occurs when banks disclose granting borrowers at an unreasonable rate of interest or forbearance on troubled loans, without regard to a person’s credit-worthiness or the circumstances of the borrower. An NYPRG study by the researchers for the group’s special committee shows that many banks are indeed engaging in such practices.

The researchers found that many banks are providing loans at rates that are much higher than what is considered fair. They are also providing loans to borrowers who are not able to repay them, without regard to the borrower’s ability to pay. The researchers believe that these practices are unethical and that banks should be held accountable for their actions.

The NYPRG will be issuing a report that will detail the findings of their investigation. The report will be made available to the public and will be used to pressure banks to change their practices.

Neighborhoods in downtown Albany have been continuously deteriorating due to "redlining" practices by state-chartered banks.

Behind the Closed Door

The Good Judgment Project (GJP) in the light of its conceptual and structural components, must be appropriately applied in an institutional context. On paper, it may be easy to see the potential of the GJP, which provides a clear path for decision-makers and, hence, may appear unattainable. However, theory and practice are not as separate as one would like to think. The GJP may be implemented, in varying degrees, for the benefit of the organization.

The GJP is a systematic approach to decision-making that involves the use of various tools, such as scenario planning, to understand the potential outcomes of different decision paths.

In this article, Schein explains the potential of the GJP and how it can be applied in different contexts, from small businesses to large corporations. He also discusses the challenges in implementing the GJP and provides suggestions for overcoming these challenges.

The article is part of a series on the topic of decision-making and is available on the website of the Good Judgment Project.
The editorial page of the Kingston Journal of February 2, 1977, featured an article by James R. Kilpatrick on the subject of "Socialism by Indirection." Mr. Kilpatrick comments on the success of federal regulations pertaining to the liquor and food industry of the country but suggests that such a study was recently released by the Council on Wage and Price Stability. This article brings in a discussion of the Federal authority's relationship with the Fabian Society of Great Britain. The author then goes on to provide a more detailed account of the Fabian Society, a group which he considers to be more threatening. The editor points out that the Fabian Society has many members who are highly influential in the government and that its influence is growing. The author suggests that the Fabian Society is attempting to undermine the British constitution and that its members are working towards a more socialist society. The Fabian Society is seen as a threat to the stability of the country and its members are seen as working towards a more socialist society. Negotiations in January 1975 for a new copyright law, proposed by Congress and signed by President Ford last October, will go into effect in 1977. It represents the first revision of U.S. copyright law since the original law was passed in 1790.

"The law passed in 1976 is outdated by today's standards," said U.S. Congressman Ned Pattison. Pattison was on the House Judiciary Committee that drafted the legislation. "A copyright applies to all the ways in which people communicate," he said. "Since 1909 there have been radio, television, cable television and the print press; as well as advances in methods of reproduction, such as photostatting.

The new law, expanded to include the exclusive rights of copyright owners with regard to cable television, phonodiscs and computers and information systems, defines what the exclusions of copyright owners are and some of the limitations on exclusive rights, such as the fair use of a copyrighted work in a classroom and reproduction of a copyrighted work by a library.

According to a House report, the general intention behind the four provisions for fair use is to "allow some guidance in determining when the principles of the doctrine apply." The new law, according to the report, avoids exactness regarding rules because there are so many possibilities that can arise, and "there is no possibility of formulating a doctrine in the statute, especially during a period of rapid technological change." The report adds that it is the courts who must apply fair use on a case by case basis. One Congress report on the new law, specific guidelines have not been set that state the minimum standards of education use. The guidelines on educational use are decided on, March 30, 1976, by the Ad Hoc Committee of Educational Institutions and Organizations on Copyright Law Revision, representing librarians and educators, the Author's League of America, Inc, and the Association of American Publishers, Inc.

There is some question as to whether or not these conditions will prevent a college library from placing several copies of a work on reserve for use by a class. "The library operates on a system of one copy for every ten students in a class," said P.J. James Schultz, Director of Libraries at the SUNY Albany Library. "For a large class this could mean over fifty copies. However, he said, "since we make copies of what we already have in the library and since we already have subscriptions and original copies our copying would not be substitute for a subscription or purchase.

Another concern, which was also addressed and had some background in the new law, was that the law is new and specific when it comes to library copying. It may no more than one copy. If the library wants ten copies of an article on reserve or they're going to have to buy the student an additional ten copies. The law limits the distribution of copyrighted materials in the classroom to "fair use." The law limits to one copy for one student in the class. The restrictions on the classroom were also decided on, March 30, 1976, by the Ad Hoc Committee of Educational Institutions and Organizations on Copyright Law Revision, representing librarians and educators, the Author's League of America, Inc, and the Association of American Publishers, Inc.

When determining under the new law if the use of a copy of a work is an infringement of copyright, there are certain questions to be answered. These range from the purpose of using copies, including whether or not the copies are for commercial gain or academic educational use, the nature of the copyrighted work, the size of the portion copied, and the effect the copies will have on the potential market for the work.

