Wrestling Team in Dire Need of Matmen

By J.A.D.

During virtually wrestling season must be faced by the matmen. So far this season, the wrestling team has averaged less than eight men per match. Yet the team has only faced one team that had more than six men in the lineup.

Saying that the team is short-handed would be an understatement. There must be a way for the coaches to lure more members into the sport. Right now, the only answer is to hold the interest of the would-be matmen.

Many schools have coaches that seem to have a knack for attracting members to the wrestling team. Dr. Johnson, head coach at SUNY Stony Brook, has been able to attract more than 20 members to his team.

If you are interested in wrestling, you might want to consider teaming up with Dr. Johnson or similar coaches to see if they can help you get interested in the sport. If you are already on the team, you might want to talk to your coach about recruiting more members to the team.

As I See It

Let's Give the Soccer Team a Break

When was the last time you, you there sitting in that corner behind the trashcan, supported a soccer player? You do know how much it costs to keep the student government going, don't you? Well, we do. In my opinion we have a highly competent crew, one that has the potential to win. However, the pipeline is empty, and the club was able to put up only 13 people.

When boys like Mark Miller, Bob Thompson, and Dave French get out and play, they are not out there just to play for the camera or their own personal glory, they are out there to help themselves and the college.

Last week the students, including myself, rallied the soccer team and its efforts against Bridgeport when only seven of them showed up for the game. With attendance like this, why should the team go out there and really fight to win? You don't really care. You mind when you are not in the crowd.

Why shouldn't you care? You are interested in your talent college. Very few sports attract the interest of the students that your talent college does. The Palaclium Bowling Alleys.

Leonard Directs Saroyan's Comedy; 'Cave Dwellers' Initiates Season

The production is directed by James Leonard, Associate Professor of English, with the assistance of Patricia Fink, Assistant in the English Department.

The play, a recent Broadway success, has a love of love and survival which is said to have ended in laughter and tears simultaneously. This highly dramatic and unconventional comedy takes place in the garage of a self-declared Dante, where three of the characters undergo a change in their lives.

The play is written by the same author who wrote "The Tall T," which has been a success on Broadway.
