One Man's Opinion

BY FOSTER

"I have come back!" With this simple sentence, which was greeted by a roar of applause, K. D. R.'s motion to end the session was defeated. The motion was brought by a group of students who had been acting up in the assembly. The students claimed that their ends were not being met and that the administration was not doing enough to help them. The motion was seconded by a group of faculty members who were tired of the constant disruptions in the assembly. The vote was close, with the students losing by a single vote. The administration has promised to take steps to prevent further disruptions in the future.

Common Stater

BY JOHN

The Common Stater is the voice of the student body, and it is up to us to make sure that our voices are heard. We are the future of this institution, and we must be heard. The administration has been ignoring our concerns, and we are tired of being ignored. The common stater is the voice of the student body, and it is up to us to make sure that our voices are heard.