"Authors and publishers are in the same position..." the ability of both these groups to sell their works was jeopardized by the rise of rapid copying at low prices. The new copyright law provides for even more stringent standards than those specified above.

When it's 6 weeks into the semester and 54 books have just arrived for a class of 35...it's no time to get filled up.

Lita! Beer from Miller. Everything you always wanted in a beer. And less.
Canning Bottles
Once again, the noble inclinations of man are subverted by his shortage materialistic needs. In other words, it looks like the bottle project just isn’t gonna make it.

It’s unfortunate that one of the largest institutions of higher learning in northeastern New York State cannot muster enough strength to pull its chin above the state law, that it cannot see fit to lead on to the returns issue. Traditionally, the university is a progressive institution — it should not sit back and wait for the state to take action on an issue so central to the environmental causes.

Perhaps the UAS board objected to being called “narrow-minded and anti-environmentalists.” Perhaps the cost of converting to and maintaining bottles really is outweighed prohibitive. But these are arguments for the real world; they would have no place in the free-thinking, risk-taking character of the university. Political and financial arguments should come from Coca-Cola, not UAS.

Strangely enough, after canning bottles for the rest of the campus, UAS has decided to allow the residents of State Quad to decide whether or not the pilot project on State will continue.

Why only State? Why not let the 15,000 miles on the campus who consume all that soda decide exactly how they’re going to consume it? Refereendums seem to be popular these days, eliciting the voice of the people in accordance with the foundations of democracy upon which this great land — and its even greater university system — rest.

The bottle project could be one of the many more moneys lost now beneficially subsidized by UAS’s more profitable operations: another Chuck Cash, so easy.

“I’s a great idea, a noble idea... everyone there was philosophically in favor of returnable bottles,” said S.A. President Steve D’Cennick, member of the UAS Board of Directors, about the State Quad returnable-bottle experiment. Yet, in the final vote, the board was unanimously opposed to returning returnable bottles campus-wide.

The university is supposedly a haven from the pragmatism and materialism of the real world, one of the few places where the flower of studentism can still hture. It may be asking too much, but it would be nice to see the philosophical win out over the falsafy just once.

Women Cagers Defeated In Season Finale

by Cathy Wiegand

The Albany College of Pharmacy and Health Sciences women’s basketball team had a long, tough season. The team concluded it in a disappointing performance Friday, with a 71-39 loss to Siena College in the first round of the NCAA Division III women’s basketball tournament. Although the team had made unprecedented strides this season, the loss was a disappointment for everyone associated with the team.

The loss likely ended the hopes of the Collegetown seniors, who were not the only ones feeling down after the game. Senior guard Paige Saffell said that the team was “just really disappointed.”

Gymnasts Enjoy Weekend

by Christina Bellini

The Academy of the Holy Names, a Catholic school located in Albany, hosted its annual gymnastics meet on Saturday. The meet was held in honor of the school’s 50th anniversary, and it attracted gymnasts from across the state.

The meet featured a variety of events, including floor exercise, vault, beam, and bars. The gymnasts were judged on their skills and performances, and the competition was intense.

The Academy of the Holy Names gymnastics team had a strong showing, with several gymnasts placing in the top ten. The team’s success was a testament to the hard work and dedication of the gymnasts and their coaches.

Runners Take Fourth At Union

by Liza Brown

The Union College women’s cross-country team placed fourth at the NCAA Division III National Championships in New York City on Saturday, November 17th.

The women’s team was led by senior captain Emily Smith, who finished 25th with a time of 25:24. The team also had strong performance from junior Vanessa Perez, who finished 34th with a time of 25:52.

The Union College men’s team also performed well, finishing 12th with a time of 25:32.

Spikers Drop Second Consecutive Meet

by Joe Bevacqua

The College of Saint Rose women’s volleyball team dropped their second straight match on Saturday, November 17th, falling to Manhattan College 3-2.

Although the team was able to win the first set 25-20, they were unable to sustain their momentum in the remaining sets, losing 25-12, 25-23, and 15-13.

Despite the loss, the women’s volleyball team continues to be a strong force in the conference, and they look forward to their next match.

Disappearing Finish For Grappers

The Union College women’s soccer team lost to SUNY New Paltz 4-3 in the final minutes of their game on Saturday, November 17th.

The game was tight, with both teams scoring early in the first half. However, SUNY New Paltz eventually took control of the game, scoring three goals in the second half.

Union College made a comeback in the final minutes, scoring two goals in the last five minutes of the game to make it a 4-3 final score.

Bad Checks Cost UAS Hefty Sum

By Kathleen Sullivan

Bad checks, according to General Manager Robert H. M. Sincavage, cause the school to lose money because the bank returns the checks without payment.

Since July, 1968, the bank has returned checks worth $220,000 for bad checks and 1500 for bad charges.

The bank has a 10% charge for the return of checks, which makes the total loss $220,000.
