Summer Session To Begin July 6

Social Studies Program Follows New Trends

Dr. Roy McCreary, who has been associated with the Department of Social Sciences for over ten years, has announced the program for the summer session that begins July 6. It includes a few courses that are new this year, and some that have been readjusted for increased usefulness in present-day life.

The summer session this year follows the same program of courses and requirements as the regular session, and is open to all students. It also follows the same regulations as the regular session. The greatest change, however, is in the topic of the courses.

Most of the courses to be offered this summer are concerned with the study of business, with emphasis on the economic and social aspects of business. This emphasis is due to the fact that the war makes it necessary to study business from a different point of view than that which has been considered necessary before.

On the other hand, the department has added a course in government and politics. This course will be offered this summer, and will be aimed at those who are interested in the study of government and politics.

The department has also added a course in the history of the United States. This course will be offered this summer, and will be aimed at those who are interested in the study of the history of the United States.

In addition, the department has added a course in the history of the Middle West. This course will be offered this summer, and will be aimed at those who are interested in the study of the history of the Middle West.
