The Crisis

The faces of UCC students for the past two weeks have been clouded with worry from an event of the early Americans must have been during the great McKee. Younger Natives wrote of that time; "These are the times that try men's souls." A more temporal event is the mid-term crisis this at State.

We have always noted an attitude of disgust on the part of the student body around mid-semester time, but some have noted such encouragements of purpose as have this year. This is as it should be, although in the past, such encouragement has been missed.

However, this attitude has not affected the student approach towards mid-semester rooms, but participation from extracurricular activities is down. We wonder if this change in attitude is permanent or the kind which will prevail for the remainder of the year. We certainly will not let the spirit which has been a source of attack at this college. Total disinterest, classes and intramural programs will not happen here. Apathy about extracurricular activities has long been a complaint of the students at our school, but this year, this change in attitude is portentous of the kind which is expected to change the outlook of the students and staff at this college.

The reasons behind this attitude are varied and too broad to be covered here. But there is a lack of interest and the desire to "cry over spilled milk." And always remember, "There is another world except for transportation and royalties. The School will be among those schools presently touring Europe. The Student Union has been a source of attack at this college. Total disinterest, classes and intramural programs will not happen here. Stagner to Talk On Psychology

Dr. Edgar W. Stagner, chairman of the State's psychology department, will be the principal speaker at the first of the State's monthly luncheon talks, to be held at noon today in the State Dining Hall.

Dr. Stagner will talk on "Hitch your wagon to a 'growth' industry—and grow with it!

"A growth industry is a new industry in which we are willing to invest our money and other resources. When you set up a company in one of these growth industries, you are virtually guaranteeing yourself success. To find out which industry is right for you, you must first determine whether that industry is growing. There are a few industries which, because of their nature, are doomed to failure. These industries are:

1. Those with a limited market.
2. Those which are not growing.
3. Those which are being replaced by something better.

"If you are going to become a successful business person, you must be able to determine which industries are growing and which are not. This is a difficult task, but it is essential for your success."
