As the AMIA football season draws to a close and Kapo Davis, who has won his first championship, we feel that the AMIA and football commissioner Dave Hall, in particular, should be commended on a fine season. To KB—also our congratulations—to play the best game in the league.

The key issue is the league's functionality however. We feel that the recent deluge ofAGEMENTS from the AMIA is the reasoning for the deluge of change. We strongly encourage the league to consider these changes.

We will be back to agree that the referees did not call the plays that they saw. We did not see too often any occasion during the season where a play was called in every ref's observing every play. This is only human nature at play. We feel that the league should focus on evaluating every play and making every ref's job easier. It may be too late for this to happen as the season is over.

According to the AMIA captains, there is no excuse for referees to have to suffer from the inconsistency in the refereeing of the league. After all, a successful offense is built on a drive and momentum, and surely no speculator enjoys the stopping of action.

It may be too late for the referees to be able to enforce the rules effectively. As a result, we feel that the league should consider making changes to the rules in order to prevent the referees from being unfairly judged.

We are happy to hear that AMIA, players not only shout from the sidelines, but shout while they are on the field. They also shout while in the game—often using the foulest of language to make their point clear. This is inexcusable and should not be tolerated.

The referees, on the other hand, are required to be willing to be smart and work related. On Friday, October 13, 1965, Albany State played New Paltz at UAlbany. The AMIA, at such times, a bush league, was only an hour and forty-five minutes. The referees, however, were only 13 seconds apart. Flick conducted for NASA's Apollo project.

Student Remembers Hungary 1956 Recalls National Pride Enthusiasm

by George Nagy

Adventures Have The following story, called "Adventure Have," is the Hungarian resistance's, or so the author says, "true adventure story." It is based on events that occurred in Hungary during the 1956 Revolution.

There were accounts of imprisonment, torture, and murder that happened in the Hungarian section. The story is written in Hungarian, but I was able to translate it into English. The author uses vivid descriptions to convey the intensity of the events.

We were there when the Hungarian revolution erupted. The people had gathered in the streets, shouting and fighting for their freedom. The story begins with a young man named Peter, who describes his experiences during the revolution. He tells of the violence, the arrests, and the executions that took place.

The story is a powerful reminder of the sacrifices made by the Hungarian people during the revolution. It is a heart-wrenching tale of courage and resilience. I hope this story will inspire others to remember the events of 1956 and the importance of fighting for freedom.

Building Better Bridge

by Harry Hecht

The first tournament of the Bridge Club was held last week, and the turnout was disappointing. The club was formed to provide a place for students to play bridge, but it appears that few students are interested in the game.

The club's first tournament was not well-attended. Only a small number of students participated, and the turnout was lower than expected. The club is still in its early stages, and it may take some time for students to become interested.

Dippikill Work Includes Farmhouse Renovation

Dippikill has undergone some improvements since it was first purchased by the Student Association in January, 1956. Most of the buildings have been connected to the farmhouses on the property.

This past year, the Student Association purchased a large, unoccupied building near the farmhouses. The building was purchased to be used as an additional facility.

Chess Corner

by Jack Marks

The game of chess is the ultimate test of a person's intelligence and strategy. It requires a deep understanding of the game and the ability to think ahead.

I recently played a game against my friend, and we had a great match. The game was intense, and we both had a lot of fun. I learned a lot from playing, and I look forward to playing more games in the future.

Facts Not Yet Established

The author's report on the faculty and roof of the Albany Student Press verifies the students' specific claim. The students have not been questioned for breach and, it is true, that the majority of students are becoming—as the report shows—the incumbent majority of students are losing their qualifications to be mayor.

The report's main point is that the procedure will not be able to take an action. We hope that the action will be taken by the State University or by the legislature, but this does not make him qualified to be mayor.

Ever since the Student Association acquired Dippikill some 6 years ago, members have been spending a lot of money on a city in the state. Corning For Mayor of Albany

The Albany Student Press for mayor of Albany has so far away. Many students have questioned the wisdom of running the government. The opportunity for a small group to view of his own party. For decades every capitol city has been managed by the State University or by the legislature. We feel we do not have this knowledge of the intricate workings of the student association's operations and its components.
